PREFACE

Intimately connected as it was with the Sufic, and many other religious and intellectual movements in Mediæval Persia, Ismailism forms a very important, although an extremely difficult, problem for research. The repeated and severe persecutions, to which the sect was periodically subjected, not only made the literary activity of the Ismailis practically impossible, but also resulted in an almost total destruction of their earlier religious literature, very little of which now remains. Although the student can on many occasions notice obvious traces of Ismaili influence in the different phenomena of the intellectual evolution of Persia, he can never, or, at best, very rarely find reliable and authentic documents to establish the connection as an indisputable fact.

The accounts of the earlier historians and heresiologists are usually of very limited value. Rarely are their opinions based on genuine original documents; and even when such documents were available, the author's religious prejudices or political animosity invariably prevented him from taking an impartial attitude.¹ For this very reason one of the most important problems of research in the Mediæval culture of Persia is to discover, and, when discovered, to make easily accessible, genuine original works dealing with the doctrine of Persian Ismailism.

Very few works of this kind have, so far, found their way into Western libraries, and from them to the press. Most of those that have are works of Nâsiri Khusraw. They represent the earlier phase of the doctrine, prevailing under the Fatimids of Egypt. The doctrine of the Nizari branch which is more important from the point of view of the later evolution of Persian thought, is much less known. Such isolated documents as are available demand corroboration and a careful verification of the statements contained in them.

The task of searching for such documents is very difficult, requiring great energy, persistence, patience, expense, much time, and, above all, good luck. Moreover, even when a hitherto unknown work is found, the discovery may not be of any great help, for in the great majority of cases copies of such works are very poor, full of mistakes and perversions of the text. Furthermore, even when such a work is found, and, after all, corrected and brought into a tolerably satisfactory form, the student is confronted with yet another difficulty, namely, that of finding a publisher for his work ; since it is quite obvious that Ismaili treatises owing to their special and limited appeal cannot have a large sale.

Persian literature includes some of the greatest masterpieces not only of Islamic but also of the world's literary inheritance, both as to form and substance. Students accustomed to these high standards may read the mediæval Ismaili works with feelings of some disappointment. They must appear amateurish, unskilled, unpolished, rustic, unsystematic and stylistically imperfect. The very devotion and high religious exaltation breathing from their pages at times detract from their force and value impelling their authors to adopt a rather strained interpretation of certain verses of the Coran and of ḥadīths, little convincing to non-Ismailis, and occasionally even in conflict with Arabic grammar. We may not admire all this, but the peculiar psychological, social, and spiritual conditions in which these works were composed must be taken into account. It must be obvious that the severely persecuted community of the Ismailis in Mediæval Persia could not produce a large body of highly trained theologians such as were available to the orthodox majority, who enjoyed the patronage of the authorities. It seems rather remarkable that there were any men of learning found amongst them. It is quite possible that many of these authors fully realised their limited qualifications for literary work, and it must have been their devotion and sense of duty alone which gave them the courage to embark on compiling their works for the enlightenment of their less advanced co-religionists.

The Kalâmi Pîr, which is edited and translated in this volume, possesses all the imperfections mentioned above, together with the usual corruptions of the original text which inevitably occur in the works which are repeatedly copied. Notwithstanding all these drawbacks the Kalâmi Pîr is of outstanding importance to the student as it gives the fullest known account of the Nizari doctrine in its purely religious aspect. With the aid of such other treatises as have up to date been published we can now form an idea, based on first hand information, of the doctrine which was preached by the Ismailis of Alamut. We have no longer to depend upon the entirely fanciful and thoroughly adulterated accounts of their doctrine as given by their enemies,—and this, undoubtedly, is a considerable step forward.

Every student of the history and religious evolution of Persia will join us in our feelings of gratitude to the President and members of the Executive Committee of the Islamic Research Association, who, realising the importance of the subject, found the necessary funds for this work to be published, as well as several others. Two of these belong to an early period, namely Haft-bâbi Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ (end of the XIIth c.) and the Matlûbu'l-mu'minîn. The latter is supposed to be a work by Naṣîru'd-dîn Tûsî (first half of the XIIIth c.).¹ Another work, which the Association has published, dates from the middle of the Safawid period (first half of the XVIIth c.), namely the Diwân of an Ismaili poet, Imâm-Qulî of Dizbâd, surnamed Khâkî Khurâsânî²; and, ultimately, a modern work, Risâla dar haqîqati dîn, by Shihâbu'd-dîn Shâh, which reflects the developments of the later period.

Though there are some more Nizari works known, this small collection represents fairly fully some of the different currents in the evolution of the Nizari doctrine. It will undoubtedly help to the better understanding of this most important movement, which for centuries has always been so badly misunderstood.³

In conclusion I have to thank all my friends who have in one way or other helped me in bringing to completion this work, Ismailis just as well as non-Ismailis, and especially the President of the Association, Mr. Ali Mahomed Mecklai, and the Secretary, Mr. Asaf A. A. Fyzee, whose friendly collaboration has been of great value.

INTRODUCTION.

I. THE AUTHOR OF THE TREATISE, AND THE DATE OF COMPOSITION.

1. The Author is not Nâsiri Khusraw.

The title of the work here edited and translated, the Kalâmi Pîr,¹ and even more explicitly, the Haft-bâbi Sayyid Nâsir, as the treatise is also called, implies the fact that the author is the famous Persian poet, moralist, traveller, philosopher, and the well-known Ismaili missionary, Shâh² Sayyid³ Nâsir, or, really, Abû Mu'in Nâsir b. Khusraw Qubâdiyânî, who was born in 394/1004,⁴ in the small town of Qubâdiyân, on the Oxus river,⁵ and died, most probably, ca. 480/1087.⁶ That he was

² The honorary title Shâh is also of Sufic, or rather of darwish origin. It apparently came into general use about the beginning or middle of the IX/XVth c. According to Dawlatshâh Samarqandî, this title was already added to the name of Nâsiri Khusraw in Badakhshan in his time, i.e. the end of the IX/XVth c. See his Tadhkiratu'sh-shu'arâ', ed. Browne, 1901, p. 64. Normally the title Shâh is added by Ismailis only to the names of their Imams, rarely to those of the other saints.

⁴ See Browne, "Lit. Hist. of Persia," vol. II, p. 226.

⁵ This is mentioned not only in the Safar-nâma, but also in his Divân, cf. Browne, "Lit. Hist. of Persia", vol. II, p. 221, and the Divân, Tehran, 1929, p. 297.

⁶ Cf. H. Ethé's article on Persian Literature in the "Grundriss d. iranischen Philologie", vol. II, p. 280. It may be recalled, however, the author of the work is plainly mentioned in the concluding lines of the treatise,¹ and is alluded to in some other passages. In addition to this, the whole of the first chapter is devoted to a supposed autobiographical story of Nâsir's conversion to Ismailism.

The internal evidence of the work itself shows that all this ought to be rejected as purely fictitious. It establishes the indubitable fact that the real compiler of the work was not, and could not have been Nâsiri Khusraw, and that the name of the real author, and the exact date at which he compiled the treatise, are unknown.

The grounds for such rejection are : 1. Striking difference in language, which in the present treatise is fairly modern, probably going no further back than the Safawid period, totally differing from the language of the genuine known works of Nâsiri Khusraw.

2. The presence of numerous glaring anachronisms. Many events, persons, and books are referred to or quoted which only came into existence centuries after the time of Nâsir. These anachronisms are so numerous that they cannot be entirely attributed to occasional interpolation, and often are closely connected with the basic "fabric" of the work.

3. Great difference in the doctrine. This doctrine is quite different, both in letter and spirit, from that found in the known works of Nâsiri Khusraw. It came into existence at least a century after his death.

The unsophisticated Ismailis of Central Asia, mostly hill-men inhabiting the inaccessible gorges of the Upper Oxus, who have preserved copies of this treatise, regarding it as one of the most sacred books of their religious literature, firmly believe that this work records the kalâm, or the "word", of their ancient Pîr, i.e. Nâsiri Khusraw. When the anachronisms which it contains are demonstrated to them, they try to find an escape in the theory that the original version of the treatise was the work of Nâsir, but that in the course of time different people have modified it by introducing different alterations, and interpolating extracts from other works.² that different authors give different dates for his birth and death, varying within very wide limits. The Central-Asian Ismailis, obviously following the pseudo-autobiography, believe that he lived till the age of 140. Though I have seen several Ismailis who have visited the grave of Nâsiri Khusraw in Yumgân, I never could get from them any definite information as to whether there is any tomb-stone recording the date of his death.

² As may be inferred from different remarks in the note by A. A. Semenov in his description of the Ismaili MSS in his collection (Bulletin of the Russian Academy of Sciences, 1918, pp. 2193-2202), he is so much impressed by this story of the Ismailis of the Upper Oxus that Long established religious tradition must always receive the most careful consideration. But such consideration in this case would be misplaced, for it is evident that the trend of ideas of the genuine works of Nâsiri Khusraw is quite different from that in the Kalâmi Pîr. Nâsiri Khusraw flourished under the Fatimids, and in his Diwân refers to some eminent writers of their time.¹ Though his theories in the Wajhi dîn and the Zâdu'l-musâfirîn do not completely agree with the purely orthodox Fatimid tradition,² this, however, does not imply that Nâsir belonged to a different school. It is known that long before him, when the Fatimid doctrine was not yet completely crystallized, there were some substantial differences in the ideas preached by different eminent dâ'is. Traces of some of these are still preserved, as in the controversy between Abû Ya'qûb as-Sijzî (d. 331/942), in his work, Kitâbu'n-nuṣrat, which is a refutation of the Kitâbu'l-maḥṣûl, a work by his colleague, Abû 'Abdî'l-lâh Muḥammad b. Aḥmad an-Nasafi (d. also in the same year, 331/942).³ But though their differences were serious, they were not so deep as to cause a real split. The later efforts of some eminent Ismaili authors, e.g. Hamîdu'd-dîn Aḥmad al-Kirmânî (d. ca. 410/1019), who wrote his Kitâbu'r-riyâḍ, to reconcile both points of view,⁴ indicate that they were not regarded by Ismaili experts of that time as irreconcilable. From the unflattering epithets which Nâsiri Khusraw bestows on Abû Ya'qûb Sijzî,⁵ it is possible to infer that the former probably belonged to the school of the opponents of the latter. This school, most probably, was regarded in official circles as somewhat unorthodox,—this can be seen from the fact that none of Nasafi's works is now preserved by the Ismailis who followed the Fatimid tradition,⁶ while about a dozen works by his opponent are still available. But the works of Nâsir himself, compared with the treatises of his contemporaries in Cairo, show that on the whole he remained closely connected with the main stream of the Ismaili thought of his time.

If we turn to the Kalâmi Pîr, as it is at present, we find that its doctrine is the purely Nizârî system, already fully developed, and far removed from the original Fatimid ideas. The principle which here dominates the whole structure is that he apparently accepts it, regarding the anachronisms which the KP contains merely as later unauthorised interpolations.

³ See the "Guide", p. 35.

⁶ Even the titles of his works are not preserved at present, and it is doubtful whether he really had many to his credit.

of the Great Resurrection, or Qiyāmatu'l-qiyāmāt, which was proclaimed by Imam Hasan 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām in Alamut, and the worship of the Imam of the time. All this differs from what is found in the genuine works of Nāsir. In all of these there is no reference to Nizār, his claims to Imamāt, or to the split which arose after his death, because Nāsir died in his remote Yumgân probably some seven years before the split occurred.

The theory that the work was originally written by Nāsir, but was subsequently modified and expanded by later editors (unless it is admitted that the treatise was completely rewritten, so that almost nothing of the original was left), thus seems quite unacceptable. Traces of the Fatimid tradition and terminology, found in the Kalāmi Pîr, do not permit us to regard them as the "debris" of an original nucleus of the work. On the contrary, they can mostly be traced to different old fashioned works which the compiler perused, probably very indiscriminately, at a late period, when their original implications had already been forgotten.

The theory of such modification also seems highly improbable for other reasons. The present day Ismailis regard the book with great reverence. Surely, he would have been a daring man who would light-heartedly strike out anything from it, or add to it anything of his own, or from others' works.¹ The copies of the Kalāmi Pîr that are available, new and old (the oldest so far known being transcribed about 150 years ago), are all identical in their contents, and even contain no real variants. Occasionally the same mistakes are found in different copies, apparently independent of each other, and coming from different localities. This shows that these mistakes were made at an early period, and were then faithfully transferred from one copy to the other. A similar state of things is found with other known works of Nāsir. A copy of the Wajhi dîn, transcribed some 410 years ago, and another one, almost exactly 200 years old, do not differ from the most recent transcripts except in obviously involuntary errors of the copyists.

It may well be asked : how then does it come about that this treatise is alleged to be the work of Nāsirī Khusraw, and why was the story of his conversion, introduced as the first chapter, added?

It is impossible to find a decisive answer at present. Quite probably, this work, originally composed in Persia, was taken by a pilgrim to Badakhshan, or other Central Asian district where the cult of Nâsiri Khusraw was very strong. Noticing that the work contained references to Imam Mustanşir bi'l-lâh,¹ someone "guessed" that the treatise, written in the time of Mawlâ-nâ Mustanşir, in which the name of the author was not given, must surely have been the work of the famous contemporary of that Imam, the "Shâh Sayyid Nâsir".² Once such a conjecture was made and accepted by others, it is quite possible that the same person, or someone else, who knew the pseudo-autobiography of Nâsir (which probably was written about the end of the X/XVIth c.), added an extract from it, in the form of the first chapter, which is quite irrelevant in this work.³

Possibly the modifications were introduced here for the purpose of taqiyya, in order to protect those in whose possession the work might be found by fanatical persecutors: it would be safer to attribute it to the famous ancient saint, who was revered not only by the Ismailis, but also by Sunnites⁴ and Ithna-'asharis.

It must be noted that with all this there is no reason to treat the Kalâmi Pîr as a "fake". The work obviously was composed by a devoted and highly inspired Ismaili, whose thorough knowledge of his religion is beyond doubt. Whatever was the real reason or purpose of the introduction of the portions connected with Nâsiri Khusraw's authorship, they do not detract from its importance and value as a genuine document concerning the evolution of Ismailism.

² Such references to Mustanşir bi'l-lâh, obviously the Second, are found on pp. 67 and 103 of the text. Both of them are found in the corresponding places in the Haft-bâbi Abû Ishâq, and thus most probably belong to the original version.

2. The autobiographical Story of Nâsiri Khusraw.

The story of Nâsir's conversion to Ismailism, after his meeting with Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, i.e. Ḥasan b. aṣ-Ṣabbâḥ,¹ his visit, in the society of the latter, to the court of Imam Mustanṣir, etc., which forms the contents of the first chapter, comes into conflict with all that is known about the history of the movement, and the biographies of these two great Ismailis. With regard to the chronology of the life of Nâsiri Khusraw only scanty information is available; but, as it comes from his own works, it is, most probably, reliable. The biographical data of Ḥasan b. Ṣabbâḥ, also very incomplete, come from the Sargudhashti Sayyid-nâ, a biographical work, which is now probably lost. It was undoubtedly compiled by an author who knew Sayyid-nâ's life well, and, most probably, based his work, at least partly, on his patron's personal narrative. There is therefore no doubt that the few dates which are preserved in the extracts made by early Persian historians, are, on the whole fairly reliable. These show that the story contained in the first chapter of the Kalâmi Pîr is chronologically impossible.

It is significant that this tradition makes Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ the senior and more important of the two. Ḥasan b. Ṣabbâḥ was the founder of the Ismaili power in Alamut; he was to a great extent responsible for the reformation of the religious system, was the "Jesus of the Great Resurrection",² who "forty years before its advent blew the first trumpet heralding it",³ etc. On the other hand, for an ordinary Persian Ismaili, Nâsiri Khusraw was merely a provincial dignitary of a remote and almost fabulous province of Badakhshan, whose real part and works were soon forgotten outside Upper Oxus districts. It is quite intelligible, therefore, why in popular legends Nâsiri Khusraw, who in reality was something like fifty years older, appears as Ḥasan's junior.

The opening lines of the story given in the first chapter literally agree with the account given in the Ātash-kada'i Ādhar, the well-known biographical work on Persian poets, by Lutf-'Alī Beg Ādhar (comp. in 1180/1767). His biography of Nāṣir is based, as he says, on a risāla, written by Nāṣir himself. In reality, as shown by H. Ethé and E. G. Browne,¹ it is probably based on earlier tadhkiras, such as the Haft-Iqlīm (comp. in 1002/1594, by Amīn Rāzī), or Taqī Kāshī's Khulāṣtu'l-ash'ār, Khūsh-gū's Safīna, etc. (these works, unfortunately, still remain in MS., and are not easily accessible). The legends about Nāṣir probably are quite old, because some of them are already recorded in the Āthāru'l-bilād by Qazwīnī (middle of the XIIIth c.).²

All the data concerning Nāṣir's biography are contained in references found in his own works. So many modern authors have referred to them in their articles on Nāṣiri Khusrāw that they may be safely taken as well-known to all interested in Ismailism. It is well-known how insufficient they are to give a complete account of his evolution. Some of these references, when critically examined, are by no means as simple in their implications as they at first appear. For instance, it is not clear whether Nāṣir was an employee in the revenue department, as the well-known sentence in the opening lines of his Safar-nāma is taken to imply. This work, just as his Dīwān, were obviously intended for the general public as well as for the Ismailis. Accordingly, all references to Ismaili matters were intentionally made vague and ambiguous in order to be understood only by those for whom they were meant. It is possible to understand the sentence in question in the sense that Nāṣir was a collector of the Ismaili religious dues. Further on, his confession about his frivolous life, drunkenness, and then of a sudden "awakening" after a dream, etc., seems too great a contrast with the general tone of his work to be accepted literally, and most probably is a picturesque detail intended for the general reader.

Many details in his further narrative appear very strange when scrutinized. On his journey to Mecca Nāṣir does not join a caravan of pilgrims, as was the usual practice, but goes on his own, accompanied only by his brother and a servant. This method of travelling would be far more risky and expensive in his days, for a pilgrim. Then, instead of taking the shortest route, he makes a long detour via Syria and Cairo. The Safar-nâma contains no direct indication as to his conversion to Ismailism. But if it is accepted that he was a pious orthodox pilgrim at the beginning of his journey, then it must be admitted that his conversion took place during his peregrinations. Again, he is received by the caliph in Cairo, obviously as an Ismaili. Surely, no ordinary revenue collector from abroad on his pilgrimage would interest the king of a large state, at that time in the zenith of his power. It is also possible to think that he was regarded not as an ordinary Ismaili, but for some reason deserved this high distinction. He was a man of mature age, about 45 years old, at the time of his sudden conversion to what he (if he was orthodox) would regard as a heretical sect. This fact, and these distinctions, within only a short time after his conversion, seem strange. The legend adds that he was appointed by Imam Mustanşir as a hujjat, or bishop-resident, of the large and important province of Khorasan. In his own writings there is no explicit indication of this. There is no documentary evidence as to his appointment. This is merely inferred from the fact that in his poems he uses the term "hujjat" (=proof) as his nom-de-plume, probably intended to convey the sense of the "Ismaili bishop". Even if the sectarian tradition is correct (as most probably it is), there is no indication as to whether he really was appointed as a hujjat on his visit to Cairo, or whether his promotion took place later on. It is known that he was for some time working in Mazandaran,¹ but it is not clear whether this refers to the time before or after his journey. It is probably a fact that he spent the end of his life in Yumgân, in the wilds of the inaccessible hill tract of the Upper Oxus. It would be the most surprising place for the residence of the bishop of such a large see as Khorasan, with which he would have to be in constant touch, in case he really had been a hujjat in charge of it.

¹ See E. G. Browne, "Lit. History of Persia", vol. II, 218. It may be added that in the collection of A. Semenov (see his note in the Bulletin of the Russian Academy of Sciences, 1918, pp. 2188-2190) there is a MS., apparently coming from Shughnan, the Safar-nāma'i Nāṣiri Khusrāw, or simply Risāla, which contains the well-known pseudo-biography, and is most probably the Risāla "composed by Nāṣir himself", referred to by Lutf-'Alī Beg, in the Ātash-kada. According to A. Semenov, it completely agrees with the story of the first bāb of the KP, and adds many details, such as Nāṣir's becoming a wazīr of the Fatimid caliph, then a wazīr of the 'Abbasid caliph, then residing in Alamut, etc. I also heard about this Safar-nāma from the sectarians, as also about another work, Gawhar-riz, which describes Nāṣir's travels in Badakhshan.

An explanation of all these strange facts can be found in the theory that Nâsiri Khusraw already was an Ismaili, a trusted servant of the da'wat in charge of the religious funds.

¹ Cf. Browne, op. cit., p. 225. The Bayân-i-Ladqân, by the contemporary of Nâsiri Khusraw, Abû'l-Ma'âlî (wrote in 485/1092), cf. C. Schefer, "Chrestomathie Persane", II, p. 161, attributes the authorship of the Wajhu'd-dîn to Nâsiri Khusraw, who converted to his doctrine many of the people of Tabaristan (i.e. Mazandaran). Unfortunately, he gives no hint as to the date of his activities there. If we accept the hypothesis of his being an Ismaili before his journey to Cairo, which seems quite probable, there is nothing impossible in his having spent a considerable time in Mazandaran, carrying on his propaganda, before he was transferred to his native Khorasan.

before he started on his journey. Then it becomes clear why he preferred to travel alone by circuitous routes, why he came to Egypt, was received by the caliph, and probably was really appointed to some post in Khorasan or Badakhshan.

When Nâsiri Khusraw returned to Balkh after his seven years' absence, on Saturday the 26th Jum. ii, 444/23-x-1052, Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, i.e. Hasan b. aş-Şabbâḥ, was probably not yet born in his native Ray (an ancient town, not far from the present Tehran). In any case he must have been a mere child.

Though his biography is also only very imperfectly known, there are in it not so many hopelessly blank periods as in the case of Nâsir. A very interesting account is preserved in the Ta'rikhi Jahân-gushâ, which was completed in 658/1260, by Atâ Malik Juwaynî, a minister to Hulagu, the Mongol. He was officially deputed to prepare a history of that time, and devoted a long account to the Ismailis. His account of Hasan b. aş-Şabbâḥ is based on the Sargudhashti Sayyid-nâ, mentioned above. This latter work was also used later on by another minister at the Mongol court, Rashîdu'd-dîn, in his Jâmi'u't-tawârikh (completed about 710/1310).

According to the Sargudhasht, Hasan b. aş-Şabbâḥ was originally an Ithna-'ashari, but was closely connected with the Ismailis (who were numerous in Ray). His close association with them, especially with one Amîra'î Darrâb, was accompanied by frequent discussions of the Ismaili doctrine. After a severe illness Hasan, then a lad of 17, became particularly inclined to adopt Ismailism officially, and probably very soon after was formally converted by a local dâ'î, called Mu'min (Jahân-gushâ, 70).¹ Apparently soon after this (unfortunately it is not stated how many years or months later), the chief dâ'î, or, perhaps, the hujjat for that part of Persia, Ibn 'Atţâsh,² came to Ray in 464/1071-1072. He welcomed the talented new convert, and took much interest in him. In 467/1075 Hasan was summoned by him to Isfahan, the residence of Ibn 'Atţâsh, and two years later was sent to Cairo, where he arrived in 471/1078 (Jahân-gushâ, 71). In an interesting passage in the Jâmi'u't-tawârikh, mentioned by Browne,³ which does not appear in the Jahân-gushâ, before his conversion Hasan was "under the influence of Nâsiri Khusraw". The passage is very ambiguous and doubtful in many respects, and may be a later addition by someone. The nature of this "influence" is not clear, whether it was produced by the works of Nâsir, or by personal intercourse. Nâsir visited Ray on his way to Cairo, but there is no information whether he was ever there again before or after that visit. In any case this influence was not great, and Juwaynî completely ignores it.

³ See Browne, op. cit., p. 201, and footnote 4.

The purpose of Ibn 'Attâsh's sending Hasan to Cairo might well be completion of his education, or introduction to the authorities. His visit was not a success. He stayed there only for eighteen months, and was never received by Imam Mustansîr.¹ Ultimately, serious complications arose, and he was exiled to Maghrib. Only a severe storm at sea in which his ship was wrecked near the Syrian coast gave him the opportunity of returning to Persia, where he arrived in Dhû'l-hijja 473/June, 1081.

The Sargudhasht explains his failure owing to his pronounced pro-Nizâr views which were objectionable to the all-powerful Commander-in-chief, Afdal, who supported the candidature of his son-in-law Musta'li, the younger son of Imam Mustansîr.

All this seems very doubtful, and must be an anachronism. In 471/1078, when Hasan visited Cairo, Musta'li was only a child, not older than four. Afdal, obviously, could not have been his father-in-law, and the struggle between the parties of the different princes was scarcely acute. If all the circumstances are considered, it would appear quite probable that there were some other quite prosaic causes for Hasan's failure. He was at that time a young man, probably less than thirty, a poor student from remote Persia,² and had no influential friends to support his case. In a position like his things rarely go smoothly,—irritating procrastination of the officials, apparent indifference and lack of appreciation of the ambitious and enthusiastic young man, etc., would possibly play not a small part in his unsuccessful visit to Cairo.

² In the Jâmi' u't-tawdrikh (see Browne, op. cit., p. 201) is mentioned that he travelled disguised as a carpenter.

It will thus be seen that the story given in the first chapter of the Kalâmi Pîr is purely fictitious, from beginning to end, and we may safely reject it.

The same applies to the other details of the first bâb. A modest, sober-minded, and clever man, such as Nâsirî Khusraw appears in his genuine works, especially his Safar-nâma, would never write such a bombastic, boastful, exaggerated, sentimental, and utterly incoherent account as this, with all these plainly fictitious details about his "900 tafsîrs" which he studied, etc., intended to strike the imagination of the reader. Though quite worthless, the first bâb is included into this edition only in order not to interfere with the entirety of the work.

3. Haft-bâbi Abû Ishâq.

It was mentioned above that (as far as it was possible to ascertain), different copies of the Kalâmi Pîr do not contain real variants.¹ The difference between them is mostly confined to different degree of carelessness with which the copy is transcribed, and the extent to which the Arabic quotations, which are found in the treatise, are perverted. After the text edited here was already printed, I received a Manuscript copy of another Ismaili work which is called Haft-bâbi Abû Ishâq, i.e. "The Book of Seven Chapters" by Abû Ishâq.² A collation of our text with this work gives most interesting results.

Who was this Abû Ishâq, and when did he live? This remains a mystery, in spite of all efforts to collect information. It is not even certain whether this book is really to be attributed to him. The Central-Asian Ismailis, from whom the original copy was obtained, do not take any interest in such matters. There are, so far as known, at least three works under the designation of Haft-bâb :—of Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, of Abû Ishâq, and of Shâh Sayyid Nâsir. The first was published in the same series as the present work, and does not appear to be a work of Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ. The last one, which is the subject of this volume, has nothing to do with "Shâh Sayyid Nâsir". It may therefore be averred that the third one is likewise wrongly attributed to Abû Ishâq. Moreover, amongst the faithful some attribute to him quite a different Haft-bâb, namely that which is referred to under the name of Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ. It is hopeless to find a way out of this impasse. Every sectarian has his own ideas, and is confident that his statement alone is true. Most probably, as it seems, there really are, or at least were, some works which were really the products of these three authors, but it is now impossible to find which is which, and probably the three which we possess now have nothing to do with them.

If we compare our treatise with the Haft-bâb of Abû Ishâq, we find that they differ in some parts, agree more or less in others, and in some portions coincide literally. The first chapter of Abû Ishâq's work, dar ithbâti râhi haqq wa ahli bâtil, is a literal quotation of the whole of the second bâb from the Haft-bâbi Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ,¹ thus taking the place of the autobiography of Nâsir which forms the subject of the first bâb in our text. All the other six bâbs have the same headings as the bâbs in this work, and, from the end of the third, agree more or less literally in both versions. The second bâb in our version covers, in different phraseology, the contents of the first and the second bâbs in Abû Ishâq's version.

If we analyse their contents, we can see that some portions of the Kalâmi Pîr are omitted in the HBAI,² and that these almost invariably are obvious quotations from different works, even when there is no explicit statement to this effect. Some quotations appear in both. Very rarely there are what may be regarded as quotations, which appear in the HBAI, but are not to be found in the KP.³ Thus there is no doubt that we have here to deal with two different versions of one and the same work. There may arise many questions as to which version is the original, how the difference has appeared, and when and for what purpose it was introduced.

² Henceforward the following abbreviations are introduced: KP for Kalâmi Pîr; HBAI for Haft-bâbi Abû Ishâq, and HBBS for Haft-bâbi Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ.

³ They are usually short, and it is not easy to find when they really begin and where they end. The most important of them, apparently from an old Ismaili source, is the one which gives some details of the ceremony of the proclamation of the Qiyâmatu'l-qiyâmât in Alamut by Imam Hasan 'alâ dhikri-hî's-sakâm. It is given here in an Appendix (see p. 115), and translated in the footnote on pp. 60-61.

Before taking up this matter it would be as well to give a list of the more important anachronisms in this treatise which must go to show that the work cannot be by Nâsirî Khusraw :

1. Numerous references to Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, to some of his works, to the Qiyâmatu'l-qiyyâmât, etc.,—all of which belong to the beginning and the middle of the VI/XII c.

2. Numerous quotations from the Haft-bâbi Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, which was composed about 596/1200.

3. A reference to the commentary on the Nahju'l-balâgha, by 'Umar b. abî'l-Ḥadîd al-Madâ'îf (d. 655/1257).¹

4. References to Naṣîru'd-dîn Tûsî (d. 672/1273), and apparently to his work, the Rawḍatu't-taslîm.²

5. On p. 22 (text) it is stated that more than five hundred years passed since the last Ithna-'ashari Imam "disappeared" in 260/874, thus indicating the date about 800/1398.

6. Verses of Hâfiz Shîrâzî are quoted (d. 791/1389).³

7. The 'Umdatu't-tâlib (fî nasab âl 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib), by Aḥmad b. 'Alî Ibn 'Inaba (d. 825/1422) is referred to on p. 75 (text).⁴

8. Many extracts are given from the Ṣaḥîfatu'n-nâẓirîn, by Sayyid Suhrâb (?), who completed it in 857/1453.

9. Imam al-Mustanṣîr bi'l-lâh (II), and his son, Salâmu'l-lâh are referred to on p. 67 (text). They flourished, most probably, about the end of the IX/XV c.

10. A quotation is given on p. 44 (text) from the well-known Latâ'ifu't-tawâ'if, composed soon after 933/1527 by 'Alî b. Ḥusayn al-Wâ'iz al-Kâshifî (d. ca. 939/1533).⁵

The difference between the two versions chiefly consists in their attitude towards the Ithna-'ashari ideas. The author of the Kalâmî Pîr seems to be strongly under their influence. In his first bâb, apparently entirely derived from the pseudo-autobiography of Nâsir, which most probably comes from Ithna-'ashari circles, he particularly stresses the supposed descent of

³ So far it has only been possible to identify one, on p. 73 (text).

Nâsiri Khusraw from the Imams of the Twelvers. He invariably styles Mûsâ Kâzim, Hasan 'Askari and others as Imâm, contrary to the views of the Ismailis. On three different occasions he introduces the quite un-Ismaili conciliatory idea about Mûsâ Kâzim's being also an Imam, though only a temporary acting one (mustawda'), similar to Hasan b. 'Alî. He refers to and freely quotes Ithna-'ashari treatises, such as the Kitâbu't-tawhîd of Ibn Bâbûya, the 'Umdat'u't-tâlib, the Latâ'ifu't-tawâ'if by 'Alî b. Husayn Kâshifi, and apparently several other Ithna-'ashari works, of controversial contents, the titles of which he does not mention. Contrary to what can be observed in old Ismaili literature, mostly produced in Sunnite surroundings, and therefore extremely restrained in its expression of Shi'ite feelings, the tone of the KP strikingly resembles that of Ithna-'ashari literature of the Safawid period. Fierce and prolonged struggle against their Sunnite neighbours inflamed Shi'ite sentiment amongst Persians, so that all restraint in its expression was thrown away.¹ The Kalâmi Pîr is also more generous in poetical quotations, than early Ismaili works,—also a sign of a later fashion in literature; these quotations again are in the same ultra-Shi'ite tone of the Safawid period.

The Haft-bâbi Abû Ishâq is more moderate in its tone. Except for the Latâ'ifu't-tawâ'if, and a few other unidentified works from which quotations are added into the KP, the works that are quoted in these two versions are the same, only in the HBAI these quotations are shorter and "smoother" than in the KP. As mentioned above, the pseudo-autobiographic story of the first bâb, and all references to the authorship of Nâsiri Khusraw are absent here. The only reference to him is contained in a single line which mentions that he travelled to Egypt at the time of al-Mustansir bi'l-lâh (I).²

Thus the impression is left that the HBAI may be the original version, composed not earlier than the end of the IX/XVth c., but later on, probably towards the middle of the X/XVIth c., under the Safawids, it was remodelled, expanded, and attributed to Nâsiri Khusraw, for the purposes of taqiyya, or, perhaps, out of a sincere desire to bring about a sort of reconciliation between these rival Shi'ite sects, the Ismailis and the Ithna-'asharis. The passages which were introduced from the different Ithna-'ashari works change nothing in the Ismaili doctrine, but might be useful to bridge the differences between the two rival religions.

² The passage is quoted in the footnote 8 on p. 43 of the Translation.

The matter, however, cannot be left here: an examination of the language of both these versions shows that the language of the HBAI is, on the whole, more modern than that of the KP.¹ This feature is so pronounced that the question may arise whether the HBAI is a more modern rendition of the KP itself. This is, indeed, quite improbable: it would be necessary to believe that some two hundred years or so ago there was such a critically minded, tactful, and moderate editor who would notice the anachronisms of the version, the exaggerations of its controversial tone, and would draft a new version which would give the substance of the book, without much of its undesirable heterogeneous elements.

The only probable theory which may be suggested is this: both these versions do not represent the original redaction of the treatise. This, most probably, had only six bâbs, was compiled not earlier than the end of the IX/XVth c., and was probably more archaic in its contents. It was subsequently revised in Persia, and, in order to bring it into a perfect form, the seventh bâb was added at the beginning. To accomplish this the editor added a new bâb, which was taken from the Haft-bâbi Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, namely its most important second bâb, the language of which was in some places modernized.

Some other editor, perhaps in Central Asia, produced another version by adding to the original (which was to some extent modified), the story of Nâsiri Khusraw's conversion, references to his authorship, and different other quotations, and this new version came to be described as the work of Nâsiri Khusraw.

¹ Here is a specimen of how one and the same sentence is given in these two works. KP (p. 48, line 12): chunân dar Khudâ mustaghriq shuda bâshand ki juz Khudây-râ hich na-binand wa nâ-dânand. In HBAI: chunân dar Khudâ'î-yi Khudâ mustaghriq bâshand ki ba-juz Khudâvandi Ta'âlâ kasi digar hich na-dânand wa na-binand. In some places, in Persian translations of the Arabic passages which are quoted here, the language of the KP is much more antiquated than in the HBAI, but it is not easy to find whether the translation belongs to the compiler or is quoted by him together with the Arabic passage. For instance cf. KP (in an omitted passage): agar û pish uftâdi man tâbi'î û shudamî agar man bar angikhta na-shudamî . . . (û) bar angikhta shudî, etc. In HBAI: agar û pish mi-uftâd nâ-châr bâyad man tâbi'î û shudam agar man bar angikhta na-shuda budam . . . (û) mi-shud. In many places (in the second half of the work) the text agrees literally, and yet here and there the HBAI shows traces of modernization of the language. It is difficult to decide how far this tendency belongs to this individual copy only, or is a feature of the work itself.

In order to make the relation between these two versions clear, it may be represented here in tabular form :

(Unknown Original Version.)

(It was composed in the end of the IX/XV c., had only six bābs, and was shorter than new versions.)

Haft-bābi Abū Ishāq.
(The original version was slightly abbreviated, a bāb was added from the HBBS, namely the second, which is made the first here. Language modernized.)

Kalāmi Pîr.
(A new bāb, containing the story of Nāsiri Khusraw, is added to the original, together with many quotations from various Ithna-*‘*ashari sources.)

The presence of so many quotations from Ithna-*‘*ashari sources in the Kalāmi Pîr, and clear traces of the strong influence of their ideas, can be attributed to different causes. It is possible that the compiler, and especially the final editor, had very few genuine Ismaili works at their disposal, as the Ismaili literature, most probably, was already scarce and difficult to obtain in their time. Another cause may be this: it was a general practice among Persian Ismailis, in modern times, and, most probably in Middle Ages, to send their boys to Ithna-*‘ashari schools. The Ismaili community, almost exclusively consisting of peasants living in remote corners of their arid country, could not afford to have schools of their own, even if there had been no restrictions and persecutions. Under circumstances such as these, proper education could only be received at the schools of the majority, i.e. of the Ithna-‘*asharis. It is quite obvious that those boys who received such education would quite involuntarily preserve many of their school ideas during the whole of their lives, and this was most probably the case with the final editor of the Kalāmi Pîr.

Once the version was thus "discovered" and introduced to readers as a work of Nāsiri Khusraw, it was probably never altered, and all copies preserve it in exactly the same condition in which it was left by the last editor. The reverence in which the great ancient Pîr was held, guarded it against all attempts at alteration, as well as correction of the gradually accumulating errors and perversions of the text.

II. THE DOCTRINE OF THE Kalâmi Pîr.

A voluminous monograph would be required to analyse adequately all the ideas which either form the main subject of the Kalâmi Pîr, or are referred to in connection with them. The work is extremely unsystematic, probably owing to unskilled remodelling, or to haphazard interpolations. Subjects very often are changed abruptly, or left unfinished; sometimes the author repeats the same matter again and again; at others he deals with some other idea in several different places. Therefore it is not always easy to follow his arguments, or to form at once a complete idea as to what he really intends to convey to his readers. It would be difficult to devise a method for introducing even the minimum of system into the work; perhaps the only way that can be suggested is to rewrite the whole work anew.

As the space here available is limited, it is only possible to offer a few notes on the basic ideas of the Kalâmi Pîr, intended to assist the reader. These notes are intended to form a kind of systematized table of contents, giving a survey of what the work contains on each of the fundamental dogmas of Ismailism, with as little comment as possible. For details, and for all secondary matters which the work contains, the reader is referred to the original text, or its translation, which may be perused with the help of the indexes.

So far as it is possible to ascertain, no genuine documents belonging to the transition period between the purely Fatimid and the fully developed Alamuti doctrine have been preserved. The works of the Fatimid period which are still preserved by the Musta'lians of India and the Yaman,¹ will, when carefully studied, probably yield ample information as to the dogmatic basis on which the Nizari reformers started. After the date of these works there is a large gap in our information, and the earliest known Nizari works date from the end of the twelfth c., i.e. from the period a hundred years later. It is therefore not possible to follow how a purely dynastic dispute led to a deep split in the doctrine of the sect, or to find who were the real reformers and initiators of the new ideas. It is not even possible at the present time to determine whether the Nizari reforms were grafted on what was hitherto the perfectly orthodox Fatimid doctrine, or whether the movement was based on the ideas of a local extremist section of Persian Ismailis which till that time remained in obscurity.²

¹ For the list of the works belonging to Fatimid literature see W. Ivanow, "A Guide to Ismaili Literature" (Prize Publication Series of the Royal Asiatic Society, No. XIII, London, 1933), especially pp. 29-51.

² It is a well-known fact that some tenets of the Nizari, i.e. the reformed doctrine are already attributed by different historians and

The period of transition can be roughly fixed between the date of the death of Mawlâ-nâ Mustanşir in 487/1094, and the year 559/1164, when the reformation was already an accomplished fact, and was officially proclaimed in Alamut by Imam Ḥasan 'alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm. Musta'lian sources (usually quite unreliable when they refer to Nizari affairs) make Mawlâ-nâ Nizâr himself responsible for the reform,—the "objectionable innovations" (bid'at).¹ So far as it is possible to ascertain, however, there are no indications in Nizari literature to Nizâr's activity as an author, or to his being the initiator of any special doctrine. Thus it may be safely accepted that he cannot be regarded as the real author of the reform.

Similarly it is somewhat doubtful whether the part of reformer can be entirely ascribed to Ḥasan b. aṣ-Ṣabbâḥ, in spite of the definite allegations of various Persian historians and heresiologists, who are quite conscious of the difference between what they call ad-da'watul-qadîma, or old Fatimid da'wat, and the new religion, ad-da'watul-jadîdah, the reformed school.² There are numerous short quotations from the works of Ḥasan b. aṣ-Ṣabbâḥ³ and from those of Imam Ḥasan 'alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm, heresiologists to the earliest Ismailis, and Qarmatians. Such are extremist ideas about the Imams, the idea of cancelling all outward obligatory forms of worship, etc. All these ideas, attributed to early Ismailis, may be in reality transferred by later historians into earlier periods either intentionally, or owing to their carelessness or the lack of the sense of historical perspective. It is, however, highly probable that such extremist tendencies always existed in Ismailism. There are in Fatimid literature traces of the struggle which the official circles had to carry on against them; the case of the split of Druzes, in the beginning of the V/XIth c., shows how serious some of them were.

scattered through Nizari literature.¹ Perhaps there are also many quotations which are not duly acknowledged. None of their works is so far known in its entirety. It would seem, from the quotations which are known, that the ideas of Ḥasan

p. 11 (orig. MS.), concerning Jesus and Ma'add; p. 20 (rites accompanying the proclamation of the Qiyāmat); 26 (love for sanctity); 29 (Turks are Jinns); 30 (see above, the same as KP 92); 35 (commandment to help friends). Most probably some of the quotations, which are simply marked as taken from the Fuṣūli mubārak, may also belong to him. For instance, the quotation from these fuṣūl, found on p. 59 of the KP (a dispute between a Daylamite and orthodox in Isfahan) literally agrees with a passage in the HBBS, p. 5, line 15 to p. 6, line 2 (of the edition). Thus it seems possible that in reality this is not a quotation from the HBBS, but from the original treatise by Bābā Sayyid-nā. There may be some more quotations from him in the Faṣl dar shindākhti Imām wa Hujjat (Mem. of the As. Soc. of Bengal, vol. VIII, 1922, pp. 13-24), in the Rawḍatu't-taslim, etc. Cf. also the "four faṣls" by Bābā Sayyid-nā, referred to by Shahrastani in his K. al-Milāl wa'n-nihāl (Cureton, 118-9).

¹ The Fuṣūl, attributed to Imām Ḥasan 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām, and the isolated quotations from him (mī-farmāyad . . ., or some other expression), are much more frequent than those from Bābā Sayyid-nā. In our work there are quotations from his address (khufba), on pp. 65-66, probably delivered by him on the proclamation of the Qiyāmat, followed by a few shorter quotations (p. 66). On p. 63 there is another interesting quotation (about "killing the death"). On p. 90 are given three passages from the Fuṣūli mubārak (on "relativity", idāfat, and on the possibility of seeing God at the Qiyāmat). All three are found in the HBBS, pp. 26-27, where they are attributed to him. In the HBBS quotations are found on p. 15 (Faṣli mubārak); on p. 16 (from the khufba, attributed to 'Alī himself, most probably quoted by Mawlā-nā), the prophecy about his coming to establish his throne in Egypt, then in Daylam, etc. (cf. also p. 18; also in the 26th taṣawwur of the Rawḍatu't-taslim, fol. 112v); p. 18 (about the division of the Imams into groups of ten: arwāṣiḍ, to Taqī Ahmad; Imāmān, to Mawlānā Nizār, "who was the 19th or 20th"; and Qā'imān, after him); p. 21, reference to an epistle addressed to Ḥusayn b. 'Abdī'l-Malik (perhaps a son of 'Abdu'l-Malik b. 'Aṭṭāsh?); 21-22, another epistle, to Qāḍī Mas'ūd; 22, another epistle (faṣl), to Amīr Ḥaydar son of Mas'ūd (perhaps the son of the preceding?); 23, an epistle in Persian (Faṣl ba-Fārsī); 23, another quotation, in Arabic; 26-27, as mentioned above, are the same as KP 90; apparently the quotation which is given on p. 28, from a Faṣli mubārak, also belongs to Mawlā-nā; 30, on shakhṣi ṣawāb and shakhṣi 'adhāb; 33, on eternity of union with God at the Qiyāmat; apparently to him belong the quotations given on pp. 33 and 35. A very interesting quotation from a Faṣli Tāzī (i.e. in Arabic) referring to his (Ḥasan's?) birth, with references to Khudāwand Muhammad, Khudāwand Ḥasan (i.e. 'Alā'u'd-dīn and Jalālu'd-dīn of Alamūt?), and a mention of Ḥasani kabīr (i.e. Ḥasan 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām?). There are many references to him in the Rawḍatu't-taslim (ascribed to Naṣīru'd-dīn Ṭūsī); most probably the latter work contains many quotations from Ḥasan's fuṣūl, though it is very difficult to identify them, or to find where such quotations begin and end, as they are not directly acknowledged. Most probably the majority of references to fuṣūl in general (without the mention of the name of the author) are in reality quotations from the works of Ḥasan 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām, such as in the Faṣl dar bayāni shindākhti Imām, mentioned above, and in the Maṭlūbu'l-mu'minin (which is lith. together with the HBBS).

b. aṣ-Ṣabbāḥ scarcely differed much from Fatimid dogma.¹ Information derived from Ismaili sources, and preserved by some Persian historians, as in the case of the Sargudhashti Sayyid-nâ which was perused in the Jahân-gushâ and the Jâmi'u't-tawârikh, represents Sayyid-nâ as strictly observing the rules of the sharî'at. So much so that he even executed his own son for such a comparatively trivial offence as drinking wine.²

Accordingly, it can only be assumed that the real initiator of the religious reform was Mawlâ-nâ Ḥasan 'alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm. This conclusion is supported by many quotations from his works, though how far his reform had actually gone, cannot be accurately gauged.

The deplorable scarcity of available Nizari literature,³ and its amateurish and eclectic character in general, can only be attributed to the disorganization, and later on disappearance of an organized priestly class. Although priests are often a great impediment to the healthy evolution of a nation, yet in a small isolated community, often subjected to persecution, organized priesthood affords the only means of preserving the continuity of religious and cultural life. The Nizari reform contributed to the change from the state of a highly organized church, not dissimilar to that of Catholicism, to a complete democracy under a Divinely appointed hereditary head, the Imam. For the student of Ismaili literature this must be deplored because it deprived the movement of its highly qualified intellectual leading class, thus upsetting the normal evolution of the literature, the ideas, and the ideals of Persian Ismailis, inherited by them from the earlier periods.

The Kalâmi Pîr, being a late work, very eclectic in its contents, does not reveal much about the history of the reform, or its real extent. The author of this work which was most probably written more than three hundred years after the introduction of the reform, describes the Nizari doctrine as it was preached in Middle Ages. The value of this work, from the point of view of the student, lies in the greater details which it gives of the Nizari system than are to be found in any other known work of Persian Ismailis.

The work is not concerned with philosophical matters and obviously avoids them. The purpose of the author was apparently twofold: to give the necessary instruction to his co-religionists, and to dispel any possible doubt which might arise in the minds of the sectarians who were chiefly recruited from amongst the Ithna-'asharis, or who lived amongst them.¹ The first half of the book deals chiefly with controversial matters, while the second is devoted to dogmatic questions, though both these subjects are not entirely separated from each other.

The controversy, as dealt with by him, assumes a highly acrimonious tone. It is based to a large extent on a rather free interpretation of different verses of the Coran, or on the evidence supplied by tradition, often of purely legendary character. These legends are usually derived from Ithna-'ashari sources, and their exaggerated and excited tone lessens the force of much that is serious and substantial in the Shi'ite claims. It would be quite out of place here to go into the details of these controversial matters, especially as it is impossible at present to separate genuine Ismaili tradition from the Ithna-'ashari point of view, which the author adopts so readily. Accordingly, it is only the dogmatic parts of the treatise, reviewing the basic doctrines of Ismailism, such as those of God, Prophethood, Imamatus, etc., which are dealt with here.

1. God and Creation.

The KP does not give any real formula of the Ismaili creed. Several times (pp. 14-15, 33, 39) it refers to the usual all-Muhammadan formula of shahâdat.² It is written on the arches of the Throne of God (tâqî 'Arsh) (14, 39); it is symbolized by Paradise, and by the Tûbâ tree (33). The Tûbâ is at the same time a symbol for dhâtî Imâm, or Divine Substance of the Imam (105).

The Coranic verses II, 285 and IV, 135 (which contain the rudimentary creed of Islam, i.e. "believing in God, His Angels, His Books, His Apostles, and the Last Day")³ are invariably accompanied by an additional explanation that under the expression "the Last Day" the faithful have to understand 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib, i.e. generally the Imams, who are of the same substance as 'Alî, and are always present in this world (8, 23, 41).

² The formula given on pp. 14-15 obviously is the usual Ithna-'ashari formula, which most probably came in here together with other matters contained in the first bâb. The latter, as mentioned above, is derived from Ithna-'ashari sources.

³ Cf. A. J. Wensinck, "The Muslim Creed", p. 8. Angels are usually explained in Ismaili works as abstract forces, or ideas (cf. the 19th taṣawwur of the Rawḍat'u't-taslīm). Here, in the KP, probably in quotations derived from Ithna-'ashari works, the idea of angel is often taken literally.

The author refutes agnosticism under the form of extreme profession of tanzîh, i.e. transcendence of God, to whom no attributes associated with the experience of the world of senses can be ascribed (58-59). "God has form and qualities, and at the same time has no form and no qualities" (59-60). The author struggles with this difficult thesis¹ and tries to explain that it is possible to know Him through the Imam, who participates in the Divine Essence.² "His ear is the ear of God", etc. (91). The author quotes the well-known, but rather mysterious hadîth concerning the Prophet having seen God at 'Arafât, "riding a camel, and with a red cloak on His shoulders" (60), and also refers to the ancient sacred books and different hadîths in which it is said about God's having created man in His image (60). This, of course, does not mean that God, in all His unconceivable and limitless greatness and glory, can be manifested in a mortal man, Adam (60), but the author seems to understand this in the sense of Sufic pantheism: God, in the forms accessible to man, as through a "veil",³ gives an opportunity to man to understand, feel, and know His being present in the world. In human form generally this "touch with Divinity" is more intense than anywhere; and in the chosen one, the leader of mankind, this attains a very high degree. Only instead of an ascetic, who by practicing austerities and devotion attains such "union with God", the author admits a specially appointed hereditary and eternal "the True Man", Mardi Waql, who is the focus of the Universe, helping mankind to attain the knowledge of God, the Source and the Ultimate Goal of being.

Quite in agreement with these Sufic theories, the purpose of creation is knowledge of God (52).⁴ Man is the most perfect of all creations (52-53, 72), the microcosmos (73, 90); all things are created for him (52).

His nature contains all the elements of the Universe; he develops from the atom, passes through a long evolution, until

² Apparently the best formula for this idea is the well-known passage in the Gospels (St. John, I, 18): "No man hath seen God at any time; the only Son, who participates in the Substance of the Father, hath revealed (the knowledge about) Him".

he becomes a true, but reduced, copy of the world (53-54). In man the element of Divinity is greater than in any other creature (53). It is he who had to take upon himself the immense burden (bâri amânat) of consciousness and responsibility for his actions before God, which was entrusted (amânat) to him (72-73). This clearly implies recognition of free will, though this point is not explicitly formulated, probably because the subject is too subtle and difficult. The term tawhîd, implying the recognition of One Sole Source and Master of the world, is repeatedly mentioned (cf. 28, 79, 80, 85, 102). It is used in more or less the same sense as in Sufism. But the term waḥdat, in ahli waḥdat (cf. 48, 106, 108), has not the Sufic, but the Ismaili meaning, of the Imam and his ḥujjat. It may be noted, however, that in the KP quite primitive Islamic ideas are sometimes apparently accepted literally, while usually they are interpreted in an allegorical sense.¹

2. Religion.

The fundamental Nizari idea of religion is a development of the original Islamic conceptions rather than of the Sufic. The authors of all known Nizari works, including the author of the KP, are never tired of repeating it. The purpose of the existence of the Universe is the realisation of a certain cosmic harmony, in which every created being knows its Creator, knows His Divine Will, and would completely obey it (cf. p. 52, etc.). As one of the phases of this cosmic process, God Himself acts in such a way as to permit mankind to learn about His transcendent Substance, and His Will, which all belong to the realm of Absolute Reality (ḥaqīqat), which is beyond the perception of our senses, and lies outside the visible world. In His limitless bounty, He periodically sends to mankind his special Apostles, who are ordinary men except for the fact that they are endowed with special inspiration (waḥy), which comes directly from God, by direct Divine action, ta'yîd (literally "helping"). When such Apostle finds that mankind is not yet ripe to understand the nature of Absolute Reality, revealed to men, he ceases to endeavour to enlighten them further, and limits his mission to imposing upon mankind a rigid system of social and religious laws,—the sharī'at. This is primarily intended to reduce to a minimum the inevitable mischief which would result from the internecine quarrels the tendency of which is innate in human nature.

¹ Cf. p. 69 (text) where it is said that the story of the Mi'rāj of the Prophet is to be accepted literally. There are also references to Qalam, Kursi, etc., apparently taken from some Ithna-'ashari sources. The story of the angels, worshipping the image of 'Alī on Friday (p. 88), is obviously non-Ismailitic, and may be a later interpolation.

Sharī'at, which is connected with the visible world, to which it belongs, cannot be the Reality. As everything of this world, it is only its zāhir, or outward form, or mithāl, symbol, referred to, or symbolizing the maṭhāl, or bāṭin, i.e. the laws of the transcendent Reality, ḥaqīqat, the hidden foundations on which all is built (55). It is impossible to follow only the tanẓīl, and zāhir.¹ The tanẓīl, i.e. the Coran, also implicitly contains a revelation of the ḥaqā'iq. These, however, cannot be understood by everybody, and are therefore hidden, bāṭin (56-57). The majority of mankind, pre-occupied with their own worldly affairs, are incapable of perceiving these hints as to the nature of the Absolute Reality, but a small minority may be ripe for this. For the guidance of these, and in order to spread the true knowledge, there is always in the world another, permanent, Messenger of God, who participates in the Divine nature. He is fully authorized to convey to mankind this original knowledge, by the revelation (ta'wīl) of the inner meaning of the Divine revealed Message (tanẓīl) which is intended for all, only so much as people are capable of understanding it (57, 109, etc.). The part of the Waṣī (i.e. the Imam) is to complete the work of the Prophet, and to prepare people for the acceptance of the full truth when the next Apostle of God is sent (18, 55, 57, etc.).

The original religion of mankind, fiṭrat (104) is a kind of religious instinct, or pure religious sense, inborn to every one. It is the natural state of the human soul, living in agreement with God's commandments, in unhesitating and complete obedience to Him (114).² What the author apparently tries to express, is this: man, being endowed with a higher faculty,—his reason (and, probably, also freedom of will), must not surrender these his higher faculties to his bestial instincts. If he does so, a conflict with the Divine Will arises, and produces misery and evil. For this reason very few men are spiritually strong enough to recognize God and His Will without special Divine guidance (52, 62, and especially 112). This is why such guidance must always be available in the world, in the person of the Imam. Without it the world cannot exist even for a moment, and is bound to fall into chaos and destruction. Without Divine guidance man's own ideas of God and religion can easily mislead him, thereby taking him further from God instead of helping him to come nearer, and creating an obstacle (113) between man and God, or His world of Reality (89). The same error and corruption enters when man tries to depend entirely on his own reasoning by analogy (which can be necessarily based only on very limited experience); this qiyās, as it is technically called, as also the consensus of the opinion of the community, ijmā', cannot be relied upon. Ismailism completely disregards both these methods in matters of religion.¹

² Cf. about the fiṭrat cf. Wensinck, "The Muslim Creed", pp. 42 sq.

Ismailism, apparently with very few other sects of Islam, develops the dogma of Prophethood into a peculiar system of the religious evolution of mankind to whom God sent His prophets for guidance. There are great and small cycles: the great (dawra'i a'zam, 19, or ta'rīkhi buzurğ, 51), is equal to 360,000 years.² The small cycles are seven thousand years each; they are subdivided into (approximately) millennial periods, at the beginning of which what may be called a founder of a new civilisation appears,—Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, Muḥammad, and the expected Qā'im (14, 57, 64, 65, 73 sq., 102).³ Every great period is started by the introduction of a new religion. This religion, exercising great influence upon mankind in the beginning, gradually loses its original force (55, 69), and is ultimately replaced by a new system. And so it goes on for six thousand years. At the beginning of the last, seventh millennium in the cycle, the promised Qā'im appears,⁴ and introduces the final form of a revealed religion, the qiyāmat,

² It is difficult to find how the Ismaili authors arrived at this particular figure. The whole idea obviously belongs to mystic speculation. No mention is to be found about the circumstances of the preceding dawr of seven millennial cycles, or any other dawrs. Persian Ithna-ʿasharis often ascribe to Imam Ja'far Ṣādiq a book (which I could never find), in which, according to them, the story of the successive "worlds" is told, when the earth was inhabited only by ants, or by other animals, all of which ultimately died, clearing the place for another period. This seems to be quite close to the Ismaili idea of dawrs.

⁴ It is very interesting to note that these periods which are supposed to be a thousand years long, historically seem to be of much shorter duration. Most probably Ismaili authorities knew well that between Jesus and Muḥammad only less than six hundred years passed. In any case, the proclamation of the Great Qiyāmat in the year 559 after the Hijra of the Prophet requires no comments. Moreover, in the earlier phases of Ismailism there are clear traces that there was a tendency to regard as the Sābi'u'n-nuṭaqā', i.e. the seventh Great Prophet, the Iman Muḥammad b. Ismā'il, who died not later than 200 A.H. only. This title is not applied (in all Nizari works that I have seen so far) to Mawlā-nā Hasan 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām, but this seems to be due merely to the fact that the use of the term Nāṭiq was for some reasons discontinued.

which is the same as the haqîqat (here obviously taken in a Sufic sense).¹ Thus the shar'î'at, or zâhir, finds its final completion in the revealed bâtin, which is the dîni qiyâmat (or simply qiyâmat), i.e. the religion of the Last Day. It would be inaccurate to translate the term qiyâmat by "resurrection", in accordance with the all-Islamic terminology, because the Ismaili implications of this term are quite different, and do not include "rising in flesh" and the Judgment. Here the orthodox eschatological ideas are apparently concerned only in so far as the promise that the faithful will see God Himself, in His Real Substance.²

It may be noted that the Qiyâmat which was proclaimed at Alamut by Ḥasan 'alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm, was for some reasons regarded as particularly important, the Great Qiyâmat (Qiyâmatu'l-qiyâmât), being the last one for the first half of the Great Cycle, 180,000 years from its beginning (19, 51).³

At the Qiyâmat God becomes visible to all: He can be seen directly (by naẓar), and no one will need indirect information, received through others (ta'lîm) (112). At that moment, in reality, all will be one: the Qâ'im, the Qiyâmat, the knowledge, the worship, the object of worship, the reward, etc.,—all these will be one and the same thing (112). The faithful will lose their individualities, their consciousness of their own being, and they will see only God (48, 112). This is obviously very close to the Sufic state of fanâ fî'l-Ḥaqq.

The author does not take up the question whether this world is eternal or finite. But judging from the fact that the Qiyâmat proclaimed on the 17th Ramadân 559 8-viii-1164 was the end of only the first half of the great cycle of 360,000 years (51), the matter was not so pressing.

A few words about conversion may be added. Conversion is described as finding the correct spiritual path (92-93) after losing all hope of finding truth in all other religions of the world, except the "rightly guiding and truly guided" one, which the new convert joins. The inner meaning of Islamic forms of worship are explained (94-97) with the help of ta'wîl.

¹ We may note that the doctrine of the Qiyâmat is rarely commented upon in the early Ismaili works, in which the term is used in the general Islamic sense. Only a late author, Sayyid-nâ 'Imâdu'd-dîn Idris, who died in 872/1468, devotes several pages to this question in his Zahrû'l-ma'ânî (cf. "Guide", No. 260).

² About the controversy as to whether God will be seen on the day of Resurrection see Wensinck, "The Muslim Creed", pp. 63 sq. Here it is said that God will be visible as person (mu'ayyan wa muṣahkhkhas, p. 90=HBBS, 27); cf. also p. 112. It is not clear whether the expression "see" should be taken in a literal sense, or allegorical. The work abounds in passages in which it is difficult to see whether the author introduces certain ideas as allegories, or takes them literally.

3. Prophethood (Nubuwwat).

Generally Ismailism, and the Nizari doctrine, as explained in the KP, differ very little from the all-Muslim ideas about Prophethood. It is only in its relation to Imâmat that sectarian beliefs assume peculiar development. The fourth bâb is entirely devoted to this question, especially pp. 54-56; other parts of the book, as pp. 35-36 and 60 are also important.

The Imam is the spiritual guide of the world at every moment of its existence. His absence from the world, even if for a moment, would cause its complete collapse. The Prophet, on the other hand, appears only periodically. Once in a millennium God sends a great Prophet, or Apostle (Rasûlu'l-lâh), for what may be regarded as periodical cleaning and overhauling the social life of the mankind (55, 69). He conveys the message of God, which implies both the zâhir and the bâtin. But, as mankind is not yet ripe to appreciate the wisdom connected with transcendent realities, his functions become limited to introducing new order into the social life of nations. Human nature is so quarrelsome, selfish, and cruel, that without being bound by the strict ties and chains of severe law, the shari'at, the beast in man would easily overpower his higher self, and the inevitable internecine struggle would lead to the complete extinction of the human race (68).

The Prophet who is the "proof of God's existence" (9, 14) with mankind, corresponds with 'Aqli kull, or the Primeval Cosmic Conscious Formative Principle of the Plotinian philosophy in the Universe (57).¹ His "light", or luminous substance of Prophethood, is eternal, and existed before the world was created (104). He was sent by God as His plenipotentiary, ûlû'l-'azm (52). There were so far six great Prophets. The last of them, Muḥammad, declared that after him there would be no more great Prophets. Therefore it is obvious that at the end of his millennial dawr the promised Qiyâmat would set in (69).

All the Prophets descend from one and the same stock (nasl) (26-27, 38); they are called Nâṭiqs, or "Preachers" (68). Their mission in their absence is supplemented, continued, and expanded by the teaching of the Imams. There is, and always was in the world an uninterrupted chain of Imams who continue the work of the Waṣî, or the Executor of the Prophet's will, 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib. The Prophet and the Imam are the same in their substance (84-85). The Great Prophet participates in Imāmat (or walāyat) in addition to his own nubuwwat, i.e. prophethood (86), and thus there is no possibility of these two Divine functions clashing with each other, because they are thus united in one and the same person. Imāmat or Walāyat is regarded as superior to the rank of a prophet in general, and the "light" of prophethood, nūrī nubuwwat, comes from the "light" of Imamat, nūrī walāyat (74).¹ This is why the Imam of the time can cancel the commandments of the sharī'at of the Prophet (ibid.). As they are essentially the same, the Imam, or Asās, as he is called when he co-exists with a great Prophet, does not carry on his preaching when the Prophet is still alive.

Every Apostle starts a new religion, and forms a new civilisation (millat),² cancelling the religion of his predecessor (52, 63). His religion is intended for everybody, and is expressed in language which is intelligible to people generally, without regard to their being educated or not, in parables and allegories (54).

The author unhesitatingly accepts the Islamic belief that Muḥammad is the last and final Messenger of God, the khāṭimu'l-anbiyā' (69); that all his miracles are real, and that his ascension to heaven, mi'rāj, is true (69). Whoever does not believe in these, or disobeys any of the prescriptions of the sharī'at without the permission of the Imam, is a kāfir, and his repentance will never be accepted (69). After the Prophet the authority passed to 'Alī, and from him to his rightly appointed direct descendants, the Imams: whoever does not believe in this is also like a kāfir (70).

4. Imāmat.

A special chapter, the fifth, probably the most important and interesting in the treatise, is devoted to the doctrine of Imāmat: there are also important references to it in other parts of the book.

The "light" of Prophethood, as mentioned above, existed before the creation of the world. The same is the case with the "light" of Imamat, because in reality both are the same (76). 'Alī (i.e. Imam in general) existed before the world was created (36),—this is a favourite subject of many Shi'ite poems.³

² The term millat, usually translated by "nation", "community", etc., in this sense would surely be better rendered by "civilisation": millati Islām can only be translated by "the world of Islam".

³ Many poems of this kind are attributed to Shāh Ni'matu'l-Jāh Walī Kirmānī (d. 834/1431), and a legion of minor Shi'ite poets. This

As an Imam is always present in the world, which cannot exist without him even for a moment (as the Prophet said), it is to be assumed that he was ever-present in the preceding dawrs also, i.e. in the periods of other prophets (115). The memory of the earliest periods, however, is lost, and the Nizaris are only certain about the presence of the Imams from the time of Abraham. After him Imâmat became permanent (lâzim wa wâjib), continuing in his descendants,—dar nasli û qarâr girift (76).

As is well-known, in the time of the Fatimids the title of Imam was not applied to 'Alî himself, who was styled the Waṣî, Walî, Asās, or rarely Ṣâmit. The Waṣî, or the Executor (of the Prophet's will),¹ appears as an official and religious term, while Asās, and especially Ṣâmit, are mostly used in connection with esoteric speculations. In addition to this, Ismailis apply to him the term which can be considered as common to all branches of the Shi'ites,—the Walî. It is very difficult to select an appropriate English term which would convey at least the principal implications of the original; perhaps the best would be "one who stands the nearest" (to God). For the sake of conciseness we may use the expression "the Friend of God" by which the term Walî in this sense is usually translated, warning, however, that "friendship" in this sense is not to be understood as friendly relations between equals (20, 23, 24, 41, etc.).² The author of the KP also uses the expressions Mawlâ, or Amîru'l-mu'minin, which may be regarded as typically Persian, and are very much used by the Ithna-'asharis.³ They are often employed to avoid calling 'Alî by his name, as this would idea is often the motive of the poems of an Ismaili poet of the Safawid period, Imâm-Qulî of Dizbâd, near Nishâpûr, who is known as Khâkî Khurâsânî, and whose Dihân is lithographed and published in this series. But it must be carefully noted that this never refers to 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib as an individual. 'Alî in this sense is merely a name for Imam in general, the Substance of 'Alî, or Imâmat, which during his period of Imanship miraculously rested upon him, just as it rests on every Imam after him, and rested on every Imam before him. Nothing is so wrong as to understand this in the sense of "incarnations", and to mix it up with Indian and other primitive ideas of karma, etc. This is what A. Semenov does in his edition and translation of the Qasida'î Dhurriyya, by Raqqâmî Dizbâdî (not by Khâkî, as stated by him, but by Khâkî's son, 'Alî-Qulî, son of Imâm-Qulî); see "An Ismaili ode on the incarnations of god-'Alî" (in Russian)",—"Iran", vol. II, St. Petersburg, 1928, pp. 1-24.

² Indian Nizaris, i.e. the Khojas, usually avoid applying the term Walî to 'Alî.

be disrespectful.¹ The term Asās here appears probably only in quotations from older works, those treatises which belong to the school of Nāṣiri Khusraw (57, 101, 102, 109); here sometimes it has quite a different meaning, being applied either to the ḥujjat, or, perhaps, da'i.²

As mentioned above, the name 'Alī is sometimes used as a term referring to the Imams in general.³ The term Qā'im, originally used for the promised Messiah, or the Seventh Great Prophet who is to come on the Day of Resurrection, here in the KP is often used instead of Innām.

'Alī is the ulū'l-amr (23) mentioned in the Coran: he is the "Last Day" (8, 23, 24, 41), referred to in the Coran. He is one to whom God has entrusted His own duties (kāri khwīsh) on earth (24); he is the redeemer of the sins of mankind (dūstī-yi 'Alī gunāh-rā mi-khūrad) (88): obedience to him is the same as obedience to God Himself (24), etc. All this is applicable to Imams in general.

The naṣṣ, or explicit and unequivocal appointment of 'Alī as the Waṣī, the Executor of the Prophet's will, was made at Ghadīr Khumm (38, 40, 41), when the Prophet uttered the well-known statements: "'Alī is the lord of all those whose lord I am", and "'Alī is to me as Aaron to Moses".

He is superior to all prophets and saints (74, 86): the purpose of his mission is to "pay the debts of the Prophet" (57), i.e. to complete his preaching of religion, supplementing the lacunae left by the Prophet in his system. To him the faithful must swear allegiance (bay'at) (61): there is no greater offence (ẓulm), and no greater impiety (shirk) than to regard any one as equal to or superior to 'Alī (56). The title Mawlā-nā, "Our Lord", which in the Coran is applied to God (61), can also be applied to 'Alī.⁴

According to the speculations of the early philosophical literature on the ḥaqā'iq, or the prototypes of things in the world of realities, the Asās, or Waṣī corresponds with the Nafsi kull, or the Cosmic Conscious Principle of Animation in the Plotinian system. This is also to be found here (57), though, as has been shown, the KP takes not much interest in philosophy.⁵

¹ To say in Persian simply 'Alī, without the invocation of blessings, etc., is considered very impolite, and to repeat each time all the titles would be too long. It may be noted that in Persia generally the term Mawlā-nā is applied only very rarely to other saints than the Imams (as e.g. Rūmī). In the Ismaili texts the title Mawlā-nā is given to Imams only. But in India at present the title has been much misused, and has lost all its original implications: it may be given to any one.

Imâmat is higher (afdal) than nubuwwat, or prophethood (74, 86),¹ and the "light" (nûr, i.e. substance) of the latter is derived from the former (86); but Great Prophets (Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, and Muhammad), as mentioned above, combine in themselves both the nabî and the walî (74, 86).

As one can see, the majority of these ideas are the same as those which were developed in the earlier period of the evolution of Ismailism. But in his indiscriminate borrowing from works of different periods the compiler introduces various ideas which are obviously quite obsolete in the Nizari school. For instance, on p. 103 he mentions that in every 'agr' (—what he means by this term is not clear) there are seven Imams. This, as the context shows, is probably taken from an early work, like the Wajhi dîn of Nâsiri Khusraw, together with the speculations about the mystical significance of numbers.² Or, on p. 76, it is said that Imams are muqarrabân, the people "who stand very close to God", and are of the chosen ones. This would be appropriate to the chosen amongst ordinary mortals, but seems quite strange after all that is said above about the Divine nature of the Imam.

The Nizari strata of the doctrine show a much more extremist tone: the Imam is the Absolute Reality (wujûdi muṭlaq) (66); all that exists—exists through him. One who knows this must offer him praises and thanks (66). He is the "proof of God" (hujjat) (62), and it is for this reason that some Imams have said: "What is said about God refers also to us" (62); the nature of the Imam is the mysterious tree of Tûbâ in Paradise (105). He is the real Lord of the world (47, 61), the centre (madâr) of the heavens and earths: without him the world cannot exist

Imam is regarded as the hypostasis of the Primal Divine Volition, logos, the amr,—"be". Scarcity of Nizari works does not permit us to come to a definite conclusion on this point at present, but it seems highly probable that the eclectic author of the KP, who apparently was not well conversant with philosophical matters, simply took this statement, together with others, from a work belonging to the school of Nâsiri Khusraw, continuing Fatimid tradition.

(74, and passim). If, by any chance, he would disappear from the world even for a moment, the world would instantly collapse (21, 22, 26, 61, 62, 74). The Imam looks upon the world 100,000 times a day, and it is only owing to this that the world lasts (26, 48, 65). Not only this earth, but 18,000 other worlds¹ thus depend on him (18); he is the source of life (nutfā) of the Universe (27),—the light which makes visible every thing, heaven and earth (27).

Imamat in relation to mankind originally means the office of "guide", or "leader" (pīshwā'i) (35-36, 61). The leader who is thus referred to is the Imam, through whom God will call mankind on the Day of Judgment, as is said in the Coran (XVII, 73) (48). This guidance implies not only the introduction of orderliness into the moral sphere but also into the functions of the cosmic mechanism (68-70). He conveys to mankind the knowledge of the mysteries of the Universe and of God (70), the knowledge of the invisible and supersensual realities (21), which cannot be attained without him. This is the reason why every one who during his life does not come to recognize his significance in this world, and does not try to receive this knowledge from him, dies as a godless and ignorant man (kāfir), for whom there will be no chance of immortality after death (27, 48, 69). To recognize and follow the Imam is the same as following God Himself (21, 24, 26, 72, 115).

God can be known to man only through Mardi waqt, i.e. The Man, the head of mankind, who is present in every period of time (40, 60, 67, 115); he receives directly from God his instructions and inspiration (69), without any intermediate agency, such as Jabra'il (28). He is the most miraculous and supernatural substance in the visible world, mazharu'l-'ajā'ib (65), whether being manifest to all, during the period of kashf, or hidden, during the period of satr (66-67), which depend on his wishes either to bless mankind with his presence, or to punish them by being absent from the sight of the majority. His complete zuhūr, i.e. when he appears as a powerful king, is like day; and when he is hidden from the sight of the majority of his followers, it is like dark night all over the world (67).

The Imams are the dhurriyyat, the "progeny, (born) one from another", mentioned in the Coran (II, 30, and many other places); they are the ahli Bayt, or members of the household of the Prophet, and 'itrat, or "close relatives" whom the Prophet, in his last will, bequeathed to his followers, together with the Book of God which was revealed to him, and which cannot be separated from the ahli Bayt (34, 76).

¹ These "worlds" ('ālam) should not be understood in accordance with the modern ideas, as different planets, or stars, on which there is life similar to that on our planet. These "worlds" most probably are nothing but cosmic periods, or "geological epochs", using the modern term, and refer to different periods of our world, or earth. Though there is never any direct indication, it seems that we will not be far wrong if we guess that these "worlds" are connected with the periods of seven thousand years each, and the "Great Era" of 360,000 years, mentioned above (p. xxxv). Cf. also in the Rawdatu'l-taslim, JRAS, 1931, pp. 527-528.

All the Imams are of the same substance and nature as 'Alî; there are no smaller or greater Imams amongst them (65). The line of the Imams can never become extinct or interrupted (31).¹ All Imams are infallible, sinless (ma'sûm), and free from fornication (44). As is said in the Coran (II, 118), the covenant of God is never made with the vile (34-36). It is said also about them that the legacy of the Prophets is not left to any one unless he deserve it (42). Thus it will be seen that even if the Imam does not in appearance follow the prescriptions of the sharî'at, one must not think that the Imam commits a sin: the Imam can completely disregard the sharî'at, can cancel it, or alter it (75), because its prescriptions are inapplicable in the realm of Absolute Reality to which he belongs. He can at any time cancel his own earlier commandments, or any prescription given by his predecessors (70). His followers, therefore, have no right to judge him by his actions, or to follow his example (fi'l), without his explicit command, as his actions may have special reasons, beyond the comprehension of ordinary mortals (45).

Personally, as individuals, except for the Divine Power which is connected with them, the Imams are ordinary mortals, subject to all the infirmities which are inseparable from our own physical bodies (50, 115): they can have any possible human form, state, etc., can be "dressed in 30,000 different dresses" (65). But when the Imam is concealed (mastûr), there are always some chosen ones amongst his followers who know where he is, and are in contact with him, leading to him those who are very anxious to see him (22, 26, 50, 115). It can never happen that the Imam is completely "lost", and that no one of his followers can find his way to him (26).

The Imam is appointed as such by the direct indication of his father, i.e. by the naşs, which may be either express, şarîh, or implied, khafî (49, 62, 76). The ordinary Imam, who forms a link in the eternal chain of Imâmat, is called mustaqarr. But sometimes an Imam, for some reasons, appoints one of his sons as an acting Imam, whose Imamhood is only personal, and cannot be transferred to any one. Such Imam is called mustawda' (49, 75). This was the case with Hasan son of 'Alî

(49).¹ Generally such acting or "personal" Imam (mustawda) does not differ from the ordinary (mustaqarr) Imam in any thing except in waṣāyat. He is in his time the greatest of all men, and possesses the knowledge of the mysteries of Imamāt (75) which the ordinary sons of the Imam do not possess.

5. Ḥudūdi Dīn.

We have already referred to the evolution of the priestly organisation in Nizari Ismailism.² The subject is very interesting, but is too large and complex to be dealt with here. It may briefly be stated that the hierarchy apparently attained its highest development under the later Fatimids, and began to shrink after the split, both in the Mustali and the Nizari branches. The "seven ranks", or degrees (ḥudūd, which is the Plural from ḥadd, originally meaning "limit"), always played a conspicuous part in Ismaili symbolism, and these ḥaṭṭ ḥudūdi dīn remained in the Nizari system as a more or less fossilized dogma inherited from antiquity, when it already ceased to reflect the real features of the priestly organisation.³ There is no trace in the KP (as also in other known Nizari works) of anything like the "degrees of initiation" into the secret doctrine about which the orthodox historians tell so many fanciful stories.⁴

Though these traditional ḥudūd are often referred to in the KP, they seem to have only a symbolical character. The office of dā'ī, as far as it is possible to see from the known Nizari works, was probably taken over by the mu'allim, or (religious) teacher.⁵ This probably indicates that the interests of the leading circles have turned from the expansion of the Ismaili community to the question of merely its preservation. What was the difference

⁴ See "Guide", p. 19 sq.

between the functions of the three lower ranks, the mustajīb, or initiated, the ma'dhūnī aṣḡhar, or the junior ma'dhūn (one who is permitted to preach), and the senior (akbar) ma'dhūn, is not quite clear (93).

The most thorough change took place in connection with the office of ḥujjat. Under the last Fatimids there were twelve (or even twenty-four) *ḥujjats*¹, and the term implied a bishop-resident, in charge of a large see, which usually covered a large province. In the Nizari system there is only one ḥujjat. He is a kind of diminutive copy of the Imam, and stands in relation to the latter the same as that of Imam to God. He is endowed with the inborn superhuman knowledge of the Imam and all his mysteries. It is only through him that one can know the Imam, just as it is through the Imam that one can know God. He is no longer a highly qualified, experienced, and capable priest, promoted to this office from lower ranks of the hierarchy, but usually a close relative of the Imam, sometimes even a woman, or even an infant.² In the symbolical schemes of the world he symbolizes the Nafsi kull,³ thus taking the place which in Fatimid literature is occupied by the Imam himself.

The terminology connected with the ḥudūd becomes rather confused. The earlier term ḥujjat in the sense of the bishop-resident cannot be used in its former sense, and is replaced by a rather archaic expression, lāḥiq (Plur. lawāḥiq, cf. 93, 103), which is not as common in Fatimid literature as ḥujjat, though it is a synonym of it. The author apparently consciously uses the term lāḥiq, in order to avoid confusion with the term ḥujjat, used in its new sense.

The term bāb, which under the Fatimids was applied to the chief ḥujjat, is mentioned by the author several times (64, 101, etc.), but its meaning is quite vague. Sometimes, as on p. 57, it is clear that it is used in the sense of the Imam, as also in the form Bābi aqdas (67).⁴

The ḥujjat (in the new sense of the term) is infallible (ma'sūm az khatā, 58); he knows the Imam without any intermediary (wāṣita) (94); just as all the Imams are the same in their substance, so all the ḥujjats are the manifestation of one and the

¹ As is known, there were at a later period as many as 24 ḥujjats, twelve being called the "ḥujjats of day", and the other twelve,—the "ḥujjats of night". It seems, however, that the number twelve was purely symbolic; at the same time it appears that at any rate towards the end of the Egyptian period, these titles tended to become simply honorific.

² Sometimes even a book may be regarded as the ḥujjat.

same Divine or superhuman substance (44). At the periods when the Imam has a full manifestation, ẓuhūr, i.e. is not only a religious leader but also ruler of a nation, the ḥujjat abstains from preaching, though, by the order of the Imam, he may carry on with it (68); it is impossible that both the Imam and the ḥujjat should be hidden (68).

It may be added that many sides of the question of the ḥujjat remain quite dark in this treatise (as also in almost all other known Persian Nizari works). This clearly shows that the doctrine was introduced only at a late period, and was not thoroughly "worked out" before the circumstances in which the Nizaris had to exist became very adverse to them, and their literary activity was reduced to a minimum.¹

6. The System of Ethics.

The Kalâmi Pîr is especially generous in advice of an ethical nature. Such advice forms rather a prominent feature of Persian Nizari literature in general. It must not be forgotten that the most popular and classic work on ethics in Persian, the Akhlâqi Nâsirî, was composed by Naṣîr'u'd-dîn Tûsî, who was at that time,—at least officially,—an Ismaili, and wrote for the Ismaili governor, or mukhtasham of Qâ'in, Naṣîr'u'd-dîn 'Abdu'r-Raḥîm.² Even to-day Persian Sufic moralistic works in prose, and particularly in verse, form the favourite reading of all the Persian-speaking Ismailis.

These speculations on the principles of righteous life and virtuous behaviour are all thoroughly religious in spirit, and Shi'itic in their substance. Just as in their paintings Persians recognize only pure, undiluted bright colours, so all these moral counsels are so ideal that they cannot be made applicable to ordinary mortals.

The highest class of mankind, the people who have attained the highest religious virtues, ahli waḥdat, are entirely absorbed in God, so that their will becomes the will of God, and their actions become the actions of God.³ Ordinary mortals who believe in God are the "people of gradual progress", ahli tarattub. The degree (martaba) of their piety may vary with individuals, but their general tendency is to perfect themselves. And lastly, there are the hopelessly vile and deliberately unclean people, ahli taḍādd, i.e. the people of chaos and destruction, who are determined and obstinate in their resistance to any good counsel, and every word of truth (48).

³ This seems to be derived from Sufic ideas, with the numerous anecdotes, such as those about al-Hallâj, etc., which are always on the tip of the tongue of every religiously inclined Persian.

Amongst the virtues which are attributed to the righteous, ahli waḥdat, many resemble in spirit Christian ideals: to regard one's fellow co-religionist as better than oneself; not to spare even life in helping him; not to refuse him anything in one's possession, etc. (48). We find a detailed definition of the righteous on pp. 70-71, with the division of the people into the ahli yamîn and ahli shimâl. The ideal qualities of an ideal mu'min are given on pp. 77-78.

These general ethical ideals are entirely dominated by religious views. The chief of them, obligatory (fard) to every Ismaili, is love for 'Alî (23) and his legitimate successors (24, 38, 39, 40). Prayer without sincere love for 'Alî is inefficient (23). Unreserved and unhesitating obedience to 'Alî and the Imams is obligatory (wājib) (47, 76). One must not follow the example of the actions of the Imam (which he can easily misunderstand), but only his explicit commandments and teaching (46, 47). The worst sin is to criticise the Imam (45),—it means that one does not believe in the Imam at all, and possesses no imân (45). Obedience to the teacher is necessary (47). No Ismaili must ever stop in striving to attain the highest possible degree of moral perfection (46-47); he must not be afraid of persecutions, however severe they are; he must help his co-religionist in the hour of need, etc. (47). Good deeds, ḥasana, are defined on p. 76. He must always avoid following the impulses of his lower nature, and must discipline himself (69).

7. Salvation and Future Life.

Though references to eschatological ideas are very frequent in this treatise, they are mostly interpreted allegorically as symbols, and not realities. Besides, the majority of such discussions are obviously derived from various works which belong to the earlier tradition, such, for instance, as the Ṣaḥīfatun-nāzirîn, a work belonging to Nāṣiri Khusraw's school, on which the seventh bâb in the Kalâmi Pîr is chiefly based. In addition to this, here and there are to be found expressions in which the primitive Islamic eschatological and cosmogonical ideas are referred to without any special comment, and thus obviously have to be taken literally. There is also a strong Sufic element, with its theory about absorption of the soul in the Absolute.

Apparently the real Nizari theory is that of the conscious soul's progress towards God by gradual acquisition of the knowledge of Divine mysteries, which are gradually revealed to the faithful by the ḥudūd, or the priestly teachers, and ultimately the ḥujjat and the Imam. When the human soul thus attains its highest wisdom, it becomes assimilated with the Highest Wisdom of the Universe which is an eternal substance, Divine in its origin. Thus what was originally an individual human soul, becomes entirely identified with and absorbed in God.

Rûḥ, soul, comes from the highest phase of the Divine Activity, the amr, or Primal Command (46).¹ It is eternal; those who have no real faith have no rûḥ (46). The term nafs (Pl. nufûs), is also used to convey the idea of soul, in nafsi juz'iyya (70), which seem to refer to the lower faculties of the spirit.

Knowledge of God, ma'rifat, is the basis of salvation, and it is acquired through following the instruction of the ḥujjat (47).² Recognition of, and obedience to the Imam of the time leads to the attainment of salvation (73), or, as it is called, the ma'ād, or return to the Original Source (91). Ismailism recognises the intercession of the Prophet and the Imam (72), though it is not clear, how, and before whom they intercede in this abstract scheme. Quite in agreement with Sufic ideas, the knowledge of one's self, ma'rifati nafsi khûd, produces the same effect as the attainment of the knowledge of God (73), but how is not explained in detail. Probably this is merely a restatement of the well-known ḥadîth.

One of the most interesting features of Nizari thought is the admission of many phenomena of religious life, and of some eschatological ideas, as being immanent to the human mind. Though the author apparently feels great difficulty in formulating his thoughts clearly, it is possible to think that his efforts most probably find their best expression in the well-known Christian formula: the kingdom of God is within us,—mardumi'st, as he says (91-92).

Notwithstanding the above, the author admits the literal truth of some primitive Islamic beliefs.³ So, the idea that the good and evil actions of man will be weighed on the Day of Judgment must be accepted literally (110).⁴ On the other hand, it appears quite inconsistent after this to think that Paradise

¹ This should not be taken as a philosophical revelation, but probably is entirely based on the literal meaning of the verse of the Coran (XVII, 87), without any regard to the Plotinian or any other doctrine.

² The ḥujjat is here obviously mentioned in a broad sense, as generally an organiser of the propaganda, and this embraces the lower ranks of the priestly organisation as well.

⁴ Cf. on this subject also Wensinck, "The Muslim Creed", pp. 167 sq.

is merely a psychic state (105 sq.), and that Hell is complete annihilation.¹ At the same time, it may be added, the material elements of the physical self, or human body, can again re-enter the evolution of the cosmic process (92), but this has nothing to do with the spirit or individuality of man.²

There are many other interesting questions of minor importance which are raised by the author. Unfortunately, he deals with them mostly in a haphazard way, and it would not be easy to bring them into any kind of system. In addition to this, the eclecticism of the work makes it difficult to find, without a special study, which ideas really belong to the Nizari school of thought, and which are merely picked out of some obsolete work which the author happened to peruse. His apparent inconsistency, and occasional obvious contradictions, as mentioned above, can only be explained by his indiscriminate borrowing from different works, and also by later interpolations by others.

III. THE MANUSCRIPT AND THE WORK.

1. The Manuscript.

The first known copy of the Kalâmi Pîr was apparently brought from Shughnan by A. A. Polovtsev, at the time a Russian official in Turkestan, who in 1902 travelled in the Upper Oxus districts, and later on took an interest in Ismailism.³ A photostatic copy of the MS was preserved in the Asiatic Museum of the Russian Academy of Sciences, St. Petersburg. In 1914 another copy, dated the 1st Dhî hijja 1321/18-ii-1904, also from Shughnan, was brought to St. Petersburg by a Russian ethnologist, I. I. Zarobin. It was also deposited in the Asiatic Museum.⁴ In 1918 yet another copy was presented to the same Museum by A. A. Semenov. It is dated Rajab 1333/ May 1915.⁵

¹ Nevertheless, 'adhâb in the future life is here lavishly promised to sinners and infidels, with many quite realistic details.

⁴ A note on this copy is given in W. Ivanow's "Ismaili MSS of the Asiatic Museum", in the Bulletin of the Russian Academy of Sciences, 1917, pp. 368-371.

⁵ See A. Semenov, "A Description of the Ismaili MSS collected by A. A. Semenov", in the same Bulletin of the Russian Academy of Sciences, 1918, pp. 2193-2202.

Unfortunately, it was quite out of the question either to get a loan of these MSS, or even to obtain photostats from them, for the present edition.

The text here offered is originally based on a much older copy, dated Sipânj, the 23rd Rab. ii 1219/1-viii-1804.¹ It is a fairly good copy, preserving some archaisms in its language. Unfortunately, its condition is not good. Some pages are missing, while other pages are entirely or partly illegible because the MS is damaged by water. As it was not possible to obtain another copy, or to arrange for the loan of the St. Petersburg MSS, it was decided to prepare a tentative edition from the copy available. As far as it was possible to ascertain from some learned Nizaris, almost all the missing passages in that MS dealt with purely controversial matters, leaving all essential subjects unaffected.

When the printing of the text was nearly completed, another, and this time complete copy, came to light. It was the oldest so far known, being dated Saturday the 14th Shawwâl 1207/the 25th May 1794²; the place where the copy was made is not mentioned, but it also, for certain, comes from Shughnan. The end of our text, which is damaged in the preceding copy, is entirely based on this one.

A collation of both these copies revealed the most interesting fact of a remarkable absence of variants, though apparently the two copies are quite independent each from the other. The older copy does not contain as many archaisms in the language as the preceding one; but there are numerous cases in which one and the same error, or a similar perversion of the Arabic quotations appear in both. Thus it seems that such errors are introduced from an earlier original.

All passages which were omitted in the first copy, and thus were not included into the lithographed text, were carefully studied in this new copy. They are summed up, and inserted, in small type, in the translation in their proper places. All of them are mainly derived from Ithna-‘ashari sources, and present nothing important with regard to Ismaili doctrine. Therefore it was decided not to give them in full, in the form of special appendices.

² It is a volume of 305 pages, 24,5 by 13 cm., 12 lines 7 cm. long to a page, on hand-made paper, enclosed in double jadwal lines. Bukhara binding.

The MS 1219¹ presents nothing remarkable in its ways of dealing with the text, the orthography of Persian and Arabic words, etc. It is a typical production of a Central Asian copyist of very inferior class.² The MS 1207 is much better, though it is also a work of an amateur, who was very careful and diligent, but, as we can see from his rather childish handwriting, not highly educated. Arabic passages in both copies are mostly unintelligible. In the case of the Coranic verses it was fairly easy to correct them. But in the case of different hadīths, especially rare ones, the matter was quite hopeless. Fortunately, these hopelessly mutilated passages were all accompanied by Persian translations, so that it was possible to omit their Arabic version in a few particularly bad cases, without interfering with the text and the sequence of ideas. Only obvious errors have been corrected without special reference, together with the usual mistakes in the use of different letters, in the way of marking the idāfat, etc., which are common in all the inferior copies written in Central Asia. Occasionally, however, it was possible to find better readings, or to correct the text from a comparison with the original works from which the passages were quoted, or with the Haft-bābi Abū Ishāq, mentioned above (see p. xxi sq.). All these corrections are noted in the footnotes to the translation.

A very interesting feature of the oldest copy, MS 1207, is the fact that on many pages isolated words, and sometimes whole passages, not only in Arabic, but also in Persian, are vocalised. The vocalisation of the Arabic words usually does not call for special note,—it shows that the copyist quite correctly understood the meaning of the signs of vocalisation. But it is worth drawing the attention of the student to the most extraordinary vocalisation which the copyist gives to Persian words.

The most ordinary word, the 3rd pers. Sing. from the Substantive verb, ast, is invariably vocalised as assut! Nīst becomes nīssut; chīst=chīssat; hast=hassut; occasionally it is assat,—naql assat ki; Khudāssut=Khudā'st; there is also but-parassat=but-parast. This extraordinary passion for tashdīd appears to be common with the suffix of the 3rd pers. Plur. of the verbs: nīsutannad=nīstand; khwānannad=khwānand; bi-dānannud=bi-dānand; na-mī-tūnannud=na-mī-tawānand; sometimes the tashdād is most surprising: passari 'amm=pusari 'amū. In Arabic words it is often quite superfluous: khabbar, sabbab, shajjara=khabar, sabab, shajara, etc. At the same time it is clearly marked naṣ for naṣṣ. How the Central Asian Ismailis read Persian is shown by interesting vocalisation: 'atrat, nushbat, mi'ād, tuddād (= taḍādd), etc. It is remarkable to see haqayyiqat written instead of haqīqat. The use of the hamza is very fantastic—Yā'jūju wa Mā'jūju=Yājāj wa Mājāj; sometimes the copyist puts a jazm over the long i in the words like dīn.¹ And so this goes all through the copy. These vocalisation marks are added in red ink, together with occasional glosses to Arabic words.

¹ For the sake of brevity these two copies are referred to under the date of their transcription.

² Almost all copies of Ismaili works preserved in the different districts on the Upper Oxus are prepared by sectarians for their own use. There are no professional scribes, and every Ismaili who masters reading and writing with elementary instruction in the religion, ultimately receives permission to copy, and to possess a MS of this or that work. So, obtaining a copy from his friends, he carefully transcribes it for himself as correctly as he can.

Whether it is possible to attach much significance to this, or not, it is difficult to decide. Similar vocalisation is occasionally found in Central Asian MSS, but usually in a small number of examples which are always treated by the reader as incidental mistakes. It would be interesting to pay special attention to these, and to examine the matter thoroughly.

2. The Text of the Work.

As already mentioned,² the text of the Kalāmi Pīr consists mostly of quotations from different works, partly Ismaili, and partly Ithna-'ashari. Some of them can be identified, though they are not mentioned by their titles. Other works remain so far unidentified, but it is quite possible that gradually their titles will be found. The difference in the character of the contents, in the language, style, various anachronisms, etc., show at once that we have to deal with passages taken from different sources. But it is not always possible to be quite certain where the quotation begins and where it ends.

The relation of the Kalāmi Pīr to the Haft-bābi Abū Ishāq has also been discussed above.³ Here an approximate analysis of the composition of the KP, with regard to its agreement with the text of the HBAI and the identifiable quotations, is given below:

- pp. 8–11. Muquddima, or dībācha; original, but partly modified by the final editor. Different in the HBAI.
- pp. 11–12. Beginning of the first bāb. On p. 12, lines 5 to 11, it literally agrees with the Ātash-kada, by Lutf-'Alī Beg Ādhar (p. 187 of the Bombay lith. ed., 1277/1860). Further on the subject remains the same, but the text is different.

- pp. 13-17. Some matters, especially on pp. 14-15, are taken from the second bâb.
- pp. 17-19. The beginning of the second bâb; it is different from the HBAI, but has apparently been taken from Ismaili sources.
- pp. 19-23. Correspond to some extent with the first bâb of the HBAI. The subject is the same, but the text does not agree literally except in a few passages. Repetition on pp. 21=26.
- pp. 23-26. The beginning of the third bâb here agrees with the beginning of the third bâb of the HBAI, but soon both versions part, and agree only rarely. The KP seems to derive its controversial discussions from some Ithna-'ashari sources. The HBAI is shorter, and much more restrained.
- pp. 26-27. Quite different from the HBAI. Apparently derived from Ismaili sources. Repetitions: pp. 24=40; 26=21; 27=31.
- p. 27 (line 14)—p. 34 (line 7). Not in the HBAI. Based on the XVth bâb of an early Arabic Ithna-'ashari work, the Kitâbu't-tawhîd, by Ibn Bâbüya al-Qummî (d. 381/991), see pp. 110-114 of the (Tehran) lith. ed., 1285/1869. Some passages are literally translated (p. 30, line 11=p. 113; p. 31, line 14=p. 113, etc.). Most probably some other Ithna-'ashari work was also used. Repetitions: pp. 31=27; 32=107, etc.
- pp. 34-37. Not in the HBAI, though something in common is found in the end of p. 34. Apparently derived from an Ismaili work. Reference to al-Jam' bayna's-Sahîhayn (see footnote 2 on p. 29 of the Translation).
- p. 37 (line 5)—p. 38 (line 3). Not in the HBAI. Almost literally quoted from the 3rd Şahîfa of the Şahîfatu'n-nâzirîn,¹ which is here incorporated almost entire.

¹ The Şahîfatu'n-nâzirîn is a small treatise, divided into 36 şahîfas, composed in 856/1452 or 857/1453, the first date being given in the khâtima of the copy in Zeroobin's collection, and the second in Semenov's and the Bombay copy (cf. "Guide", No. 611). The first two copies do not contain the name of the author, but in the preface of the Bombay copy the name of the author is given as Sayyid Suhrâb. According to oral tradition, he was a pupil of Nâsiri Khusraw, but nothing beyond this is known about him. It seems that the statement of the Bombay copy is based only on this oral tradition which cannot be accepted as conflicting with the date given above. The work itself agrees remarkably in the sequence and dealing with subjects with the Rawdatu't-taslîm, often referred to above, and attributed to Nâsiru'd-dîn Tûsî (cf. "Guide", No. 642). It is much shorter, and deals with the subjects in a strictly "Badakhshani" way, i.e. in the style of the works belonging to the school of Nâsiri Khusraw. There is no doubt as to the connection between these two works when they are compared; in addition to this, at the end of the 26th şahîfa a reference is given to a work called Risâla'i Raw-

- p. 38 (line 3)—p. 44 (line 5). Not found in the HBAI. Apparently derived from some Ithna-‘ashari sources. In the passages which are omitted in the lithographed text the same al-Jam‘ bayna’s-Sahîhayn, and also the work called Jâmi‘, and attributed to Abû Hâshim are mentioned. Repetitions : 40=43.
- p. 44 (lines 5-17). Not in the HBAI. Literal quotation from the Latâ’ifu’t-tawâ’if, by ‘Alî b. Husayn al-Wâ’iz al-Kâshifî (comp. between 933/1527 and 939/1533, the latter being the approximate date of the author’s death). The quotation is taken from the second bâb, seventh fasl (p. 30 of the Bombay lith. ed., 1311). In the passage which follows, and which is omitted in the present text, the same al-Jam‘ bayna’s-Sahîhayn is again referred to ; also the two Shahîhs, of Bukhârî and Muslim ; the Sharh on the Nahju’l-balâgha, by ‘Umar ibn Abî’l-Hadîd (d. 655/1257) ; the compiler also mentions his own works : a risâla of controversial contents, and another one, in the same style, Kitâbi Arba’in.¹
- p. 44 (line 18)—p. 52. Very loosely agrees with the HBAI, although almost every sentence is differently worded. There are many traces of “ editing ”, in what touches on the question of Nâsirî Khusraw.² The list of the Imams is generally variable in this work. Here the names do not completely agree with those given in the HBAI.³
- pp. 52-56. The fourth bâb ; agrees fairly well with the HBAI. The text on p. 52 very much resembles the 21st Shahîfa from the Shahîfatu’n-nâzirîn, though it does not agree with it literally.
- pp. 57-58. The contents are the same as in the HBAI, but the wording agrees only occasionally.
- pp. 58-70. The fifth bâb ; it generally agrees with the HBAI almost literally.
- p. 59 (lines 3-6). A quotation from the HBBS (p. 5, line 15, to p. 6, line 2), referred to as Fuṣûli mubâarak.
- p. 61. Both bayts, quoted here, are omitted in the HBAI.

ḡatû’l-muta‘allimîn (which in Zaroobin’s copy is perverted into Rawḡatû’l-muqallimîn ; no information as to whether it is mentioned in Semenov’s copy). One could be not far wrong in assuming that this is the same work as the Rawḡatû’t-taslim.

² The only reference to Nâsirî Khusraw which is given in the HBAI is quoted in note 8 on p. 43 of the Translation.

³ As is already mentioned on p. xliii, note 1, and on p. 42, note 4, a commentary on this portion of the treatise is reserved for a special article to be published hereafter.

- p. 62. The bayt at the top of the page (repeated on pp. 63, 72) is omitted in the HBAI.
- p. 63, line 12. The bayt is omitted in the HBAI. Two important quotations from Ḥasan 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām, referred to as Fuṣūli mubārak. The same in the HBAI.
- p. 65, line 10. The miṣrā' is omitted in the HBAI. The Khutba of Ḥasan 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām is quoted.
- p. 70 (line 18)—p. 72 (line 9). Omitted in the HBAI. The compiler, or the final editor, apparently simply copied this passage from an Ithna-'ashari or Sufic work, preserving even the original heading: "mas'ala'i panjum dar ma'ād", though there is no mention of other mas'alas. As it is omitted in the HBAI, it may be inferred that it is a later interpolation.
- p. 72 (line 10)—p. 89. Agrees fairly well with the HBAI, though in the latter the text is slightly expanded (cf. pp. 74, 76, 77).
- p. 73, line 1. Quotation from Ḥāfiẓ; also found in the HBAI.
- p. 73, line 8. From the Rawshanā'i-nāma of Nāsiri Khusraw, cf. p. 528, line 7 of the Tehran edition.
- p. 75. References to the 'Umdat't-tālib,¹ and the Rawḍatu't-taslim.²
- p. 79, line 10 to p. 80, bot.; p. 81, line 2 to 13³; p. 86, lines 8–17; p. 87, lines 12–14; p. 87, line 18 to p. 88, line 17,—all omitted in the HBAI.
- pp. 89–94. The sixth bāb; agrees fairly well with the HBAI, and in some passages with the HBBS.
- p. 89, lines 16 sq. Apparently taken from the HBBS, 25.
- p. 90, lines 7–12. Literal quotation from the HBBS, 27. Also found in the HBAI.
- p. 90 (line 15)—p. 91. Literal quotation from the HBBS, 27–28. Also found in the HBAI.
- p. 91, line 15. The same bayt is quoted on p. 115.
- p. 92. Literal quotations from the HBBS, 29, 30, 31.
- pp. 94–116. The seventh bāb; agrees fairly well with the seventh bāb in the HBAI. Many literal quotations from the Ṣaḥīfatu'n-nāẓirīn, in both versions.
- p. 104, lines 7–18. From the 25th Ṣaḥīfa. Lines 14–17 are inserted from the 24th Ṣaḥīfa.

² As mentioned above, p. liii, note 1, it is not quite certain as to whether this version is really the same as the Rawḍatu't-taslim which is known. Cf. also p. 71, note 1 of the Translation.

³ This seems to be quoted from the beginning of a work by Bābā Sayyid-nā himself,—his Sharḥ on the Khutbatu'l-bayān, which is an apocryphal work attributed to 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib.

- p. 105 (line 10)—p. 106 (line 15). From the 35th Ṣaḥīfa (the order of separate sentences slightly altered).
 p. 106 (line 16)—p. 107 (line 5). From the 33rd Ṣaḥīfa. After this the quotation is not literal.
 p. 108, lines 4–7. From the same 33rd Ṣaḥīfa.
 p. 108 (line 13)—p. 110 (line 4 ?). From the 34th Ṣaḥīfa. The end of the quotation is not quite literal.
 p. 110, lines 10–12. From the 31st Ṣaḥīfa.
 p. 111, lines 11 sq. From the 16th Ṣaḥīfa.
 p. 116—end. Different from the HBAI. Apparently “edited” and supplemented with references to Nāṣiri Khusraw’s supposed authorship.

The passages which are identified most probably show that the author of the original version preferred to paraphrase his sources, while the supposed final “editor” of the present version simply copied them, as in the case of the quotation from the Laṭā’ifu’t-tawā’if, and the “fifth mas’ala” from an unidentified work.

It is difficult to offer any observations here on the language of the work, so long as some portions of it, which may be quotations from different sources, remain unidentified. On the whole, the language seems to be rather mixed: old forms and expressions appear here and there, but are not typical of the treatise as a whole. It may be mentioned that there are many instances of the archaic form of the preposition ba with -d- before pronouns: badīshān, badīn, badān=ba īshān, ba īn, ba ān, etc. (only rarely badū=ba ū, as on p. 98). The old particle mar- which is used with postposition -rā, is found quite often here (mostly in literal translations from Arabic),—cf. p. 47, line 13: mā mar-Khudāy-rā’im. There are occasional instances of the old “yā of narrative”, yā-yi istimrārī, as also of yā-yi shart, with verbs; occasional forms of the “second Future”, of Perfect and Pluperfect with mī-; occasional peculiar expressions like yawmī ākhir Shāhi Mardān-rā khvāst (p. 41, line 13), in which khvāst=meant. This expression is quite typical of Nāṣir’s Wajhi dīn, where it is found quite often.

Such expressions as wāzhgūnagī (p. 45, line 16): or bālidān (p. 53, line 15, to be read so instead of “marwālīd”, given in the text); or māndan used as a transitive verb (p. 49, line 18: wa hāch chīz az ū bāz na-mānad=“and will keep nothing from him”), etc., seem to be incorporated from various quotations from older works. The numerous forms of the Precative: bakhshād, kunād, dīhād, etc., which appear in the end of different chapters, in conclusive invocations of God, most probably are not real archaisms, but Central Asian (“Badakhshani”) peculiarities similar to the pseudo-archaisms often heard in the jargon

Persian which is taught in schools, and occasionally still used in poems in India.

The translation offered here tries to give a clear idea of the contents of the original, by following it as closely and literally as possible. When translating a work like this into a modern and Western language, one often finds great difficulty in rendering many terms and ideas by their ordinary equivalents. The text itself is very faulty, and very often it is not clear whether its continuity is not interrupted. Thus the student should treat both this edition of the text and its translation, as merely tentative. Only when a good early copy of the original version is found will it be possible to correct the text, and prepare a final version of the translation.

THE ORIGINAL VERSION OF THE Kalâmi Pîr FOUND.

On the 30th of October, 1934, I received from an Ismaili friend of mine, Qudratu'l-lâh Beg, of Hunza, near Gilgit, a Persian MS containing yet another version of the Haft bâb of Abû Ishâq, this time,—at last,—genuine and original. An examination of this work, and a collation of its text with both the Kalâmi Pîr, and the version which heretofore was referred to here under the title of the HBAI, proved beyond doubt that the latter two works are merely amplified versions of this earlier treatise.

Thus, quite unexpectedly, the mystery of the origin of the Kalâmi Pîr has been solved.

Most unfortunately, at the time when the Manuscript reached me, the text of the KP, its translation, and the introduction were for the most part printed, except for a few pages only. Though this new find obviates much of what is said in the introduction, and necessitates quite a new set of notes and comments on the text and the translation, it is too late now to change everything, and all that is possible is to append this short note in order to bring the new find to the notice of students. There is some consolation in the fact that the book came just in time to avoid the necessity of publishing this note separately, in some periodical, where it would not be so easily accessible to those who may take an interest in the important work of the Kalâmi Pîr.

It is interesting to find that almost all the deductions and inferences concerning the nature of the original version, which were summed up in the introduction, have turned out to be correct. But there can be no doubt that although our text is based on this original version, nevertheless, as both the KP and the (pseudo-) HBAI have much material in common which is not to be found in the original HBAI, it must be assumed that both works are based on some intermediate version which has not yet been traced.

Although one cannot be certain, it would appear as if each of these different versions was in some way connected with a particular locality. The Kalâmi Pîr, as edited in the present volume, appears to be typical of Shughnan and the adjacent districts. The (pseudo-) HBAI seems to be in use in the districts which are nearer to Badakhshan proper, while the original version is found now in Hunza, in the Eastern side of the highlands inhabited by the Ismailis. Most probably the well-known conservatism of the sectarians makes them stick to their particular versions, which thus are peculiar to different villages, or groups of villages.

It will be possible to see from the detailed comparison of both texts, given further on, that the KP contains the whole of the text of the original version of Abû Ishâq, with the omission of only one important passage,¹ and with occasional verbal variants. Thus the student can easily form his own opinion about it by perusing the present edition.² The additions contain as much material as the original work itself. These new additions most probably were chiefly inserted by the compiler of the intermediate version, the rest being contributed by the author of the KP, and is mostly taken from Ithna-‘ashari sources.

The new find by no means undermines the importance of the KP as a document for the study of Ismailism in Persia. On the contrary, it makes it still more valuable. The date of compilation of the KP still cannot be precisely determined. But a comparison of both versions permits us to some extent to penetrate the almost absolute darkness which up to date conceals from us the different stages in the evolution of Mediæval Ismailism. Even the heterogeneous element which is so strong in the KP, in the form of the Ithna-‘ashari and other influences, has its value for a detailed study of the history of the Ismaili movement.

The original Haft-bâb of Abû Ishâq is a book of 125 small pages.³ It is very simple and unpretentious in its style, may be even rustic or boorish in expression, but entirely free from chaotic repetitions, anachronisms, and inconsistencies which are so numerous in the KP. It is plain, restrained in argument and especially in controversial matters,¹ and creates a far better impression than its later amplified versions. The name of the author is found in its proper place, unfortunately simply in the form Bû Ishâq, without any surnames, or the name of his father. Sectarian tradition apparently preserved no information about him, and almost nothing can be gathered concerning him from his book except for the fact that he was most probably a native of the district of Mu'minâbâd, in Quhistân, in Eastern Persia.² There are some certain peculiarities in his language which support this.³ In his first bâb, dealing with the story of his conversion, he mentions that he met an Ismaili missionary (whose name is not given),⁴ and that ultimately,

¹ This is the passage describing the ceremony of the inauguration of the Great Qiyâmat at Alamut by Imam Hasan ‘alâ dhikri-hi’s-salâm. It is partly preserved in the (pseudo-) HBAL, from which it is translated in the footnote on pp. 60-61 of the Translation. The full original text of it is given further on, on p. 115, together with an English version of the portion that is omitted.

² Of all passages that are omitted in the present edition of the KP only two are also found in the original. The first (see p. 14 of the Translation) in the original is much shorter than in the KP, occupying only 11 small pages (18-30 of the Hunza copy). It deals with the controversy with Sunnism, giving absolutely nothing new or interesting. The second passage (see p. 98 of the Translation) is less than four pages (111-115 in the Hunza copy), and deals with some abstruse speculations about symbolism of numbers. It is interesting to note that all other passages that are omitted in the present edition of the KP belong to the compiler of that version, and are not found in the original.

³ The Hunza copy is over a hundred years old, and is written on thickish hand-made paper, the “Khoqandi” variety, obviously of Central Asian origin, of greyish colour, 20 by 12.5 cm., 13 lines to a page, 6.5 to 7 cm. long. The handwriting seems to be the same all through the copy, but differs slightly from page to page. This may be explained by the fact that probably its original owner copied it leisurely, with long intervals between different pages. His handwriting is quite unskilled, as of a man who rarely takes a pen into his hand, and his orthography is deplorable, while Arabic quotations are mostly perverted beyond recognition. Two, or just over two pages normally are contained in one page of this lithographed text.

² Mu'minâbâd is an arid district in Eastern Persia, occupying the South-Eastern part of the valley of Birjand. It begins just a few miles East from the town of Birjand, and stretches some distance South of Sarbîsha. Some Ismaili villages are still found there; most probably they were much more numerous in the XVth c. There are also many Ismaili hamlets scattered in the adjacent districts, West and North from Mu'minâbâd, as far as Qâ'in, and even further. The reason why it is possible to think that the author belongs to this district is his reference to it on pp. 78-79 of the original text (omitted in the KP). The Hunza-scribe, being unfamiliar with Persia, apparently misunderstood the name of the place, and made it meaningless "dar Mu'min bād Quhistân", obviously omitting an alif. In this passage (as may be seen from the Appendix), the author says that on the day of the celebration of the Qiyâmat in Alamut Mawlâ-nâ had given orders that it should be celebrated "in Mu'minâbâd of Quhistân and everywhere". The reason that this rather remote locality was singled for special reference clearly indicates that the author was particularly interested in it, most probably being a native or a resident of it.

being presented to the person whom he calls Badī'u'd-dīn Khwāja Qâsim, he was made a ma'dhūn. The blessings accompanying the name of this Khwāja Qâsim imply that the latter was already dead at the time when the book was composed. It is clear from the way in which reference is made to him that he was not an Imam. In any case, however, he appears to have occupied a very high position in the Ismaili world. Looking at the list of the hujjats, we find the name Qâsim Shâh who lived about that time.¹ The coincidence is significant, and it is quite possible that Khwāja Qâsim mentioned in the book really was the hujjat who is referred to in the list under the name of Qâsim Shâh.

The work itself gives no direct indications as to its date. The latest persons or events that are referred to in it are: Naṣīr'u'd-dīn Tūsī (who died in 672/1273) (cf. p. 50 in the text of the KP), and the fact that from the disappearance of the last Imam of the Ithna-ʿasharis, Mahdī, more than 500 years have already passed (cf. p. 22 in the KP). This gives the date as the beginning of the IX/XVth c.

In the end of the third bâb (in the place corresponding with pp. 49-51 in the KP) the genealogy of the Nizārī Imams is given, which ends with Mustansir bi'l-lâh (III) as the Imam of the time.² This genealogy differs from the present official version, and it is obvious that this Mustansir III is the same person as Imam Gharīb Shâh of the official version. The Imams, as is well-known, in addition to their personal names, had many surnames, honorary titles, and probably special names under which they were known amongst their followers only. Thus it is almost hopeless to be certain as to who is who in case the names do not coincide. In any case it is quite obvious that Gharīb-Mirzâ cannot be a personal name or title, and can obviously be only a surname. Some authors³ give his name as ʿAbbâs, and it is quite possible, and even probable, that he might have had the official honorary title Mustansir bi'l-lâh, like his grandfather.

¹ Cf. W. Ivanow, "Ismailitica", Memoirs of the As. Soc. of Bengal, vol. VIII, 1922, p. 69. The author of the KP made him Imam Mustansir bi'l-lâh, the Fatimid caliph of Egypt.

² After the last khudâwand of Alamut, Rukn'u'd-dīn Khūrshâh, the author gives (p. 50 of the copy): Shamsu'd-dīn Muḥammad; ʿAlâ'u'd-dīn Muʾmin Shâh; ʿAlâ'u'd-dīn Qâsim Shâh I; ʿAlâ'u'd-dīn Qâsim Shâh II ibn Qâsim Shâh; ʿImâdu'd-dīn Salâm (or Islâm) Shâh I; ʿImâdu'd-dīn Salâm (or Islâm) Shâh II ibn Salâm Shâh; Jalâlu'd-dīn Mustansir bi'l-lâh II; ʿImâdu'd-dīn Salâm (or Islâm, or ʿAbdu's-Salâm) Shâh III (the last two are omitted in the KP); and, ultimately, the Imam of the time Mustansir bi'l-lâh III.

³ This is Muḥammad Taqī Maḥallâtī, the author of the Athârī Muḥammadi, composed in 1310/1893. He is generally quite unreliable, except in matters connected with the story of Imam Ḥasan-ʿAlī Shâh.

The only author, so far known, who gives the date of his death is the Indian Nizari, Nar-Muhammad, who in his work, Satvêni,¹ attributes to him a short reign of three or four years only, 899/1494 to 902 (or 903)/1497. Although the dates given in the Satvêni do not generally stand criticism, nevertheless, as there were nine generations of the Imams after 650/1252, we can assume that Gharîb Shâh, or Mustansîr III, flourished not later than the end of the IX/XVth c., and thus the original version of the Haft-bâb of Abû Ishâq was written about that time.

This original HBAI is divided into seven chapters, with the same headings as those in the KP. The story of his own conversion which Abû Ishâq narrates in the first bâb, surely is of very limited interest to anybody except to himself, or people connected with him. For the religiously inclined reader who looks only for instruction, and not for lyrics, it is perfectly useless. Most probably both the compiler of the (pseudo-) HBAI, and the author of the KP held an opinion like this. The former simply omitted it, replacing it with the most important second bâb of the HBBS. The author of the KP appears to be a more ambitious man, who probably had a very high opinion of his own scholarly attainments. Instead of rejecting this uninteresting first chapter, he conceived quite an extraordinary idea to turn this story of an obscure rustic Ismaili from Eastern Persia into an autobiographic account of the experiences of the great poet, traveller, philosopher, and missionary of Ismailism, Nâsirî Khusrâw himself.

It would probably be wrong to attribute to the editor any unfair motives. Surely, if his motives were not really pious, he could easily have attributed the work to himself. And yet he had not even done anything to preserve the memory of his own name, which seems to be completely forgotten. Most probably, being rather uncritical and too enthusiastic, he was himself misled by the spurious autobiography of Nâsirî, and the apocryphal works of which there was probably never any scarcity. Anyhow, his success was really brilliant: the work of an obscure author, which probably would have been forgotten very soon, has become through his ruse one of the most sacred books* of the Ismailis of the Upper Oxus districts, and has been carefully preserved, in many copies.

An analysis of the text of the KP, and its comparison with the text of the (pseudo-) HBAI are already given above, on pp. lii-lvi. Here it is sufficient to add a review of the most important discrepancies between the text of the KP and the original version.¹ The time has not arrived yet to give a complete list of all the minor and less important variants, because the text of the KP, as given in this volume, is based only on two very imperfect copies, and cannot be regarded as absolutely reliable. On the other hand, the copy of the original HBAI, which was received from Hunza, is also extremely imperfect, containing many obvious mistakes and omissions of words and sentences, in addition to terrible orthography and almost hopeless perversions of Arabic quotations. It appears, however, that such variants almost never interfere with the contents of the books, and are rather immaterial from this point of view.

It may be added that, as a rule, the present copy of the original HBAI shows great passion for brevity, omitting the usual blessings accompanying the names of the Prophet or the Imams, or introductory Arabic formulas with the quotations from the Coran (such as qāla'l-lāh ta'ālā, or qāla Rasūlu'l-lāh, etc.). It clearly avoids poetical quotations which are so numerous in the KP. Often when one is given it is written in such a way that it is not easy at first sight to see that it is poetry.

Here is a complete analysis of the alterations which the editor of the Kalāmi Pīr has introduced into the text of the original version of the Haft-bābi Abū Ishāq.

The initial Arabic passage on p. 8 is an interpolation, and the text begins with Shukr wa sipās . . . to line 11, ending with . . . khūd andākht. On p. 9 the text is continued on lines 5 to 8 (. . . rasānad), and then is continued again on line 13. It is interesting that the editor of the KP manipulated the text in such a way as to make the verse of the Coran XIII, 8 to refer to himself, while in the original HBAI it refers to God. The name of the author, Bū Ishāq is found in the passage corresponding with line 14; it is also interesting to note that in the Arabic invocation, "may God establish it (the da'wat)", etc., the text gives thabbata-humā, i.e. both, the da'wat and the author! The end of the muqaddima is the same, except for some unimportant variants in wording.

In the First bâb, after the heading, only the first sentence belongs to the original, up to ahwâli in banda ân bûd ki, which is here repeated on p. 12, line 14, and from here to the end the texts agree, except in occasional short interpolations. Thus the experience of a young Persian Ismaili, seeking after knowledge, was planted by the editor upon the 77 years old sage, Nâsiri Khusraw. The interpolations are: on p. 12, line 15 (man 'arâfa . . .). On p. 14, l. 6—wâjib ast ki û-râ bi-dânad; lines 12 to 18 (wa qisṣa'i . . . to . . . padhīruft), and line 19 (dar ṭâqi . . .) to p. 15, line 1 (. . . Allâh); on p. 15, line 16 to l. 17 (ba-hukmi . . . mubîn), in addition to a few minor variants. It appears that the end of line 17 is a miṣrâ', and should be read: 'aql sargardân-u man hayrân-u ṣabr-am munhazim. On p. 16 there are again many minor variants. On line 13 the words nâmi man Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ'st are omitted, and the name of the Ismaili missionary is not mentioned at all. On lines 18–19 omitted from awwal . . . to . . . khabar dâda ki.

On p. 17, line 3, instead of the name of Mustansîr bi'l-lâh, Khwâja Qâsim riḍwânul-lâhi 'alay-him ajma'in is given (not clear, why the Plural is used). On line 4, after the word bi-rasîdam, is added wa ma'dhûn shudam. After this all is omitted to line 15 (. . . chi maḥâl).

It is thus clear that the author was a modest ma'dhûn, who was promoted by the Mediæval hujjat Khwâja Qâsim, somewhere in Persia.

The beginning of the Second Chapter suffered very little, and only minor variants occur. It must be noted that as a rule the original author, Bû Ishâq, prefers to quote different hadîths and even verses of the Coran in Persian translation, but the editor of the KP invariably restores their Arabic text, and adds a few more Arabic passages on his own account.

The portion which is omitted in the passage which is not printed in the text of the KP (p. 20) occupies just over 11 small pages (end 18 to beg. 30 of the Hunza copy), as mentioned above.

On p. 21 (line 5) Imam Zayd is called the son of Imam Zaynu'l-'âbidîn. Passages which are omitted in the original are: lines 8–11 (chunânchi . . . bâshad); 12 (wa ra'y . . . khilâfat-râ). On lines 13–14 the text is bad in the KP: for dar 'aṣrî, etc., it is necessary to read dar har 'aṣrî, which makes a great difference. On p. 22 are interpolated: lines 2–4 (nîz . . . dawri û), lines 5–7 (ya'nî . . . shawand). On p. 23 the fantastic story about the dispute of the sons of Imam Ja'far Ṣâdiq is entirely omitted. Instead of it there is only a short sentence, stating that after Imam Ja'far the Imam was Ismâ'il, not Mûsâ Kâzîm.

ba rūzi ākhir); p. 24, l. 16 to p. 25, l. 13 (wa ḥadrati rastagār); lines 15–17 (Imām hamisha . . . mubīn); p. 26, line 4 to l. 9 (rūzi . . . nist); p. 26, l. 10 to p. 27, l. 8 (ḥaqq-rā ba Muḥiqq . . . as-salām); p. 27, l. 11 to p. 45, l. 2 (wa marḡi kasī . . . shindāsand). This long passage is mostly compiled from Ithna-‘ashari sources; it is also absent in the newer version of the HBAI, as is shown above (p. liii). On p. 45 the Arabic sentence on lines 17–19 is omitted, as also lines 3–5 on p. 46 (wa Khudāyi . . . qawlu-hu ta’ālā). Only a few sentences, which follow the end of line 13, are much amplified in the KP (not in the printed text). From p. 47, line 19 to p. 48, l. 9 (ba-ḥukmi . . . ishān) omitted in the original. The end of the third bāb is badly perverted. On p. 49, lines 6–7, the story is about Ismā’il son of Abraham, not Ismā’il b. Ja’far, and instead of the name of Mūsā Kāzim there appears Ishāq (Isaac). From line 8 to 13 (ya’nī . . . wa paydā) the text is an interpolation, as also lines 15–16 (naql . . . namūdand). On p. 50, lines 17–19 (wa man . . . rasīd) are inserted instead of the original passage, given in the footnote 8 on p. 43 of the translation. Though the new HBAI stops here, the original version adds the most important passage (cf. note 1 on p. 44 of the Translation) which runs as follows: wa Sayyid-nā niz badān ḥadrat rasīd wa ‘ināyati tamām dar kāri ū raft, wa farzandi ū Mawlā-nā Nizār ki naṣṣi Imāmat bar ū būd ba Sayyid-nā supurd, wa ū-rā ḥujjati Daylamān wa Tārim wa ān ḥawālī kard. Thus we can see that according to the ideas of Bū Ishāq, it was Imam Nizār himself whom Imam Mustanṣir entrusted to Sayyid-nā. Though this passage is far clearer than that in the KP and (pseudo-) HBAI, yet it is not quite satisfactory from the stylistical point of view, and most probably is corrupted by scribes.

Further on, on l. 2 there is, of course, no reference to “Āl wa Ḥaydarābād”, both fictitious places. There are many small variants in the subsequent lines. The list of the Imams ends with Mustanṣir (III), and the concluding invocations are slightly different in their wording.

The Fourth bāb is copied quite faithfully, and though there are many small variants, some of which are important yet it seems to be quite free from interpolations, or substantial omissions.

The Fifth bāb begins quite all right,* again with verbal variants, but from p. 60 interpolations appear again. Thus p. 60, l. 6 to l. 9 (chunān-ki . . . bi-kash); lines 17–18 (Khudāy-rā . . . hāl); p. 61, lines 5–8 (sharīf niz . . . ta’ālā); lines 10–11 (ū mubīn . . . badīn); lines 12–13 (ya’nī . . . dawri ū); line 16 (ḥadīth . . . as-salām), and the last line. On p. 62 the first line; lines 4–6 (Khudāy-rā . . . guftand); lines 7–8 (ma’rifat . . . ta’ālā); line 9 (har chī . . . ūst); p. 62, line 11 to p. 63, l. 3 (ḥabḍa’i . . . paydā shawad); in addition to several verbal insertions, the bayt on line 12 is also an interpolation on p. 63. On p. 64, lines 12-15 (yâftand . . . gashtand). On p. 65 important alterations are introduced by the editor in lines 5-8. In this passage (which is also given in a slightly different form in the pseudo-HBAI), on lines 7 sq., the references are not to Mawlâ-nâ 'Alî, but to Sayyid-nâ; the text is differently worded. Lines 9 and 10 are an interpolation. On p. 66, lines 3 to 14 are much altered. The original text is given in the Appendix, on p. 115. There are minor insertions in the last three lines of the page.

On p. 67, lines 2 to 7 are omitted. It is very strange that the quatrain (lines 6-7), containing the most important reference to the Imams Mustansîr and Salâmu'l-lâh (cf. above, p. xxiii) is omitted. As it appears in its proper place in the (pseudo-) HBAI it is possible to suspect that it is wrongly omitted in the Hunza copy of the Orig. HBAI, but in reality should be there.

Further on, on the same page, the quotation on l. 10 is omitted, as also on line 13. The end of the last line should be read: . . . hujjat wa dâ'iyyân and.

On p. 68 the first two lines are omitted; also lines 4-5 (nûri . . . asrâr bûd). In the original version the fifth bâb ends here. On line 12, after the word bâshad, follows: chunânchi dar zamâni Khudâvand 'alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm bûd. After it there is a short concluding invocation. The twenty-one pages which are added here are entirely an interpolation by the editor of the KP, or his predecessor, because the (pseudo-) HBAI also contains the same matters to a considerable extent (cf. p. lv).

The Sixth bâb is again almost entirely free from interpolations, except for p. 91, lines 7-15 (ba-hukmi . . . aşlan). Here the editor of the KP in many places abbreviates the original text, omitting some words and short sentences.

The Seventh bâb is again to a very great extent an interpolation. Up to p. 99 there are only verbal variants, but from there are found longer insertions: lines 10-19 (qawlu-hu . . . end of the last line). On p. 100, line 7 (mu'allimân . . . na-gardânand); lines 15-17 (wa in . . . 'alîm). On p. 102 the text of the passage (after the 17th line) which is omitted in the present edition, is the same as in the original (pp. 111-115 of the MS). On p. 103, line 4 the name of Mustansîr bi'l-lâh is not mentioned in the original version, but the text generally agrees literally, and it is possible that the quatrain was purposely omitted for some reason. The passage beginning on line 5 (chunânchi . . .) and ending on p. 104, line 18 (. . . khûd) is interpolated. The last line on p. 104 and lines 1-9 (to . . . tayyiba) belong to the original text, but after this a long passage again is inserted up to p. 111, line 4 (. . . hâwiya). As has already been mentioned in footnote 1 on p. 107 of the Translation, the change is abrupt; now it is clear that this is due to the negligent handling of the text on the part of the interpolator.

Further interpolations: p. 111, lines 10–15 (ad-dunyâ . . . mathal), and lines 15–17 (chunânchi . . . shâbb). The beginning of line 18 should be read: wa sarâb nistî-yî haqîqî ast, amma dar wahmî mardum ast . . . In addition to verbal variants and small insertions on p. 112 there are an Arabic quotation on line 10, and a bayt on line 17. The bayt on p. 113, line 4 is also not original. On p. 114, line 4 the sentence chunânchi . . . az man is added. The work ends with the third line on p. 115. There is added in the original half a page of the usual concluding prayers, etc.

The student who will mark out all these interpolations in his copy will have an almost complete text of the original version of the real Haft-bâbi Abû Ishâq, except for two comparatively short passages, one dealing with controversy, and presenting absolutely nothing essential to the doctrine, and the other containing nothing but fantastic speculations about the symbolism of numbers. The minor variants are numerous, but they do not substantially alter the sense and the spirit of the original theories.

KALÂMI PÎR

TRANSLATION

In the name of God, the Merciful, the Compassionate !

Praise be to God, the Lord of the worlds, the goal of the pious : and benediction and blessing be upon His Apostle, Muḥammad, with all his successors, the Good and the Pure ; and upon his Waṣī, and his "progeny" (dhurriyyat), for all time, eternally !

In the name of the present Lord of the World and the Interpreter of the Divine Will,—may God uphold his word, and help (us) to be obedient to him !

Thanks and praises to the Creator whose light of Divine help (ta'yîd), in a spark of enlightenment made the Primal Formative Conscious Cosmic Principle ('Aqlî kull) seeing, speaking, and hearing by the light of His recognition (ma'rifat). Through these the 'Aqlî kull could see and understand the mysteries of the Universe and the realities (ḥaqā'iq) of this illusory world, conveying this knowledge to the trusted angels and the preachers (dā'î) of the path of faith. He made it the Proof of His Divinity for this world, and its inhabitants ; by His overpowering might and irresistible command He lifted into the air, on the end of the spear of His omnipotence, the rebels and miscreants of mankind, and threw them at the feet of the weakest of His obedient worshippers. It is stated in the Coran and in the ḥadīths of the Prophet : (one must believe) (Cor. IV, 135) "in God, His angels, His revealed books, His Apostles, and the Last Day".¹ And the expression "the Last Day" refers to 'Alī and his successors.² And God is the Lord, the One deserving (praise), the Living, the Eternal. On Him depends the manifestation (zuhûr) and revelation (izhâr) of the mystery of the infinite embryo of the world of spirits and of continuous creation. And the foundation, or the principle,³ and origin of Imamat, whence comes the mystery of Prophethood (nubuwwat), has never been interrupted. As the Prophet (blessing be upon him!) said: "To Him returns the commandment and every manifestation (kashf), as otherwise..."¹ [9]² One accepts Imam^{at} by its obvious signs (nahj) and the preaching (riwâyat) of the hujjats of the time; and the mystery of Imam^{at} becomes manifest as a blessing, just as the clouds of God's generosity which He sends, and just as saintliness ('iffat) of His messengers and their (sincere) followers. By the mercy of God, in accordance with what is said (Cor. VI, 3): "God knows your secret conduct and your plain, and He knows what ye earn",—every one of the faithful, following the principle (Cor. II, 286): "It (the soul) shall have what it has earned, and it shall owe what has been earned from it",—will become the slave of what is true (mustahaqq). God, make us to know what Thou likest and what pleasest Thou!

² The expression khawst in this sense appears very frequently in this work, as in the Wajhi dîn, in which it is very common.

Incomparable glory belongs to the Proof (hujjat) of the Allhighest, i.e. Muḥammad the Muṣṭafâ (God bless him and his descendants, and accept them!), who is the greatest and the best of all prophets. Riding his horse of persuasion on the course of preaching, he has given the people fear and hope in order to bring them out of the darkness of ignorance and error, and make them come to God with the help of the light of Divine knowledge (ma'rifat), to walk along the highway to Paradise (ṣirâṭu'l-mustaqīm), purifying them thoroughly (Cor. XXXIII, 33). Said God (Cor. III, 30): "Verily, God has chosen Adam, and Noah, and Abraham's people, and 'Imrân's people above the world,—line of descendants in which one succeeds the other,—and God hears and knows". God called the people on the earth to embrace His religion through the medium (hijâb)³ of his Prophet. The ways of God are the best!

On many occasions brothers and friends, the followers of the right guiding religion (da'wati hâdiya) asked this humble slave of the Pure Imams (i.e. the compiler of this treatise) to write a book on religion, referring to the verse of the Coran (XIII, 8): "Verily, thou art a warner, guiding all the people". And this humblest slave of the truly leading and rightly guided religion of Ismailism (da'wati hâdiya'i mahdiyya'i Ismâ'iliyya),—may God establish it firmly in the Eastern parts of the world and in the Western!—(prayed) God to help him with His eternal assistance and constant guidance, to keep him away from those who err and commit mistakes, from the devils of the time, and the Antichrists of the day,—those who in appearance accept the teaching of the prophets and preachers, but who in reality are content, like beasts, with straw and leaves of trees. They fall therefore, from the human state to that of speechless animal as is said in the Coran (XXV, 46): "They are only like the beasts,—nay, they err more from the way".—So he (the author) after offering thanks, praises, and glorification to God, [10] explains here—in an unskilled way—all that he has learnt about the ways of the righteous men (muhiqqân) of his day. Let this book be a help to the community of the faithful, to the beginners, and the newly initiated (mustajibân), in their progress. May they mention this humble slave in their prayers of thank to God, praying for mercy and help to the Lord of the World and of Time, the Creator of mankind and demons,—may His power be exalted and His authority be extolled! Verily, He is the most reliable of the helpers and assistants,—we rely on Our Lord only!

This treatise is composed of seven chapters:—

- I. On the biography of the author, and the circumstances under which he joined the true religion of the Ismailis.
- II. Demonstration of the futility of the doctrine of the seventy-two (erring) sects.
- III. Proving that in the world no sect, except this one attains salvation, and that this one only is true.
- IV. On the meaning of Prophethood, the office of the Waṣī of the Prophet, on revelation of the Coran and its allegorical interpretation,—I will explain this with the help of God.
- V. On the meaning of Imamat; the periods of time during which the Imam remains hidden or manifest; and on the meaning of the Great Resurrection.
- VI. On the spiritual and the physical world, on the beginning of things, and their ultimate goal, and on the degrees of spiritual progress, from the newly initiated believer, to the Imam.
- VII. On the allegorical interpretation of some prescriptions of the religion; of some verses of the Coran; on various instructive matters; also on the reasons for this book being divided into seven chapters; and on some parallels between the phenomena in the Universe and in human nature.

All which is true and correct, is what Our Lord,—be exalted His greatness, and be extolled His mention!—has put into the mouth of this humble slave. And all that,—God forbid!—is incorrect, depends on ill luck and temptations, which befell the author. "What befalls thee of good is from God, and what befalls thee of evil is from thyself" (Cor. IV, 81).

May our Lord help all His slaves to comply with the commands of the true religion, may He turn away their hearts [11] from what is bad and improper, and make them enlightened, seeing and hearing by the light of the knowledge of the cosmic Conscious Formative Principle ('Aqlî kull). Verily, He is the best of all helpers and assistants !

and all verses containing prescriptions or prohibitions, mention of things permissible and things forbidden. I studied the different schools of reading the Coran, in their variations accepted in different cities, which were centres of learning. I found some books by Imam Muḥammad Bâqir,—blessing of God be on him!—the Kashfī kabīr,¹ or the “Great Revelation”, and the other Jāmi‘i ṣaghīr,² or the “Smaller Collection”. Similarly, I found the book Shāmīl, or “Comprising everything”,³ and a manuscript written by my ancestor, Imam⁴ ‘Alī ibn Mūsā Ridā, having discovered it amongst the works of Imam Muḥammad b. Ḥasan ‘Askarī. I also read other books which were being used by the people at that time. Then [12] I started the study of the four ancient books, i.e. the Torah of Moses, Gospels (Injīl) of Jesus, Psalms of David, and the Books (Suḥuf) of Abraham,—all being the Word of God, addressed to the people of that time. Then I found and studied the books of Sh-m-r-qīs, of Sijūrān-s,⁵ and of the younger Ptolemy, the Jew.⁶ Six more years passed in this. Then afterwards, turning again to the disciplines belonging to Islamic religion, I became very interested in philosophy, logic, laws of religious and physical nature, in the most learned Organon, in medicine, politics, and in magic figures.⁷

² An early work, al-Jāmi‘u’s-ṣaghīr, is ascribed to Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad b. Sa‘īd ath-Thaqafī, who was a contemporary of ‘Alī himself. Cf. Kashfū’l-ḥujub by Kantūrī (Calcutta, 1330), No. 758. It deals with fiqh.

³ Apparently quite fictitious. There are many works called Shāmīl, but none of them is ascribed to Imam Muḥammad Bâqir.

⁴ The title of “Imam”, prefixed to the names of these Ithnā-‘ashari saints, shows that the compiler slavishly copied the passage from a non-Ismaili work. No Ismaili of any sub-sect regards either ‘Alī Ridā or Ḥasan ‘Askarī as Imams.

⁵ These names are either quite fictitious, or are mutilated in the course of transcription to such an extent as to become quite unrecognizable.

Be it the Torah, the New Testament, Psalms, or the Coran.¹

I have been thinking for seventy-two years, day and night, only to realize now that I know nothing. I performed four hajj pilgrimages,—two great hajjs, and two lesser, of Bayti ma'mûr, and 'umra.² During these pilgrimages I distributed all my property to the poor and needy. In all my life I never broke the fast, but fasted continuously. Neither when travelling, nor when resting, did I ever show anger or displeasure to anybody, but was always polite to every one. I never criticized any religion, nor its founder, except for the well-known miscreants (ahli ta'dâdd) and their false doctrine,—in short, I never spoke badly of any one.

When I reached the age of maturity, my soul was seized with a passion for knowledge of God, and of His worship in accordance with the hadîth: "Whoever knows himself, he recognizes his Lord", and "every one is born to follow a true religion (fitrat)".³ I was so burdened with my thoughts that sometimes, feeling this burden (of thoughts) unbearable, I used to go to the hills and deserts. Sometimes I appealed to the people who in appearance were very different from me, thinking I might find them sympathetic, and asked for their advice. But these people advised me to take up the usual (zâhir) studies. Anyhow, I did my best in these studies, but my heart was more and more consumed by the fire of disappointment, as I could not find what I was searching for,—my way [13] to the One who is to be worshipped. So long as it was possible to endure, I profited by the ordinary (zâhir) disciplines, but my soul started to groan: "Oh, we are sad". And the heart started to moan: "Oh, we grieve". So I wept over my entirely wasted life, so much that at times it appeared as if my depressed soul was parting from the body, and praying for help; and my bleeding heart caused tears to burst from my eyes in longing for refuge and solitude.

Thus, I was confused in every possible way, thinking about the purpose for which the prophets had come,—of whom they taught, and whose knowledge they preached? What are the seeds of love which are sown in the heart and the soul? Who is the Creator of all creations, and who is the Father who produced life? What is the ultimate purpose of bringing into being the things which did not exist? In every class of living creatures some species are higher than others, and in those (highest) species again some particular form is superior to others. For instance, amongst animals—the lion, amongst birds—the falcon, amongst jewels—the ruby; and the case is the same with all other things. Hence, who is at present the noblest man in mankind, and how is it possible to know him? How is it possible to get out of the abyss of ignorance, which is real Hell, to the open space of knowledge, which is eternal Paradise? By whose guidance can one reach Him? Who is the friend from whom one can obtain the information which nobody in the whole world appears to possess?

² This term is applied to the ceremonies of the pilgrimage which is undertaken when the pilgrim already resides for some time in Mecca, and has already performed the ordinary hajj.

³ About the fitrat cf. further, pp. 103, 104, 114 (text). Cf. also A. J. Wensinck, op. cit., pp. 42, 214.

A thousand friends who are ignorant of God
May be sacrificed for the sake of a stranger who knows Him.

The way to the knowledge of God is not the road which may be trod by the feet of individual reason and comparison (qiyās). Reason only realizes that this way cannot be found merely with the help of reasoning (qiyās), without anybody's instruction (ta'lim). If we suppose that this way can be found with the help of the reasoning of an individual mind, we know that in the questions of intelligence, i.e. in the matters in which one is guided by reasoning, every individual intellect obstinately refuses to follow another, and to submit to it. Every one decides for himself. It is obvious then that the way of attaining knowledge (ma'rifat) is different for every individual, and may be opposite to that of others. Therefore, the God to whom every one thus finds his way [14] must be different in every case from the gods of others, and in such a case many gods may appear,—the ugliness of such a situation needs no comment.

Taking all this into consideration, it follows that every individual mind in the question of the knowledge of God should follow the mind which is the most perfect of all intellects, receiving special assistance from God Himself. Without his help no individual intellect can acquire the knowledge (ma'rifat) of God. Such an intellect is the Cosmic Formative Intelligence ('Aqli kull),—all individual reasons are subject to it. And this is the "Proof" (hujjat) of God the Allhighest. All creatures are obliged to know it. And it is to be manifest always, because if it were absent for a while, creatures would lose the proof of the existence of God, and would take up their own reasoning and deductions. Then nobody would be able to find the real way to the Allhighest, and would sink into error and impiety.

It is narrated in the story of Adam, Eve, and the cursed Iblis: "God taught Adam the names of all things, and then presented the things to the angels" (Cor. II, 29), but the angels said: "No knowledge is ours but what Thou Thyself hast taught us" (ibid., 30). It is narrated that Adam instructed angels as to these names, and "declared to them their names" (ibid., 31), as also the story of "and when We said to the angels: prostrate before Adam,—and they prostrated, save or Iblīs" (ibid.). He did not prostrate before the pure Light God the Allhighest, "he was of the jinn, and revolted from the biddings of his Lord" (Cor. XVIII, 48). Being originally jinn, and proud of his origin, he did not prostrate before "His Light", and was punished for ever.

But that Light exists in the world, by the command God! Adam committed a sin, but returned to God, saying, "O our Lord, we have wronged ourselves" (Cor. VII, 2); and God accepted his repentance. After Adam's having committed sin came God's instruction, when He gave Adam the sacred formulas (kalīma) which were written on the arches of the Throne of God: "There is no deity but God, Muḥammad His Apostle, [15] the Commander of the Faithful, 'Alī, is the Friend of God, and Fāṭima is the daughter of the Apostle God".¹ Then He accepted Adam's repentance.

Thus it appears that these formulas were revealed to God; and the deductions of an individual reason, qiyās, may be seen from the story of Iblīs,—curse be upon him!—who protested against arguing: "Thou hast created me from fire, and him Thou hast created out of clay" (Cor. VII, 11). When God ordered him to prostrate before Adam, he refused, saying that he was a fiery substance, while Adam was of dust, that the substance of fire was higher than that of earth, and the superior should not submit to the inferior. "The first who reasoned (qās) was Iblīs,—curse be upon him". He said that prostration is due to God only, and this was the cause of his being cursed for ever: "Then go forth therefrom, for, verily, upon thee is the curse unto the day of judgment" (Cor. XXXVIII, 78-9).

Let us now return to the original narrative. Thus I became convinced that in reality I had acquired no knowledge. I felt utterly depressed and full of anxiety, repeating continually to myself the verse of the Coran (XXVII, 63): "Is not He the One who answers the distressed when he calls upon Him? And then the sun, of mercy and help suddenly shone from the sky of the Divine bounty of Our Lord,—prostration and glorification be at his mention!—which lifted into the air of His Lord this stray atom of dust.

Once I attended an assembly in which the conversation was about the knowledge of God (ma'rifat). Every one had something genuine to relate, and every one expressed his opinion on the subject, as he understood it. I felt very sad, and hot tears ran down my cheeks. I reflected: "Why do they smite cold iron, what are they seeking? Why do they not seek after the real matter? How long will they run after their own fantasies, never turning towards the command of God, never answering His demand, in accordance with His command: "We have counted everything in the Imâmi mubîn." (Cor. XXXVI, 11)? My mind was occupied with these sad thoughts, my self-control was at breaking point, and I was very perplexed, when suddenly a person entered, and joined the people who were present. I did not know him, but his outward appearance suggested great piety. As soon as I noticed him, I wished [16] to find out who he was, and followed what he was saying. From the little that he said, one would have noticed at once that he knew the secret of the Water of Life, and of Eternal Existence. My heart told me: now that you have found the end of the thread, do not let it slip from your hand,—search, and do not miss the chance by not going after this man.

Hold firmly the belt of those who go up,—
Do not miss the advice of the wise.

When he left that assembly, I followed him resolutely. I asked him: "Man of angelic bearing, what is thy name, who are thy people, and where art thou going? I am sick, and full of sadness, I need medicine to cure my pain. My sickness is strange: it is neither headache, nor weakness, nor fever. Nothing on earth can cure it, as it has come from heaven".

When he saw my sickly countenance, he at once gave me the medicine, saying: "It is good for thee that we, being God's physicians, take no remuneration from anybody. We are fresh water, not foul food. But tell me, from whence cometh thy illness?"

I replied to him: "My sickness comes from this: God is one and the Prophet is one; therefore, all other religious leaders must be false and futile". He said: "Yes, so it is, and the true religious leader, Imam, the true religion, and the real proof of truth is only one, and the revealed book of God is one. My name is Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ,¹ and I am appointed in this province (jazīra) to lead those who are lost in the desert of errors, out to recognition of the Imam of the day,—exalted be his mention,—making them see and hear the great proof (hujjati a'zam), thus ultimately making them reach the eternal Paradise in future life".

I spent some time with him, and received great assistance, and, ultimately, had the lucky chance of going to kiss the threshold of the house of the Lord, the Ruler of the world, the greatest Proof (ḥujjat) of God the Allhighest, Creator of the world and of humanity. It is about him that it is said: "The first thing that God created was his light", i.e. the light of the Prophet. And also: "The first thing that God created was the Pen (Qalam)". It is [17] also said that: "The first thing that God created was the Reason (ʿAql)".

The One who is the Giver of bread to His slaves, Sees what happens with every one of His followers.

Thus I had the honour to be presented to the great Lord, Mawlâ-nâ al-Mustansîr bi'l-lâh,¹—prayers and blessings of God be upon him! I was received with great honour and great favour. I was like an atom of dust upon which the Sun shone from the height of its glory.

After being treated with distinction which was greater every day, I was greatly honoured and royally favoured in being appointed the chief dâ'i (dâ'i'd-du'ât) of Khorasan. After this I remained for some time at the court of the Lord of "kâf and nûn" (i.e. the Creator). On one occasion the Imam summoned the ḥujjats and the dâ'is. In his address the Imam asked Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, whom to put in charge of Badakhshân. My grandfather,² Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, suggested this humble slave. When Our Lord, the Imam, glanced in my direction, my heart became filled with light, and I fainted. He kindly said to me: "Sayyid Nâsir, I appoint thee the ḥujjat of Badakhshân,—God help thee". I kissed the earth in complete obedience, received my instructions, and started for Badakhshân, through Balkh. I made a sign, and hills came to meet me,—this was the miracle of the Imam. So it happened, all that was destined and decided, as it is with all human affairs,—otherwise what could an ordinary mortal do? So that I had to carry on, fostering the guiding and rightful Ismaili preaching,—"what God wills, exists, and what God does not will, never comes into existence".

Now, may this humble slave write in this book all that Our Lord,—great and Almighty He is,—puts in his mind. Verily, He is the best of all helpers and assistants. To Him is our account, and He, the One, is all that we need,—Our Lord!

² This is simply an expression of respect, as it is understood now by the Ismailis of Central Asia, not implying real relation.

CHAPTER II

On the futility of the doctrine of the seventy-two (erring) sects.

People in the world can be divided into two different groups. First of all they can be divided into two kinds : atheists, who neither belong to [18] any recognized religion, nor follow any of the great prophets ; they even do not search for a true religion. The other group is that of the people who belong to different religions. It is obvious that if there would be no necessity in one who possesses the knowledge of God, i.e. in the prophet, or in one whose reason is more perfect than the reasons of ordinary individuals of his time,—in such a case every one would have to rely only on his own reason whenever he tried to acquire the knowledge of God. It is well known how greatly reasons vary in strength, some of them being stronger than others. If a weak mind were capable of understanding the same matters as a stronger one, there would be no real difference between weak and strong reasons. But, as we have seen, there is much difference between them, and the weaker ones have to follow the stronger ones, so that, in following them, they attain a higher degree of perfection. And it is necessary that such gradation of reasons should culminate in one, the highest, higher than which there should be none, and which directly, without anything intervening, receives the Divine guidance (ta'wîd) from God Himself. He is the "proof" (hujjat) of the Real God (Hagg), which must be available at every period of time. If there were other reasons, which similarly receive direct guidance from God, there would be the same confusion, as when relying on ordinary reasons. At every period many religions would thus spring up, and the ordinary people would remain uncertain as to which religion they should follow. Thus it is necessary that there should be one religion always, and one only, just as there must be one hujjat always, i.e. the human witness of the existence of God and of His commandments.

We now take up the question of the people who belong to different religions. We have to mention first that in every millennium (approximately), God sends a preacher (Nâtiq), who, at the outset, starts preaching the highest and absolutely true religion (haqiqat). But when his preaching has no effect, either because the people do not accept it, or do not understand it, or deliberately oppose it out of pride, as mentioned in the Coran, the Nâtiq receives the order to hide his teaching in allegories. He thus throws a veil of greatness and glory over it, and chains men, hand and foot, with strict and rigid prescriptions of an ordinary religion (sharī'at). He, the Nātiq, then always raises a Waşī to remain after himself; the Waşī is the guardian of the inner meaning (ta'wīl) of the prescriptions of the sharī'at. Both the revealed law (tanzīl) of the Nātiq, and the explanation of the Divine allegories (ta'wīl) of the Waşī, contain direct commandments concerning the Imam of the day, who is the lord of 18,000 worlds,—exalted be his mention!

When this sharī'at and this *ṭarīqat*¹ remain for a long time among the people, they take them for [19] the original and absolute truth, ḥaqīqat. They gradually cease to derive any longer much advantage from its formal side (ẓāhir). Then a new Nātiq is sent, who cancels the rules and laws (sharī'at) given by his predecessor, and, first of all, starts preaching the ḥaqīqat. And if the people again do not respond to this preaching, he lays the foundations of another allegorical system (mithāl), and again binds the people with the chains of strict laws. This is because the people, who are incapable of following the doctrine of the ḥaqīqat, are like cattle that are attracted only by straw and grass, but disregard the fruits. The obstinate animal needs a strong chain to bind it.

The new Nātiq similarly raises a Waşī to come after him. In these seven millennial periods, which form a part of a great cycle of 360,000 years, some 170,000 years, or about this, have already elapsed. At its end, during the last period of seven thousand years, the Great Resurrection was to arrive. There were six Nātiqs during it. The first of them was Adam, from Ceylon (Sarandīb); the second—Noah; the third—Abraham; the fourth—Moses; the fifth—Jesus; and the sixth—Muḥammad the Muṣṭafâ,—may God pray for him and his family, and bless him,—whose religion cancels those of all his predecessors. But the complete revelation was the "Great Rise" (Qiyāmatī qiyāmāt), at the end of the millennium which was his dawr. He himself said: "My community will become split after me into seventy-three sects. Seventy-two of them lead to perdition and error, and only one of them leads to salvation and peace".²

Every sect, of course, pretends to be the only true one. I made inquiries from representatives of those, whom I had the chance to meet. Some of them said : " We follow the example (sunnat) of the Prophet and the practice of the community (jamâ'at) ; we follow the Coran, the ḥadīths, the ijmā',¹ and the deduction by reasoning (qiyās) ". I asked these people : " Have you personally heard the explanation of the Coran and the ḥadīths from the Prophet himself, or from the people who personally learnt these from the Prophet ? "—They replied : " No ". Then I asked : " How did you come to know God from this Coran ? " ² They replied : " With the help of dictionaries ". I said : " There are many words in dictionaries which have a great number of meanings,—how do you select the right equivalent ? " They replied : " We accept the decision of experts (ijtihād), following those variants which withstand our criticism (ra'y wa qiyās) ". I asked them : " Do you not relate this ḥadīth : whoever interprets the Coran arbitrarily, commits absolute impiety (kufr) ? " [20] And also another ḥadīth : whoever falsely attributes a statement to me (i.e. the Prophet), will be seated in fire (in Hell) ? "

¹ This term occurs also on pp. 46, 69, 112 (text). The author uses it here as a synonym of the sharī'at, and it seems that it is introduced for stylistic purposes rather than for conveying a special meaning.

[The passage which is omitted here continues the same controversy, in the same strain. Every school of Islam interprets the Coran and ḥadīths in a different way, holds different opinions as to the fundamental principles of fiqh, etc., often contradicting themselves. Abū Ḥanīfa, e.g., regards allegorical interpretation of the Coran unlawful, and yet himself allegorically interprets such expressions as God's sitting on the 'arsh, explaining the latter as istilā' ; or yad, His hand, as qudrat, etc. Again, such authorities as Ghazālī and Fakhrū'd-dīn Rāzī are very doubtful as to the legal authoritativeness of the ijmā', or consensus of the faithful. Many authorities doubt the validity of qiyās, or deduction by analogy. The presence of so many doubtful points shows that the system is not completely sound.

After this the author takes up the question of the personal qualities of Abū Bakr, 'Umar, and 'Uthmān, apparently deriving many details of their biographies and characteristics from some Ithna-'ashari works. He refers to various spurious ḥadīths which were circulated to support the claims of the early caliphs.

The author then takes up a brief review of the biography of the Prophet, emphasizing the miraculous element, his struggle against the mūnāfiqs, and his relations with 'Alī. The latter's rights to succeed the Prophet are vigorously defended. His superhuman knowledge was generally recognized, and even his enemies and rivals referred to him in case of difficulties.

All these controversial matters are treated in a rather unrestrained and high-pitched tone, while giving absolutely nothing new or specifically Ismailitic. Therefore there is no need to restore this lacuna in full.]

The revelation and the interpretation of the Coran cannot be connected with any one but the Prophet and his legitimate successor, the Waṣī. And no one can be his Waṣī except the one who is nearest to him. In the case of the Prophet there was no one nearer to him than 'Alī,—prostration and glorification be due at his mention! Those authorities who allegorically interpreted the Coran, such as Ibn 'Abbās and others, merely taught what they had learnt from 'Alī. His discourses, in the form of allegorical interpretation (dar tarīqati ta'wīl), are so well known that there is no need to mention them here. There are also many ḥadīths which are related from the Prophet concerning 'Alī. For instance: "I am the city of knowledge, and 'Alī is the gate of it"; or "Thou (i.e. 'Alī) art in like relation to me as Aaron to Moses"; "Thy flesh is my flesh, thy blood is my blood".

² The term used in the original, Kalām, obviously means here the Coran—Kalāmu'l-lāh.

Someone may ask you about the Qā'im,¹ or the One who is the source of the ta'wīl, or allegorical interpretation, One "whose sandals have caught in each other",² or about the story of the events at Ghadīr Khumm, or the meaning of the verse of the Coran (IV, 62): "Obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those in authority amongst you". Reply: someone asked the Prophet, —who are these your "those in authority?"—He pointed at Our Lord 'Alī, and said (Cor. V, 60): "Verily, God and the Prophet are your protectors (walī)".³ Once the Prophet was asked: "What is faith (īmān)?" He replied: "I believe in God, His angels, His (revealed) books, His Apostle, and the Last Day".⁴ Here the "Last Day" means Our Lord 'Alī, because the Prophet, the one who conveys the revelation (tanẓīl), is the "First Day". Therefore the Waṣī, who gives the allegorical interpretation (ta'wīl), must be the "Last Day",—and faith in him is obligatory. There are, as has been said, many verses in the Coran and many ḥadīths to the same effect.

We have explained here, from the point of view both of logic and tradition, that when any one falsely and without right assumes claims of being an Imam or a leader, it means, in reality, that he has no faith in the "Last Day", which is mentioned by the Prophet, and that he has never had the faith. Thus he is an unbeliever (kāfir) and an outcast (murtadd).

² Allusion to the well-known story about the Prophet's putting right the sandals of 'Alī, who was then a child.

[21] May Our Lord help us, and save us from the devils in the form of false Imams !

There are some people who maintain that they are Shi'ites, the followers of Muṣṭafâ and Murtaḍâ, and of their successors. Are not they really good and respectable people ? So, I asked them: "And what is your belief ?" Their reply was that they believed in the commandment ('ahd') concerning the Imamât of Our Lord 'Alî, and they wondered whether he was to return (to this world in person). Other people believe in the Imamât of Zayd, son of Our Lord 'Alî.¹ Others again believe in the Imamât of Muḥammad ibn Ḥanafiyya, who is expected to return. All this is very amusing, because these persons were not appointed by a naṣṣ (or direct command), nor had they the Divine commandment ('ahd') regarding their Imamât; but their followers have invented theories (about them) which are bewildering to every sane man. Khilâfat becomes void when there is no explicit appointment, or special indications, or knowledge, or spiritual wisdom. God in His revealed Word said "The knowledge of God is recognition of the Imam of his time".² Because the Imam, being the proof (ḥujjat) of the existence of God, is always present, and conveys to mankind the knowledge of One.

Neither courage, nor daring, nor external piety, nor precedent, nor the agreement of the community, nor any practical considerations make the khilâfat valid. I would say that the condition is the caliph's being a descendant (of the Prophet) through Fâtima. He should be a true successor of his predecessors (dar 'ahd), and the only one of his time (dar 'aṣr). Some people say he need not necessarily be the son of his predecessor (dar 'ahd), and that it is possible that at a given moment there may be ten imams. Though the absurdity of such a belief is quite obvious, we have given in our preceding explanations, and in the statements above, a clear demonstration of the futility of such ideas. We will also mention this in the chapter devoted to the question of Imamât.

Other sects, again, believe in the return of Our Lord Ja'far (the Ṣâdiq).

But we believe that the meaning of Imamât is leadership of humanity, conveying to it the real knowledge (ma'rifati ḥaqiqi) of God (Khudâ), and of the ways leading to spiritual union with Him (Khudâ'i). Such a Guide is necessary at every period, as otherwise mankind [22] would remain in ignorance

¹ 'Alî, as is known, had no son called Zayd. Imam Zayd was the son of Ḥasan ibn 'Alî.

² This passage does not occur in the Coran. It may be noted that the author on many occasions, as will be seen further on, sometimes even quite systematically, regards various Arabic sentences as Coranic verses. Perhaps to some extent this may be due to the interference of the pious but ignorant scribes.

or in error, the knowledge of God would be neglected (mu'attal), and the Truth (kawni haqq) would disappear,—God save us from such beliefs!

God has also said: "... the day when We will call all men through their Guide (Imâm)" (Cor. XVII, 73), i.e. on the day of Judgment. And in a hadith it is also said by the Prophet: "If the earth remains without an Imam for even a moment, it will perish with all its population". This will also be explained in the chapter dealing with the question of Imamât.

Some other sects believe that Imamât continued until the time of Ḥasan 'Askarî, and from him it was transferred to his son Muḥammad, who is the promised Messiah (Mahdî), expected to come in the end of time. He is alive now, and has been so for more than five hundred years,¹ hidden in a cave, or well. He is soon going to come out of it. They tell of many fantastic things concerning his impending return, fix the time of his advent, and disclose that he will fulfil certain prophecies (shari').

To this I can reply: "If your Imam is coming at any time that he thinks best, and in any way he likes, of what use are all your calculations and prophecies about the time of his advent?" Besides, every normal man knows that no human being can live for such a long time, and cannot remain all this time hidden in a cave. They may try to bring forward the example of Noah, who lived about a thousand years, as mentioned in the Coran (XXIX, 13): "And he dwelt among them for a thousand years save fifty years". Or the story of the Ephesian Sleepers. To this I can reply: "All this needs an allegorical interpretation (ta'wil), and only with the help of it can be understood".

And if Muḥammad ibn Ḥasan 'Askarî was an Imam, it would have been most necessary for people to get into touch with him. Otherwise it would have resulted in a suspension of Imamât, for people in this world would have remained without knowledge of God (ma'rifat), having had no proof (hujjat) of His existence. Such an Imam would have been a source of great suffering to humanity, while the real purpose of the Imam is to be a source of Divine mercy to the world. But it is well known to everyone that nobody has ever come into touch with him, and no wonder,—[23] how can one come into touch with someone who does not exist?

[Here a few pages have been lost in the original MS. The passage deals with the story of the dispute which arose amongst the sons of Imam Ja'far Ṣâdiq immediately after his death, when all of them claimed Imamât for themselves. Ultimately they go to the Hajarul-aswad, the sacred stone in the corner of the Ka'ba, and ask it to decide the matter. And, surely, the stone begins to speak, at the prayer of Ismâ'il, showing a good knowledge of the Coran, and supporting Ismâ'il's rights against his brothers. (A similar miraculous story is usually narrated about Imam Zaynu'l-'âbidîn). Only Ismâ'il is the mustaqarr, or real hereditary Imam, and all other brothers are only "personal" or acting Imams, mustawda'. Mûsâ Kâzîm swears allegiance to Ismâ'il. They are both the same in their mission, not opposed one to the other, the difference being only outward.]¹

May Our Lord save all his faithful followers from the evil of those who follow the Devil, and may He make them to see, think, and hear by the light of His knowledge!

To him is our account to be given, and He is all that we need!

CHAPTER III

Explaining the truth that except for this true religion of the Ismailis there is no religion which secures salvation.

In the Second Chapter we have already found that everyone ought to have a religion, and that such a religion must be only that of the descendants of Muḥammad and 'Alī, in accordance with the command of God Himself (Cor. IV, 135): "(Believe in) God, His angels, His prophets, His books, and the Last Day",¹ and that the latter expression means Our Lord 'Alī and his successors, who are his direct descendants (dhurriyyat). Belief in them is obligatory. God the Allhighest says (Cor. IV, 62): "Obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those in authority amongst you", i.e. Murtaḍā 'Alī,—may God ennoble his countenance!²—this is according to the command of God (Cor. V, 60): "Verily, God and His Apostle are your protectors (walī)."³ Those who believe, are steadfast in prayer, give alms, and bow down". This means: I have appointed 'Alī as a Divine Protector, leaving to him, who is My Friend, the beloved, and the closest one to Me, to decide the questions of the prayer, the fast, the ḥajj, and all other matters connected with this life and the future life. Prayer, the fast, and the ḥajj will be accepted at My palace from everyone who does these for the love of 'Alī, the Divine Protector; but these will not be accepted at My palace from those who do them without love of 'Alī and his successors, even if they at the same time show obedience and devotion as great as the distance from the West to the East. [24] "Verily, God is your Protector" (Cor. V, 60).

Thus we see that 'Alī is the Divine Protector (of mankind), and the Waṣī of Muṣṭafā; obedience to them means obedience to God the Allhighest. And God in the Coran (XL, 47 ?) says: "Verily, (I have appointed him) as the Divine Protector on the earth, and have handed over to him the Divine command (amr), and to him belongs the authority (ḥukm) in all matters concerning worship". This means that worship of him is worship of God. As God the Allhighest commands: "The knowledge of God means the knowledge of the Imam of the time".¹

² This form of invocation of blessing upon 'Alī, as is known, is chiefly used by Sunnites. Here it appears quite irregularly, alternating with 'alay-hi's-salām' (used also by the Ithna-'asharis), and the Ismaili form, —li-dhikri-hi's-sujūd wa't-tasbīḥ.

It is related of Imam Ḥasan,—blessing of God be upon him!—that he delivered a sermon, mentioning in it: "I am a descendant of the Prophet; and God made devotion to me obligatory to every Muslim, as commanded in the Coran (?)": . . . "and to both his uncles, and both grandsons, and his helpers, and anṣār may devotion be given till the day of Judgment".² This means: till the "Last Day".

And the Prophet said: "After me my community will be split into seventy-three sects; but only one of them leads to salvation, the others,—to Hell".³ The King of men (Shāhi mardān, i.e. 'Alī), Salmān, Bū Dharr, Jābir Anṣārī, Suhayl,⁴ the muhājirs, the anṣārs—all of them—were present on that occasion. The King of men then asked: "O Prophet of God,—who will be saved? And who are those who are condemned to perdition?"—The Prophet replied: "O 'Alī, it is thou and thy followers (shī'at) who are the happy: O 'Alī, it is thou and thy followers who are the superior". [25] This is in accordance with the Coran (VI, 154): "Verily, this is My right way; follow it then, and follow not various paths".

After Aḥmad his followers became divided into seventy-three sects,

One of them right, all others leading to perdition.

That single sect is those who follow the Ahli Bayt,

Other seventy-two are full of errors.

O you, these "others", nowadays only the Successors of the Prophet save,— Open your ears, and listen to (the Prophet's) reply.

I, from amongst these people, have decided to follow the Successors of the Prophet.

But take as thy leader, friend, any one thou likest.

As the Prophet said in a ḥadīth: "My descendants (dhurriyyat) are like Noah's Ark: whoever got into it, is saved, and whoever opposes them,—is drowned".⁵

² Again a sentence wrongly regarded as a verse of the Coran. The anṣār, as is known, were the inhabitants of Medina who followed the Prophet after his hijra to that town.

³ As may be seen, this chapter opens with simply a paraphrase of the contents of the second chapter.

⁴ All these persons are great Shi'ite saints, equally recognized by all Shi'ite subsects. Very little authentic is known about their biographies. The information about Salmān is excellently summed up in L. Massignon's pamphlet Salmān Pāk, in the series of the Société des Études Iraniennes, No. 7 (Tours, 1934). For others see in the Encyclopædia of Islam.

⁵ This ḥadīth is already quoted by Ibn Bābūya, in his Risālatu'l-I'tiqādāt (Najaf, 1343), p. 139.

When I am in Noah's Ark, with the Prophet and the Waṣī,

Let the earth be overtaken by the deluge, let the sky rain misfortunes!

The dog that was with the Ephesian Sleepers was saved.

How will not I be saved, being with the Successors of the Prophet?

We have already described all those seventy-two erring sects; now we have to give details of that one sect which leads to salvation.¹

This sect consists of the people who believe that there is always an Imam, and that the world cannot exist without him.
There always is, always was, and always will be an Imam, in accordance with the commandment of the Coran (XXXVI, 11): "And everything have We counted in a plain indication (Imāmi mubīn)". One cannot imagine this by himself. The world is continuously changing, and it cannot exist by itself; therefore, the existence of the world must depend on someone.
(This matter will be discussed in detail in the chapter dealing with Imamat). And such "someone" is always present; always was, and always will be. This "someone" is the Imam,—prostration [26] and glorification be due at his mention!²

The Prophet said: "If the world remains without an Imam even for a moment (or while, or minute), verily, the earth would perish with all its population". The Imam looks upon the existence of the world a hundred thousand times every day so that this world may remain alive. And different prophets have said (the same thing) in the books revealed by God, i.e. the Torah, the New Testament, the Psalms, and the Coran of the Apostle of God.

In the Psalms, the Torah, the New Testament, and the Coran,—

In these four books there is (the mention of) 'Alī.

Every prophet who came, referred to the Lieutenant of God (Qā'im)³ of his time. The Prophet says that the Imam is always present in the world, and there never is a time when no one can get into touch with him. He always has a "proof", ḥujjat, and dā'ī, preacher, who inform the followers, and reveal the truth to those who seek after it, being specially commissioned for this purpose by him. God Himself says in the Coran (?)⁴: "The knowledge of God is but recognition of the Imam of the time". He is always present in order to reveal

Ishāq, begin to agree to a considerable extent.

² Again the texts are different.

³ i.e. the Imam.

⁴ Cf. above, p. 16, note 2, and p. 20, note 1.

the knowledge of God to mankind, "and to be My Testimony (hujjat) to them".

And I may add that he should be a Fatimid¹; and he should be in every time, and every circumstance, as is said in the Coran (III, 30): "Verily, God has chosen Adam, and Noah, and Abraham's people, and 'Imrân's people above the world,—a progeny (dhurriyyat), of which one succeeds the other; God both hears and knows (all)". Thus God says that the prophets descend one from the other, as we have proved it here. And in another place (Cor. XXVII, 16) it is said: "And Solomon was David's heir". Concerning Zachariah, the Prophet said (Cor. XIX, 5-6): "Then grant me from [27] Thee a successor (Walî) to be my heir",—i.e. so Zachariah prayed to God. And similarly Moses inherited (his office) from Shu'ayb, as is stated in the Coran (VI, 83-87): "This is our proof which we gave to Abraham against his people:—We raise the rank of whom We will; verily, thy Lord is wise and knowing. And We gave to him Isaac and Jacob, each did We guide. And Noah We had guided before, and all his seed,—David and Solomon, and Job, and Joseph, and Moses and Aaron,—for thus do We reward those who do good. And Zachariah, and John, and Jesus and Elias, all righteous ones; and Ishmael, and Elisha, and Jonah, and Lot, each one have we preferred above the worlds; and of their fathers, and their seed, and brethren; We have chosen them, and guided them into the right way".—Thus it is proved that the prophets inherited the office one from the other, and each one is a testimony of the claims of the other.

From the time of Adam to the time of 'Abdu'l-Manâf
They were brought from the pure descent, born by holy mothers.²

Thus it is clear that the only true Imams are the Ismaili Imams, who are the successors (dhurriyyat) and the "family" of the Prophet. The latter himself said: "One who dies without having recognized the Imam of his time, dies like a heathen, and the heathens go to Hell". It is just as if he died without following the Prophet. And God says in the Coran (XVII, 73): "The day when We will call all men through their religious leader (Imam)".

God the Allhighest says in the sûrat of "Light" in the Coran, referring to the position of the successors (dhurriyyat) of the Prophet (XXIV, 35): "God is the light of the heavens and the earth; His light is as a niche in which is a lamp".³ This means that God guides and leads his slaves from the darkness of idolatry, error and perdition to salvation by the light of the Imam of the time, i.e. his light of guidance. Really, a source of Light is God who brought this world from the mystery of non-existence into being.¹ Its existence is apparent in the seed, and it is the hidden creator and maker. Thus the light of Lordship [28] is the Imam of the time, the light which fills the heavens and the earth,—how is it you cannot discover it in your own heart?

In the Kitābu't-tawhīd, by Ibn Bābūya,² the properties (ṣifāt) of the Great Light are discussed, the importance of which is very great to the world and its inhabitants (Cor. XXIV, 35): "God is the light of the heavens and the earth; His light is as a niche in which is a lamp, and the lamp is in a glass". This means that the light of the Truth the Allhighest is in the heavens and the earth; it shines from the lamp of the Prophet; by its light God guides the people. And the "glass" is the heart of 'Alī, who is the Waṣī of the Prophet. And the "star" glittering as a jewel,³ lit from the blessed olive tree (zaytūn), is Abraham, the Friend of God, and 'Imrān. The Prophet was a descendant of the former, and 'Alī was a descendant of the latter,—'Alī ibn Abī Tālib was neither a Jew, nor a Christian.

The Apostle of God said: "Knowledge almost comes out of the mouth of the Successor of the Prophet, even before he starts speaking". The light of 'Alī is the light of Imāmat which after him (remains) in his progeny (dhurriyyat). And an Imam, during the period of his office and in his lifetime, is the Guide of the people. His purpose is to lead mankind from the desert of ignorance to the boundaries of the abode of faith, of belief in One God, and of knowledge of Him, thus leading the mankind to reach God and to abide in God (Khudā wa Khudā'ī), rescuing from the stuffiness of ignorance, which is a Hell of stupidity, and leading it into the open air of spirituality.

The Apostle of God says: "The lamp (mentioned in the Coran) is the light which contains the (Divine) knowledge ('ilm). I will transfer it to my Executor (Waṣī) when I die. It is like a glass lantern, shining most brilliantly and purely. And the light and radiation of prophethood and of walâyat speak without the need of an angel descending (with a message) from heaven”.

¹ The peculiar order of words of this passage may suggest that it is a literal translation from Arabic.

² Ibn Bābūya, or—to give him his full name—Abū Ja'far Muḥammad b. 'Alī b. al-Ḥusayn b. Mūsā Ibn Bābūya al-Qummī, surnamed Shaykh Ṣadūq (d. 381/991), was the author of many famous Shi'ite works. His Kitābu't-tawhīd is not mentioned by Brockelmann (I, 187), but it was lithographed, apparently in Tehran, in 1285/1869. The commentary on the āyatū'n-Nūr is found in the 15th bāb of the treatise, and the matters dealt with here are treated on pp. 110-114 of the lith. edition. In our text the Arabic original is either almost literally translated, or very closely paraphrased.

³ As is well known, there was a belief in the antiquity that jewels themselves emit light.

‘Alî gives orders to the great king (?) to return,—

‘Alî does the work of the Prophet without the assistance of Jabra’îl.

The same “Verse of Light” (âyatü'n-nûr), mentioned above, i.e. “God is the light of the heavens,” etc. (Cor. XXIV, 35), [29] means that the light of prophethood and of walâyat make the heavens and the earth full of light. “They are lit by the moon, the stars, the sun, the lights of this world, and by the angels of light.” And the prophets, the wasîs, and the learned teachers who are sent by the Guiding Imams, all tell us that the meaning of the “place for the light” is the spout (anbûba) which is placed in the middle of the candelabre (or lantern). If so, the mişbâh should be the wick, which is placed in the spout. And the properties of that light which appears in the “dress” (kiswat) of wind, may be imagined from the simile: a street in which there is a lamp, placed in a hanging glass lantern (qandîl), and the latter shines and glitters, for it is said further in the same verse of the Corân (XXIV, 35): “. . . the lantern as though it were a glittering star; it is lit from a blessed tree, an olive, neither of the East, nor of the West”. Thus this glass lantern is like a star which shines brilliantly, being fed by the oil of the olive tree, which is the most blessed and most useful, and which grows in the Promised Land. Seven prophets prayed over it: Abraham, the Friend of God, was one of them. It does not grow in the Eastern lands, such as Tibet and China, nor in the Western lands as Tanjer or Tartûs. But (Cor. XXIV, 35): “. . . its oil would well-nigh give light, even though no fire touched it,—light upon light:—God guides to His light whomsoever He pleases”. This means that this light shines and glitters so much that it makes everything shine brightly, even without the aid of fire, and even more than this, for—“light upon light: God guides to His light whomsoever He pleases”. By the light that this tree gives, God the Allhighest guides whomsoever He pleases towards the light of religion and faith in him, i.e. towards the Imam of the time. “And God (Cor. XXIV, 35) strikes out parables for men, and God all things doth know”, i.e. O Muḥammad, the dawn of God the Allhighest makes the parables enlighten you. This means that He explains abstract ideas in the form of concrete conceptions connected with visible objects (ma'qûlât dar libâsi maḥsûsât). And the day will come when the people will understand them, and their purpose will become apparent to all. God knows everything, be it the most subtle abstract idea, or perceptions through the senses (maḥsûsât), [30] or allegory.

So far we were giving the tafsīr, or plain interpretation (of the "Verse of Light");—now we may take up its ta'wīl, or allegorical interpretation.

The learned have much to say of these matters—of ideas or abstractions (ma'qūlāt), the sensual perceptions (maḥsūsāt), and the allegory (tamhīl). Some of them say that by the "light" here is meant faith, by the "niche"—the faithful, and by the "lamp"—his heart. They symbolize faith by a light burning inside the lantern (qandīl). This lantern is similar to a glittering star. The formula of the tawhīd, i.e. profession of the unity of God, is symbolized by the blessed tree. This tree has its share and lot in sunshine, which means fear of sin.

The greatness of this formula (tawhīd) will well-nigh light up the world with its brightness even without its being uttered by the faithful. But when it is pronounced, and if the pronouncing of it has a special purpose, then, as we have said, the ray of 'Alī's light becomes manifested. Some people say that this allegory implies the Prophet, and that the "niche" is the bountiful breast of that Great Man, while the "lamp" is his luminous heart, and the "wick"—his pure actions, because worship comes from Prophethood. And the expression "Neither of the East nor of the West, the oil of which would", etc., indicates its being free from Jewish and Christian ideas, because Jews, when praying, turn to the West, and the Christians—to the East. The blessed tree is the tree of Prophethood, i.e. Abraham, the Friend of God, because the prophets are his descendants. And the pure light of Muḥammad the Chosen and of his successors will well-nigh shine for the people though no fire reaches it.

Other people say that the "niche" is Abraham, and the "lamp" is Ismā'īl, and the "wick" is the Apostle of God, because the latter sometimes is alluded to as the "lamp" (sirāj). And the meaning of the expression: "the oil of which would well-nigh give light", etc., is that the good actions of that Great Man (i.e. the Prophet) are apparent before (anything) was, is, or will be; and that he will receive inspiration (wahy). And the light of 'Alī is the pure light of the Prophet, and also that it descends from all prophets, such as Adam to Abraham and to the Final Prophet,—just as we mentioned above concerning the verse (Cor. III, 30): "Verily, God has chosen Adam, and Noah", etc. [31].

From the time of Adam to the time of 'Abdu'l-Manāf¹

² The same bayt is quoted on p. 22 (p. 27 of the text).

Some other people again say that the "niche" means 'Abdu'l-Muṭallib,¹ the "lamp",—'Abdu'l-lâh,² and the "wick," the one who ascended to heaven, i.e. Muḥammad, who is neither from the East, nor from the West, but an inhabitant of Mekka which is the centre of the world.

It is also related from the true Imam (Imâmi bar ḥaqq) Ja'far the Ṣâdiq, that he said: "We are the "niche", and the "wick of the lamp" is our ancestor, Muḥammad the Muṣṭafâ; and God guides through our Protectorship (walâyat) whomsoever He pleases".

Ibn Bâbüya,—mercy of God be upon him!—who was one of the great associates of the Imam (i.e. Ja'far the Ṣâdiq)³ in his work Kitâbu't-tawḥîd, relates from 'Isâ ibn Râshid,⁴ who related from Imam Muḥammad Bâqir that the expression "the niche in which there is a lamp" means the light of 'Alî in the bountiful breast of the Commander of the Faithful, 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib, because the knowledge of the Prophet completely fills the heart of 'Alî. The Prophet said: "I am the city of knowledge, and 'Alî is the gate of it". The same Imam explains the meaning of the expression "the oil of which well-nigh would give light" as: the world itself is about to give out the wisdom ('ilm) which belongs to the successors of "the glory of mankind" (i.e. Muḥammad the Muṣṭafâ), even before any one asks about it.

The expression "light upon light" means that the Imam is directly supported by the light of Divine wisdom and foresight, which is eternal. (When one Imam dies) another, who is also a successor of the Prophet, comes, and this continuity has never been broken, and never will be, from the time of Adam, to the time of the Final Prophet, and after him, to the advent of the Qâ'im of Resurrection. The Imam is the Wasi (here—awṣiyâ) whom the True One makes His Caliph, or lieutenant on earth, and is to mankind the proof of His existence. "The earth will never at any time be without one of them, so that mankind should always praise the True One, the Most High.

The "wick" of that "lamp" is raised above and saturated with oil, which symbolizes the knowledge of the Unity of God (tawḥîd), just as purity, [32] light and splendour "over them" also mean oils of different kinds. "Neither of the East, nor of the West" means that the tree does not grow in the Eastern lands where the Sun does not shine much after the noon has

² The father of Muḥammad.

³ As we have seen above (p. 23. note 2), Ibn Bâbüya flourished a hundred years after the death of Imam Ja'far Ṣâdiq.

⁴ See the Kitâbu't-tawḥîd, p. 113. The isnâd which is given here, should be: "said Ṭarîf b. Nâṣir from 'Isâ b. Râshid, from Muḥammad b. 'Alî b. al-Ḥusayn".

passed, till the end of the day. And that tree is "not of the West" because the Sun does not shine much from sunrise till noon.¹

It is also said that the olive tree has a property of never seeking shade; it always remains under the sunshine, so that it is burnt by it; through this the tree and its fruit never remain unripe. The hotter the sun is, the more it benefits the tree, which avoids every form of hindrance or obstacle which gives shadow. It is said that this tree originally came from Paradise, and was brought thence to this world. Not being one of the trees of this world, it cannot be termed Eastern or Western.

And, as it was mentioned, such a light is burnt in the houses of "great men", the "great men" being prophets, saints, apostles, and the successors (Ahli Bayt) of the Prophet. And that tree is the tree of Tûbâ which grows by the tank of Kawthar, and the branches of which spread all over the seven heavens. Its roots are in the back of the Bull and the Fish. Its branches cast a shadow from the East to the West, and a branch of it hangs over a window of the cell of every inhabitant of Paradise:—he finds on it everything that he needs.² This tree is the symbol of the Last of the Apostles and the Guide of the paths, the Messenger of God; and also of 'Alî and his successors, as God revealed it in the chapter "Abraham" (Cor. XIV, 29): "Dost thou not see how God strikes out a parable? A good word is like a good tree whose root is firm, and whose branches are in the sky", i.e. O Muḥammad, dost thou know how God strikes a parable of thee, and of thy successors (Ahli Bayt)? He mentions that they are similar to the holy formula of tawḥîd, saying that every "good word" is like a sacred tree, which is the tree of Tûbâ, the roots of which are firm in the earth, and the branches of which are in the sky. It is related from Imam Ja'far the Ṣâdiq, and he related it from Imam Muḥammad Bâqir that the "good tree" [33] is the Apostle of God, its branches are Murtadâ 'Alî, and its root is Fâtima the Zahrâ, the "Best of women", the daughter of the Apostle of God,—prayers of God be upon her! And the fruits of that tree are the sons of Fâtima, Hasan and Husayn, including the successors of the later. And the leaves of that tree are the Shi'ites and the followers of 'Alî (mawâliyyân).³ Then he said: "Whenever a Shi'ite dies, a leaf falls from the tree ; and when a child is born in a Shi'ite family a new leaf comes out in the place of that fallen one”. And it is related from Ibn ‘Abbâs that Jabra’îl said to the Apostle of God : “Thou art a tree, and ‘Alî and Fâtima are the branches of that tree, and the fruits of that tree are her holy sons, while the leaves of the tree are Shi’ites and the supporters (mawâliyyân) of the Ahli Bayt.”

² Cf. further on, p. 107 (text), where similar matters are narrated about the Tûbâ-tree.

³ The double Plural of this term (instead of the original Plural mawâli, from mawlâ) probably shows that this passage is derived from an Arabic work. Here it is used in its original sense of "client", i.e. freedman, or new convert from non-Arab communities, as opposed to Shi'at, i.e. supporters of 'Alidæ from amongst pure Arabs.

The “good word” means faith, and the “good tree” means one of the faithful (mu’min). God revealed in the sûrat ar-Rahmân (LV, 22-23) : “From both of them come forth pearls and corals,—then which of your Lord’s bounties will ye twain deny ?” This means that the pearls and corals symbolize the Ahli Bayt of the Apostle of God. And the Prophet said that Murtaḍâ ‘Alî, Fâtima, and their two sons are alluded to here.

It is related from Ibn ‘Abbâs, from Salmân, Sa’d ibn Jubayr, and Sufyân Thawrî¹ that when rain-water descends from the door of the heaven, and a drop falls into a shell, which is in the sea, a pearl appears. The sea here means the Prophet, Murtaḍâ ‘Alî and Fâtima, and the pearls and corals are Imam Hasan and Imam Husayn. And the Apostle of God himself said : “God created me and my uncle’s son as one tree”,—i.e. that he is the trunk of that tree, and ‘Alî is the branch of that tree, while Hasan and Husayn are the fruits of it, the leaves being the followers and Shi’ites. Every one who grasps that tree or its branches [34] is saved from Hell and Fire. But every one who does not, and who disobeys, is a sinner,—he will undergo a painful punishment. The Prophet also said : “I leave with you two treasures,—if you keep them, you will never err : the Book of God and my “close relatives” (‘itrat), who are the Ahli Bayt. They (and the Coran) will not be separated one from the other until you reach the tank of Kawthar (on the Day of Judgment).”

Thus it is plain that amongst the seventy-three sects of Islam the only community that will attain salvation is the one that follows Ismâ’îl, and the Ismaili Imams ; here is the proof of this—(Cor. XXXIII, 33) : “God only wishes to take away from you, as the members of his Prophet’s family (Ahli Bayt), all uncleanness, and to purify you thoroughly”. This is a correct indication of the meaning which is as follows : God removes you, O Ahli Bayt, from everything that is unclean and vile, keeping you clean and guarding you from every form of pollution of this world. [Follows a passage in which it is said that all Imams are ma’sûm, sinless, but the first three caliphs surely could not claim to be this.]

¹ The famous Shi’ite saint and the raûi of ḥadîths, a contemporary of the Prophet. Sa’d ibn Jubayr, mentioned here, is a secondary Shi’ite saint, also of the same time.

There has been an Imam in the world ever since the Day when God asked His creatures: "Am I not your Lord?"¹ The Imam must be the wisest of men,—it makes no difference to him whether his community elects him or not. God says (Cor. II, 118): "My covenant touches not the evildoers". This means: My covenant, which is Imamatus, is not for the wicked.

Another proof is (Cor. XI, 115): "Lean not unto those who do wrong", i.e. do not befriend the evildoers. And another proof (Cor. XLIX, 6): "If there come to you a sinner with information, then discriminate",—this indicates that you should not act in accordance with the advice of an evildoer, or otherwise you will be sinful yourself. Imamatus will never belong to the vile, and it is sinful to befriend evildoers.

[Here a passage is omitted, in which the author tells that there are many false hadiths which were invented to support the claims of the different political parties, and lines of caliphs. The author summarily refutes them. In the course of argument the author refers to the work called al-Jam' bayna's-Sahihayn, which he styles "one of the most authoritative works of the Sunnites"²].

[35] God the Most High in His Coran has revealed (Cor. III, 138): "Muhammad is but an Apostle; apostles have passed away before his time". This means that if they were apostles of God (?) Muhammad surely must be an Apostle of God. Muhammad is chosen by God, as is said in the Coran (XXXVI, 1): "In the name of God, the Merciful, the Compassionate! Y.S. By the wise Qur'an", etc.—i.e. O Muhammad, thou art better than all, and thou art one of the apostles. "Verily, thou art of the apostles following the right way" (Cor. XXXVI, 2-3). Therefore it is clear that Muhammad, the Apostle of God, was ordered to show the right way to men so that they should not fall into error and sin. It is said (Cor. LIII, 3-4): "He does not speak out of lust. It is but an inspiration inspired", i.e. his speeches are inspired or conveyed through Jabra'il.

Ibn 'Abbās relates this hadith from the Prophet himself: "We are prophets, and we do not bequeath to anyone that we leave except to those who deserve this", i.e. the succeeding descendants (dhurriyyat), about whom God has said (Cor. III, 30): "..... the descendants who succeed one another, and God both hears and knows", i.e. We left the Coran and the Ahli Bayt amongst you; and all that is left, is left in truth and sincerity, and plainly for the purpose of preventing man from straying away off the right path. Both of these will guide the people, and remain as a "proof" of God, just as God said (Cor. V, 44): "To Him belongs the kingdom of the heavens and of the earth", and (Cor. II, 256): "He is the Highest and the Greatest". And it is again said in the Coran (II, 118) that God said (to Abraham): "Verily, I will set thee as a leader (Imam) for men", i.e. God has given Imams to the faithful. [36] And (Abraham) asked: "And (wilt Thou raise Imams) from my posterity?"—God replied: "My covenant touches not the evildoers" (Cor., ibid.).

² Two works with this title are mentioned by Brockelmann: the earlier, by Abū 'Abdī'l-lāh Muhammad b. Abī Naṣr Futūḥ al-Mayurqī (born 420/1029, d. 488/1095) (cf. I, 368); and the later, by 'Abdu'l-Haqq b. 'Abdi'r-Raḥmān Ibn al-Kharṭāṭ al-Ishbīlī (b. 510/1116, d. 581/1185) (cf. I, 371). Most probably here the latter is referred to, as the better known of the two.

And it is also said in the Coran (IV, 174): "O ye folk! proof has come to you from your Lord, and We have sent down to you manifest light", i.e. the light of Prophethood and of Imamat. And the Prophet also said: "My Lord promised me that the devotion of the faithful would not be accepted unless it includes also the love for 'Alî and the Ahli Bayt".

The True Lord with Ahmād the Chosen
Entered a covenant, and promised him,
That no faith would be accepted,
Except for love for 'Alî and his descendants.

The Prophet said: "It was written on the gate of Paradise before the world was created, a thousand years before Adam (?): there is no Deity except Allah, Muḥammad is His Apostle, and 'Alî is his brother".

Before Adam he (the Prophet) had existed for thousands of (years).

Many years it was written about love for the Friend,
On the door of the highest Paradise (was written) that

And also:—

On the arch of the Throne of God is written the name

And it is also said by the Prophet: "Whosoever calumniate or dislikes 'Alî, [37] to him I will never extend my protection. His piety or generosity will not be accepted, and he will go to the centre of Hell, together with the erring"; just as God the Allhighest said in the Coran (XLII, 9): "There is naught like Him, for He both hears and sees; His are the keys of the heavens and of the earth". And also¹: "Verily, God created

¹ From here, and as far as line 3 on the next page of the text, is given a quotation from the third Ṣaḥīfa from the Ṣaḥīfatun-n-nazirīn (cf Adam in His own likeness, and breathed into him His own spirit". This means: do not make your faces appear vile, because really God created Adam after His own image, and breathed into him His own spirit. The Divine form (ṣūrat) is the Universal Conscious Life Principle (Nafsi kull), and Adam is the Nātiq, or Prophet of his own time, who had the "immediate support" (ta'yid) of the Universal Life (Nafsi kull). In the system of ta'wīl the expression "face" always symbolizes the Imam. Thus this expression really means: do not disgrace the Imams in the way that the adversaries do, by regarding false pretenders as true Imams. The Nātiq in every period calls the people, showing them the way (ṣūrat) of following the (human form) of the true Imam.

And the meaning of the "Divine spirit" in this expression is explained in the Coran (IV, 169): "His Word which He cast into Mary, and a Spirit from Him", i.e. the Word of God, which is the spirit, descended to Mary. And it is mentioned also in this verse (LXVI, 12) that the One who breathed this Spirit, the Great, made it descend into the womb of Mary: "And Mary, daughter of 'Imrân, who guarded her purity, and We breathed therein of Our spirit, and she verified *both*¹ the words of her Lord and His books, and was of the devout". And in the ta'wīl the meaning of the "virgin" is an allegory for the hujjat, the proof of God; and the womb means ear. Just as in the womb the material human form comes into existence, so does the spiritual form grow by the hearing of speech through the ears. And the meaning of the whole verse in the ta'wīl interpretation is this: Mary, who was the hujjat of 'Imrân, kept her ears [38] away from the ordinary (ẓāhir) speeches, devoid of the ta'wīl. Then the Word of God became granted to her, in the form of the ta'wīl. In this she brought up Jesus, who was the Spirit of God.

In this verse there appears the mention of the breathing of spirit, as well as profession (of faith) by (pronouncing) *both*² formulas; and what is allegorized by "spirit" is the word (of God), or the formula (kalīma). The expression "(she was) of the devout", found in the same verse, means "closely connected",—Mary was one of the ḥujjats.¹ Prophets have descended from Abraham, and Imams—from 'Imrân, as is said in the Coran (III, 30): "Verily God has chosen Adam," etc. This means that the "posterity" (dhurriyyat) of the prophets descend one from the other, from the time of the (creation of the) world, to the time of the Final Prophet, and will do so to the end of the world.

Introduction, III). The Arabic quotation is not a verse of the Coran, but probably a ḥadīth. Here it is mutilated, and therefore does not correspond with the Persian translation, which accompanies it. In the Ṣaḥīfa it begins with the words: lā tuqabbihā'l-uwjūhā, which are missing here.

So many thousands of years before the foundation of the Universe, Muḥammad and 'Alî were sitting together.

God the Allhighest said in the sûrat "Counsel" in the Coran (XLII, 22): "Say: I do not ask a hire for it,—only the love of my kinsfolk. And he who gains a good action (We will increase good for him thereby)", i.e. say, O Muḥammad: I do not ask any reward from you for my being an Apostle,—I do not take a fee from prophets or from the followers, for preaching. I only want friendliness shown towards my successors (Ahli Bayt). This makes the slave of God nearer to the Allhighest. And everyone who works (kash kunad) for one of my successors (dhurriyyat), i.e. who is obedient to me, and (feels) love (for the Apostle's descendants), becomes nearer to me, and will become associated with me. As the Prophet said (to 'Alî): "Thou art in relation to me as Aaron to Moses, for the sake of his great ancestors, the changing world, and undulating sea". This refers to the person whom the Prophet calls his brother, his cousin, and his lieutenant. All the obedient faithful are honoured by the reference to him: "'Alî is the Lord of those whose Lord I am",—the Prophet on the day of Ghadîr Khumm said this to his followers.

And further he said: "God, befriend those who befriend him, help those who help him, and disregard those who disregard him". The proof of the correctness [39] of this ḥadîth is found in another ḥadîth: "The Prophet said: the first thing which God created was the cupola (of the sky?). He wrote on it: "there is no deity except Allah, Muḥammad is Apostle of God, and 'Alî is the Waṣî of Muṣṭafâ". Then God created the Throne (Arsh), and wrote on its foundations the same formula: "there is no deity except for Allah. Muḥammad is His Apostle, and 'Alî is His face (vajh)". Every one who thinks that love for the Prophet is obligatory, and love for the Waṣî is not, thinks erroneously. And every one who thinks that he can recognize the Prophet, while not recognizing the Waṣî,—is an unbeliever." Then the Prophet said: "Are not my kinsfolk protection to you? Love for them is as love for myself. and whoever disregards them, commits a sin". Someone asked: "And who are thy kinsfolk, O Prophet?" He replied: "'Alī and both my grandsons, with all other Imams, who descend from the Father of Imams, Ḥusayn, and who are sinless (ma'sūm) by God's will,—verily, they are the Ahli Bayt", etc. And the Prophet added (concerning 'Alī): "Thy flesh is my flesh, and thy blood is my blood". True it is what the Prophet said.

Many companions of the Prophet certified to the correctness of this ḥadīth. The Prophet said: First God created a screen (ḥijāb), and wrote on it, after the formula of the tawḥīd, the words: "Muḥammad is the Apostle of God and 'Alī is his Waṣī". After this God created the Throne, 'Arsh. The command was given to the Pen (Qalam): "Write". The Pen asked: "What shall I write?" The voice came from the world of the unseen: "Write:—there is no deity but Allah, and Muḥammad is His Apostle". The Pen moved thirty thousand years over the Throne before it wrote on its foundations that formula, i.e. the formula of tahlīl,¹ and that Muḥammad is the Prophet of God. Then again came the voice: "Write". Again the Pen asked: "What shall I write?" The voice came: "Write:—verily, the Commander of the Faithful 'Alī is the Friend of God". When the Pen heard the name of the Punisher, it broke and split through fear. It took thirty thousand years more to write this formula, that 'Alī is the Waṣī of Muṣṭafā. Then God created the earth. [40] Therefore whoever pretends to be the friend of the Apostle of God, but does not love the Waṣī of the Prophet, he lies about his love for Muḥammad. He is thus a liar before the community. And whoever pretends that he recognizes the Prophet, but does not recognize the Waṣī, he on the Last Day will not believe in Muḥammad,—peace be upon him!—and thus is disobedient.

Then the Apostle of God said: "Whoever loves 'Alī and his successors, loves me also, and whoever loves me, loves God".² And he said further: "But he who hates 'Alī and his successors, hates me, and whoever hates me, hates God".

Thus said the Apostle of God: "Know that my kinsfolk (Ahli Bayt) are Imams. Therefore, love for them is the same as love for myself, and hostility towards them is the same as hostility towards myself".

Some companions asked: "O Prophet, tell us, what does this mean, so that the people may avoid error". The Prophet replied (by a verse from the Coran, LXXVI, 1): "Does there not come on man a while in his existence when he ceases to be something worth mentioning (by others, i.e. when he is dead)?" And in another place it is said (Cor. V, 60):

² Cf. above, p. 32.

"Verily, God and His Apostle are your protectors (walî)",¹ i.e. 'Alî, Commander of the Faithful, is the "Friend" of God, and the Wasî of the Prophet. For this reason while the Prophet was returning from the hajj, which is called the "highest hajj", when he arrived at a place which was called Qayyimatu'l-Qadr, on the night of Qadr, Jabra'il descended [41] and revealed this verse (Cor. V, 71): "O thou Apostle, preach what has been revealed to thee from thy Lord; and if thou dost not, thou hast not preached His message", i.e. O Muhammad, appoint the Wasî, and impart to the people that 'Alî is the Imam. If thou dost not do this, thou art not deserving of Prophethood, in accordance with the verse (Cor. XXXVI, 11): "And everything have We counted in the obvious guide (Imam)", i.e. he sees and knows about everything and everybody in the world, in accordance with this verse (Cor. IV, 62): "O ye who believe, obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those in authority amongst you", i.e. obey the King of Men, Murtaḍâ 'Alî,—as the expression "those in authority" refers to him.

Then the Prophet ordered (his men) to unload camels, and to make a minbar (preaching chair) from the pack-saddles. Then he took 'Alî by hand, led him to the minbar, made him sit down, and started an eloquent sermon, saying "I believe in God, His angels, His apostles, and the Last Day".² And the Last Day means the King of Men (= 'Alî) and his successors, as the Prophet meant it. Thus it is obligatory to believe in him. Then the Prophet said: "Those whose Lord I am, 'Alî is their Lord also", because it is said: "Verily God is your Protector (walî)" (Cor. V, 60).³ It is clear, therefore, that 'Alî is the "Friend" of God, and the Wasî of the Prophet, as it is said about him in the Coran (IV, 62): "Obey God, and obey the Apostle", etc.⁴

[Here a few pages are omitted in the original, in which the author again refers to ancient history, i.e. the Egyptian campaign of Usâma, who was sent there by the Prophet. With other Shi'ites, he tells that Abû Bakr and 'Umar did not go with the troops. Further he tells the well-known fact that when the Prophet on his deathbed wanted to dictate his will, 'Umar interfered, and the Prophet died before this could be done. The author refers to the same al-Jam' bayna's-Sâlihayn (cf. above, p. 29), and to the Jâmi' which he attributes to the authorship of Abû Hâshim.⁵]

[42] Ibn 'Abbâs relates from the Prophet a ḥadîth as follows: "We are living with prophets,⁶ and we do not bequeath anything that we leave after us except to those who deserve this", i.e. except to the successors (dhurriyyat), who are mentioned in the Coran (III, 30): "the descendants, one succeeding the other,—and God hears and knows (all)". This means: I have left the Coran and my successors with you; and what I left you was left truly and sincerely for the purpose of saving the people from error.

And we heard the Prophet saying (Cor. XIX, 5): "Then grant me Thou a successor (walî), to be my heir",—i.e. Zachariah prayed to God for this.

Therefore one can realize the extent of the lies and tricking of those cursed people who seized from Fâtima the garden of Fadak, the house and the inheritance of the Prophet of God, despite the fact that he himself gave her all this during his lifetime, and that those who seized this had nothing to prove their right. Fâtima, the Most Virtuous of women, produced witnesses to the effect that her father had left all this to her. But those vile and impudent people have covered themselves with eternal shame by rejecting her witnesses, though they were such persons as the Commander of the Faithful 'Alî, Umm Kulthûm, Salmân, Bû Dharr, Suhayl, Miqdâd, Jâbir Anşârî,¹ and all the members of the Prophet's family, including Umm Ayman, to whom the Prophet promised Paradise.

It is related in the works of Bukhârî and of Muslim,² both of which are amongst the most authoritative books recognized by the Sunnites, that the Prophet, and his most beloved daughter, Fâtima, were much aggrieved by some of their enemies until they left this frail world. The Prophet himself used to say: [43] "Fâtima is a part of myself, and what affects her, affects me". For this reason it is clear that those enemies are³ eternally cursed, because, as the Prophet said: "Whoever hates 'Alî, Fâtima and my grandsons,—he hates myself, and who hates me, he hates God Himself". And whoever hates God and His Apostle, is eternally cursed.⁴

It is also related from Ibn 'Abbâs that the Prophet said: "O 'Alî, God has married thee to Fâtima, making the whole of the earth her dowry. Thus whoever walks on the earth, feeling hatred towards Fâtima, he walks like a thief".⁵

Friends, look upon this with the eye of justice, and you will realize the extent of the fraud, and the inhumanity of those heretics who were so impudent as to deprive the Prophet's most beloved daughter of possession of the garden of Fadak,—they could not part with this garden for the sake of the person to whom the whole of the surface of the earth had been given as a dowry! They broke the covenant of Ghadr Khumm, they withheld the last will (waṣīyyat-nāma) of the Prophet! Know that the crime of taking away the garden of Fadak, and the injustice to Fâtima were so glaring and clamorous that some of the Omayyade and Abbasid caliphs, who felt that it was wrong, wanted to restore her rights returning the garden to her descendants. [44] The first of them was 'Umar ibn 'Abdi'l-'Aziz (99-101/717-720), who was the most pious amongst the Omayyades. After him amongst the Abbasid caliphs were Ma'mûn (198-218/813-833), Mu'taṣim (218-227/833-842), and Wâthiq (227-232/842-847). They handed over the garden to the descendants of Fâtima. When it came to the turn of Muta-wakkil (232-247/847-861), he took it back from them, but Mu'tadid (279-289/892-902) handed it over. But Muktafi (289-295/902-908) took it back, and Muqtadir (295-320/908-932) again returned it.

In the book called *Latâ'ifu't-tawâ'if*¹ it is narrated that once Hârûnu'r-rashîd said to Mûsâ Kâzim: "Give me an idea of the boundaries of the garden of Fadak so that I may restore it to thee, because I know that with regard to this a crime was committed against the kinsfolk of the Prophet". Mûsâ Kâzim replied: "If I define the boundaries of that garden, thou wilt not feel like restoring it to me". Hârûn swore that he would restore it. Then Mûsâ Kâzim said: "The first boundary of the garden of Fadak is Aden". On hearing this Hârûn became pale. He said: "And then?" Mûsâ Kâzim said: "The second boundary is Samarqand". The face of the caliph became yellow, but he said: "And then?" The reply was: "The third boundary is the African Maghrib". The face of the caliph changed from yellow to purple; and with great anger he said: "And then?" Mûsâ Kâzim said: "The fourth boundary is the sea of Armenia". The face of the caliph from red turned to black. He reflected awhile, and then turned to Mûsâ Kâzim, and said: "Thou hast mentioned the boundaries and the provinces of my empire. This means that all my possessions belong by right to the descendants of Fâtima, and thus the Abbasids have usurped the rights of the kinsfolk of the Prophet?" Mûsâ Kâzim replied:

¹ The Latâ'ifu't-tawâ'if, by 'Alî b. Ḥusayn al-Wâ'iz al-Kâshifî (d. ca. 939/1533), was composed by him, as he himself mentions in the opening lines of it, after his release from captivity in 933/1527. The passage, which belongs to the second bâb, seventh fasl (p. 30 of the Bombay lithograph. 1311), is here quoted literally, with remarkable accuracy. The quotation is not found in the HB Abû Ishâq.

"Did I not tell thee from the beginning that thou wouldst not agree with these boundaries, but thou didst not listen to me".¹

[Here a few pages are lost in the original, in which the author repeats the usual Shi'ite legends about the sufferings of 'Alī and Fāṭima to which they were subjected by their adversaries,—in rather bitter tone. All these most probably are derived from various Ithna-'ashari works, and resemble very much the stories recited at the rawḍa-khwānī assemblies in Persia. Further the question is raised about the mut'a marriages, which were permitted by the Prophet, but prohibited by 'Umar; the story of Abū Dharr's being exiled by 'Uthmān, etc. In the course of his argument the author refers to different books: al-Jam' bayna's-Ṣaḥīḥayn, mentioned above (cf. pp. 29 and 34), the collections of ḥadīths of Bukhārī and of Muslim, the Sharḥ on the Nahj'ul-balāgha of 'Alī, by 'Umar ibn Abī'l-Ḥadīd al-Madā'īnī (d. 655/1257, cf. Brockelmann, I, 405); but the most interesting is his reference to his own work (risāla) of controversial contents, and Kitābī or Kitāb-hāyī Arba'in, also on the qabā'ih of the adversaries of 'Alī.]

We have thus proved that the true Imams are only the Ismaili Imams who have nothing to do with impurity and sin, and are entirely free from these. They always have a ḥujjat, or a dā'ī, or a teacher (mu'allim)² who [45] instructs people in knowledge of God and His recognition, who always upholds the standard of the law of the religion. They learn the truth from the One who is the Source of the truth (Muḥiqq) of their time, and follow what he teaches. And when the Muḥiqq is manifested personally, nobody has any right to question, why the Imam orders to act in one way, and acts himself in another. One must say: "I follow thee in what thou teachest me, not in what thou doest, because no one can know the mystery of thy actions save Him".³ For, the follower who questions the actions of the Imam, places himself on the same footing as the Imam,—God forbid such a thing! God the Allhighest mentions in the Coran (III, 35, and V, 1): "God acts as He pleases, and orders whatever He wishes". And in another place He says (XXI, 23): "He shall not be questioned concerning what He does, but they shall be questioned". This means that the acts of God are not to be questioned, but the acts of His chosen servants, such as ḥujjats and dā'īs can be questioned. Sometimes it happens that he (the Imam) acts in such a way as to tempt his followers.⁴ And if,—God forbid!—the followers criticize his actions, they will fall into great temptation and come under his wrath. Sometimes he shows himself in his real nature (ḥaqīqat). His followers who belong to the world of relativeness (idāfa) can see it. But, as they belong to this relative world they cannot understand the world of absolute reality (ḥaqīqat),—and since this is impossible, they cannot comprehend the mystery of it. Whoever tries to judge according to his reason, which is of this relative world, the things of the world of realities, he falls far short of the attainment of that real world, and thus submits himself to eternal damnation.¹ The man who says that the Imam must act in this way, and not in that, would be in the same position as if he says: "I am the Muḥiqq, or the Source of truth, and the Imam must follow me". Thus, he has no faith in the Imam. It would be the same as if a miserable animal compared itself to a human being, who is the most perfect of creations, and demanded the human being to follow it. Or, as if inorganic elements claimed that plants should be inferior to them. Nothing but perversion and depravity will result from such an attitude. Such people are mentioned in the Coran (XLVIII, 6): "And to torment the hypocrites, men and women, and the idolaters, men and women, who think evil thoughts of God;—over them is a turn of evil fortune, and God will be wroth with them, and has prepared for them Hell,—and an evil journey shall it be!" [46] On the Day of Resurrection they will be hanged by the feet, and severely tortured.² They will say: "O Creator, we have seen all that we should see, and heard all that we had to hear. Let us return to the earth so that we may try to act righteously within our powers, in accordance with Thy command, as it has become clear to us now". But God said (Coran, XLVIII, 11), in spite of their excuses, that they were overpowered by the influence (of considerations) of their property and their families,—He will not help them. It is mentioned about those who had thus acquired such an experience (XXXII, 12): "... hang down their heads before their Lord (saying): O Lord, we have seen and we have heard; send us back then, and we will do right. Verily, we are sure".

Such a truthful religion is that of the Ismailis. They do not observe the actions of the Imams of their time, but follow what the Imams teach. Because the relation between the pupil and the teacher is that of the ear and the tongue, or of wife and husband: ear must learn from tongue, and woman must conceive from man. Besides, sharīʿat is the sphere of the material, and *ṭarīqat*³ and ḥaqīqat are the sphere of the spiritual. Action belongs to the material world, and word belongs to the spiritual. As this truthful community have already left the world of material, with which shari'at is concerned, and reached the world of spiritual, which is that of reality, haqiqat, their eyes are turned towards the word (qawl),¹ i.e. the spiritual world . . .

[A short passage which is illegible in the original is omitted here. It contains some controversial references to the enemies of 'Alī, apparently not connected with these speculations. They are omitted in the HB of Abū Ishāq.]

About the spirit (rūḥ) it is said in the Coran (XVII, 87) : "Say : the spirit comes at the bidding of my Lord". And God the Allhighest says, that, as the spirit belongs to the world of command, it is living, because the command of God is always with it. Whenever the spirit breaks from Him, it becomes separated, and dies. Giving orders to anyone has the form of speech, qawl,—not the form of an action (fi'l) ; the meaning of command (amr) is ordering. As the people who stick only to the letter (zāhir) of religion do not receive the command of the Muḥiqq, or the Bearer of the truth of their time (i.e. Imam), they are as if dead,—as the command does not come to them ; they have no spirit, and, therefore, are dead.

As the power of understanding and reasoning varies with different people, every one should go by the way which may help him to attain [47] his perfection. He must learn the things in the form in which he would be able to understand them. The way to salvation is to receive instruction from the spiritual guide, who directs to the right path,—i.e. from the greatest ḥujjat. It is impossible that the teacher should *act*² on one and the same occasion in such a way as to make his action varied to suit respective degree of intelligence of his followers. His action can only be one in each case. But he can speak in a different way to each follower, in accordance with his capacity of understanding. We made it clear, therefore, that the pupil should not take exclusive note of the actions of his preceptor (which he may misunderstand), but he must follow the teaching of his guide, and obey his orders, whatever the teacher may order (without asking why and for what reason he should do so).³

The Ismailis of the world are those who have made a final determination to live and act in accordance with Truth, under adverse or favourable circumstances, in hardships or in pleasures, in despair or in joy, doing everything to help one another, making the utmost effort, and patiently bearing every form of exile,¹ to which they may be subjected. They must be firm in the temptations which the Muhiqq of their time may force them to undergo. It is said in the Coran (II, 150-151): "We will try you with something of fear, and hunger, and loss of wealth, or souls, and fruit; but give good tidings to the patient, who when there falls on them a calamity, say: verily, we are God's, and, verily, to Him do we return; these, on them are blessings from their Lord and mercy, and they it is who are guided".

Everything that is found on earth or in heaven belongs to the kingdom of Our Lord (Mawlâ-nâ), as is stated in the Coran (III, 186): "God's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth". Therefore, everything that is in existence there is entirely under the command of Mawlâ-nâ, whether willing to obey, or not (Cor. XIII, 16): "All those who are in the heavens or on the earth prostrate before God, either voluntarily or perforce".

They are prepared to suffer hardships for the sake of the True One, and for the Lords of the period of satr, i.e. the hidden Imams, in preference to the pleasures which they may obtain in this world, in accordance with the secret meaning of the hadîth (?): "They are rejoiced in suffering for the sake of God". This world exists for the sake of people like them, so long as such people regard themselves of no importance, in accordance with the hadîth: [48] "If the world remains without the Imam even for a while, it will perish with all its population". He, the Imam, every day looks 100,000 times upon the creation of the world, in accordance with the hadîth: "Whoever dies without having recognized the Imam of his time, he dies as an idolater, and idolaters go to Hell". And it is also said in the Coran (XVII, 73): "The day when We will call all men through their religious leader (Imam)". This means that the adversaries of the religion (ahli taḍâdd) are those who see themselves before anything, and do not see God,—this is the state of unbelief (kufṛ). Such people are adversaries (ahli taḍâdd), and will never attain the belief in One God (tawḥîd).

The people of "gradual progress" (tarattub) are those who see both,—their own selves and God, and this is idolatry (shirk) and insincerity (nifâq).

The people who really profess the belief in One God (ahli waḥdat) are those who see God only, and do not see themselves, nor do they have much regard for their own affairs or their own lives; but they are entirely absorbed in God, never taking any notice of, nor being interested in anything but God. They regard themselves as nothing in relation to God's existence.

¹ Apparently a mistake. The HB Abû Ishâq gives 'azimatt', which is much worse. Probably the correct is adhîyyati, or molestation.

This is the state of those who really believe in the unity of God, His being the only Truth, the Kingdom of God, and Divinity.

Thus the people who are ahli tadâdd, i.e. those who are opposed to religious belief, should try to attain the state of the people of "gradual progress" (tarattub), and the latter should strive to attain the state of the people of wahdat. And the latter have to try to become firmly convinced (sâhib yaqîn), after having passed all the degrees of the belief in the unity of God. Among themselves they should treat each other as if one recognizes that his friend is better than himself, and he should love him better than himself, and risk even his life in order to help him. He must not hide anything from his friend, and must regard all his possessions as belonging to his associate. This is the religious law of this community. And the higher law is that they do not see nor know anything except for Our Lord (Mawlâ-nâ),—exalted be his mention!—[49] and for Mawlâ-nâ are ready to sacrifice themselves, their friends, anything. May Mawlâ-nâ give us all the possible help, in developing real obedience to himself, and may he extend his mercy to all. Verily, He is such, with Him is our account, and we do not want anyone except Him!

They say that at the time of the Prophet the Imam was Mawlâ-nâ 'Alî, and after him was Imam Ḥasan, who was an "officiating" (mustawda') Imam, i.e. Imam was only entrusted to him personally. He occupies a position between the hidden and the manifest ḥujjat (ḥujjati bâtin wa zâhir),—though the state of being hidden or manifest (of such an Imam) differs from that of the ordinary Imam. For this reason Imam was not transferred to his descendants. The real, inheriting Imam, mustaqarr, was Mawlâ-nâ Husayn. Imam was to remain permanently with him and his posterity, just as in the case of Mawlâ-nâ Ismâ'il, who was also called Maliku's-salâm,—he was Imâmi mustaqarr, while Imâm Mûsâ Kâzim was only Imâmi mustawda'.¹ It is said in the Coran (VI, 98): "Now we have detailed the signs of the permanent settlement (mustaqarr) and of the (temporary) depository (mustawda') unto a people who discern". And it is also said in the Coran (XI, 8): "There is no beast that walks upon the earth but its provision is from God. He knows its settlement and its (temporary) resting place (mustaqarr wa mustawda'); all is in the perspicuous book". This means that God the Allhighest said, that to all the believers in God, found between the heavens and earth, two persons give them their bread,—the real (Imam) and the temporary,—this is clear and obvious.

After him (i.e. Imam Husayn) there was Mawlâ-nâ Zaynu'l-'âbidîn, then Mawlâ-nâ Muḥammad Bâqir, then Mawlâ-nâ Ja'far the Ṣâdiq,¹ then Mawlâ-nâ Ismâ'îl. It is said that amongst the sons of Imam Ja'far the Ṣâdiq there was a dispute, and every one claimed Imamatus for himself. The Imamites say that the (right Imam) was Mûsâ KâẒim. To the followers of their school I reply: Imamatus is transferred by naṣṣ, or clear appointment, and the original naṣṣ was given to Mawlâ-nâ Ismâ'îl, and only after this a naṣṣ was given to Mûsâ KâẒim. An Imam, on whom depends the existence of the earth and of the heavens, may find it necessary to do things that we, ordinary mortals, cannot understand or comprehend.²

In addition to this, there was no doubt in the Imamatus of Mawlâ-nâ Ismâ'îl until the time when the naṣṣ was also given to others. And a doubt about the naṣṣ of Imam Mûsâ KâẒim arose the very moment the naṣṣ [50] was given. If he really had been an Imam, it follows that his line would not have ended with his descendant, Ḥasan 'Askarî. We have already proved the point about the extinction of the line in the preceding chapters.³ But there is always apparent (qâ'im) one of the line (dhurriyyat) of Mawlâ-nâ Ismâ'îl. The period of life of each of his descendants is just the ordinary and natural space of time, and there is always a possibility (at least) of some people seeing him, so that whoever is very keen and anxious to see him, can do so. All the promises (wa'da-hâ), found in the Coran and the ḥadîths, regarding the advance of the Qâ'im, of the Resurrection (Qiyâmat), of the cancellation of the law (sharâ'i), and reward of the faithful which will be mentioned in the next chapter,—all these have been fulfilled, and will be fulfilled only in connection with the descendants of Mawlâ-nâ Ismâ'îl.⁴

¹ As is well known, the line of the Imams, as above, so far is recognized also by the Ithnâ-'asharis (who regard Ḥasan as an ordinary Imam).

² This is one of the instances of the author's disregard for history. It is an indisputable fact that Imam Ismâ'îl was nominated first, and Mûsâ KâẒim after him, as is usually narrated, after the premature death of his elder brother, or, as the Nizâris believe, in order to hide the real Imam from the schemes of the Abbasids. It is interesting that in the HB Abû Ishâq these details are omitted. Most probably all this is an emendation of the editors, though it is absolutely incomprehensible why should have they so much perverted the facts.

³ Cf. above, p. 17.

all his affairs. [51] Mawlâ-nâ Nizâr, upon whom was the naṣṣ of Imamât, entrusted to Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ (one of his descendants).¹ Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ was appointed the chief ḥujjat,² and Daylamân, Târim, Âl,³ and Haydarâbâd⁴ were entrusted to him.

After him (i.e. Nizâr), there was Mawlâ-nâ Hâdî, then Mawlâ-nâ Muhtadî, then Mawlâ-nâ Qâhir,⁵ then Mawlâ-nâ Hasan 'alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm (557-561/1162-1166),—he took off the ties and chains from the necks of his followers. 180,000 years had passed from the great ancient era to that time. The Prophet has himself predicted the date. And all that had been prophecied by Moses in the Torah, by Jesus in the New Testament, David in the Psalms, Abraham in his "Books", Zoroaster in the Book of Zand, and Bû Sa'îdî Mânawî in the Book of Angliyân (Euangelion),⁶ and all signs of the prophets came true with Mawlâ-nâ Hasan 'alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm. After him was Mawlâ-nâ Diyâ'u'd-dîn⁷ Muḥammad (561-607/1166-1210); then Mawlâ-nâ Jalâlu'd-dîn Hasan (607-617/1210-1220); then Mawlâ-nâ 'Alâ'u'd-dîn Muḥammad (617-653/1220-1255); then Mawlâ-nâ Ruknu'd-dîn Khurshâh (653-655/1255-1257); then Mawlâ-nâ Shamsu'd-dîn Muḥammad; then Mawlâ-nâ Mu'min Shâh⁸; then Mawlâ-nâ Qâsim Shâh; then Mawlâ-nâ Qâsim Shâh, son of Qâsim Shâh; then Mawlâ-nâ 'Imâdu'l-ḥaqq wa'd-dîn Salâm; then Mawlâ-nâ Salâm Shâh, son of Salâm Shâh; then Mawlâ-nâ Gharîb Shâh; then Mawlâ-nâ Bû Dharr 'Alî; then Mawlâ-nâ Shâh Murâd; then Mawlâ-nâ Dhû'l-faḡâr; then Mawlâ-nâ Shâh Nûru'd-dahr; then Mawlâ-nâ Shâhi dîn Khalîlu'l-lâh; then Mawlâ-nâ Shâh Sayyid Abû'l-Hasan 'Alî; then Mawlâ-nâ Shâh Sayyid Abû'l-Hasan; then Mawlâ-nâ, one who ariseth by the command of God, the ruler (Qâ'im) of the present time and of eternity, the ¹ In all copies, and even in the HB Abû Ishâq, this place is badly mutilated, and is extremely ambiguous. It is not clear by whom and what was handed, and to whom. It may appear as if Mustansîr, or Nizâr, has handed the Imamât to Hasan b. Şabbâh,—which is obvious nonsense. There is no doubt that something is omitted here, most probably (and naturally) the words: farzandi khûd-râ, as suggested in the translation.

² The early historians, such as Atâ Malik Juwaynî, Rashîdu'd-dîn, and Qazwîni never mention Hasan b. Şabbâh's being a ḥujjat.

³ Obviously for Âmul, the ancient town in Mazandaran.

⁴ A fictitious name, cf. above, p. 5, note 3.

⁷ In some copies 'Alâ'u'd-dîn, which form is usually accepted by the historians.

⁸ This name, and a few other names, do not appear in the present official version of the genealogy.

source of generosity and mercy, Our Master and Our Lord, one who knows the mysteries of what is open and of what is hidden, Our Lord Shâh Khalîlu'l-lâh,—prostration and glorification be due at his mention!¹

As it was explained above, it is necessary that an Imam should be the son of an Imam, a descendant of the line (dhurriyyat) of the former Imams, as God Himself said (Cor. III, 30): "... as a line of descendants, one succeeding the other; and God hears and knows". Truly, he possesses noble qualities and high virtues, and the knowledge which leads to God and to Divinity. It is said in a ḥadīth: "The knowledge of God is the knowledge of the Imam of the time".

This is the state of those who attain the true belief in the unity of God (waḥdat), and a degree of perfection on the way to eternity and eternal life. That teaching [52] for the spreading of which all the prophets and saints came (by the glory of Mawlâ-nâ—exalted be his mention, and great be his word!—who is the greatest of all the prophets), now, verily, is continued in the system of this true religion, by the virtue of His Truth (bi-ḥaqq ḥaqqi-hi).

May Mawlâ-nâ, by his generosity and mercy, guide all to the road of the "Direct Path", may he give us the power to obey his ḥujjat, who opens wide the door to the mercy (of the Imam) for the people in the world. Verily, he is in charge of all this, He, to whom our account is to be rendered, Our Lord, the One, besides whom we need nobody!

¹ Shâh Khalîlu'l-lâh, as is known, was assassinated in Yazd some time between 1229/1814 and 1233/1818.

CHAPTER IV

On the meaning of Prophethood, on waṣāyat, or the office of the Executor of the Prophet's will, on the revelation of the Coran, and on its ta'wīl,—with the help of Our Lord! Lord, let us say here only what is right, let only the true statements be made here by this humble slave!

In this chapter, as in the previous chapters, and even to a greater degree than in those chapters which are to follow, the matters are dealt with in such a way as to make them plain and intelligible to the ordinary people; those who are intelligent themselves, can easily understand what is told in them.

The term "prophet", nabî, literally means "informer"; and the "messenger", mursal, means one who is sent to somebody to inform him about something. He, the Prophet, is also called "the lord of resolution" ulû'l-'azm, because his mission is to give mankind a new law, and to cancel the old one.¹

The purpose of creation, and its ultimate goal, is the attainment of the knowledge of God, the Creator. But no one can gain knowledge of anything without acquiring some idea as to its form and its properties. It is impossible for man to acquire the (direct) knowledge of the form and properties of God. We will deal with this subject in detail further on, when dealing with Imamât. All beings in this world came into existence only through the existence of man, either with regard to their physical existence (ṣūrat), or the idea (ma'nî); and no other living being has such (direct) connection (nisbat) with God as man has.

With regard to the physical composition (ṣūrat) we may see that man, created "in the best form (ṣūrat)",² possesses in the way of intelligence or physical force all that he needs for his existence, or for gaining some benefit, or for defending himself against his enemies; he is capable of understanding the nature of all apparent things, of their genus and species; he can overpower [53] every one of them by appropriate means, bringing them under his control.

With regard to his intellectual powers man is the only one of all other living beings who possesses the faculties of thought and reasoning. With the help of these two faculties he is able to distinguish the bad from the good, and to understand abstractions, and laws of nature, or to attain the knowledge of God, if he is of sound mind. He may follow a righteous way of living, and possess such virtues as generosity (or selfdenial), humanity, mercifulness, courage, etc. Or he may possess good qualities, or talents, such as intelligence, a powerful body, a talent for eloquence, etc.;—all these are possessed only by man, and are peculiar only to man.

The power of God (quwwati Ilâhî), by which everything in the world exists, attains its full manifestation in man, and thus all forms of creative activity, that are scattered in nature, are synthetized in man. He, therefore, is the most perfect creation with regard to his substance and qualities (dhât wa sifât); this is because he is composed of all the elements of all created things,—“he possesses a little bit of every thing in his composition, and a combination of elements”.

His real substance (haqîqat), in its evolution, passes through the idea (malakût) of every thing that exists; and while passing through every such “world”, it absorbs the reality (haqîqat) and the properties of that “world”; if it were not so, the human mind would not possess the knowledge and the understanding of the laws of God and of the nature of the world (haqâ'iqi maujûdât).

Entering first the celestial spheres, it acquires the faculty of independent movements (harakâti shawqî) and (Divinely) emanated inspiration (inbi'âthi wahy) as to its own source (mabda'); from the latter originate the lights (anwâr) which human nature possesses.

Entering then the realm of the elements ('anâsir), it acquires the four “natures” (tabî'at),—warm, cold, wet, and dry, of the combination of which the human temperament consists. Then it enters the realm of (solid) matter (mawâlid), assuming the form of foetus (in'igâd), and then developing into flesh, skin and limbs which give it solidness and strength. It accepts then the spirit of growth (rûhi nâmiya),¹ which becomes the cause of its growing (bâlidan).² Next appears sexual instinct, feeling of hunger and thirst, and procreative power; these powers are the strongest in plants, like the date tree which draws its water from a distant place; from its single seed many seeds ultimately come into existence.

Then the soul receives the animal spirit (rûhi haywânî), which becomes the source of its (conscious) life and intellect

¹ The noun rûh is usually masculine, but here it appears both masculine and feminine, just as in many other Ismaili texts. Apparently this depends on the shading of its meaning: it is feminine when it is used to denote an ordinary psychical faculty.

² So in the Haft-bâbi Abû Ishâq, which quite obviously gives the correct reading, instead of the rather strained expression mawâlid used in the original text here. Most probably the verb, bâlidan, which is rather obsolete, was quite unfamiliar to the scribe, who “corrected” it.

(idrâkât) ; from this it acquires the faculty of reaction at irritation, and [54] perception through the senses. By the first it repulses every thing that hurts it, and by the second it distinguishes between what is good to it, and what is not.

Then the soul receives the spirit of human soul (rûhî insânî), which is the reasoning and conscious nature ; with the help of this it is able to understand the eternal laws (haqîqat) of things, and, ultimately, to attain the knowledge of God (ma'rîfat).

Thus we have shown that in the composition of the human nature there are equally mixed the (instincts like those of) eating and drinking, and, on the other hand, thought and consciousness (khîrad wa hûsh). This explains the presence of the diabolical as well as the angelic and human elements in the nature of man. As a poet says :

Thou art (at one and the same time) a devil, a brute, angel and man,—

Thus thou art what of these elements predominates in thee.

Thus it necessarily follows that some one, amongst human beings, is required for the purpose of bringing mankind from the state of bestiality and devilishness to the angelic and real human state, from immorality to righteousness, and from ignorance to knowledge. This cannot be attained unless man is frightened by something, and given a hope (stimulating his moral progress). Primitive man by his nature does not realize anything which is not his own experience of physical things which give him pleasure or pain ; it is necessary for a prophet to explain the devil-like and brutal behaviour in concrete similes, based on experience of senses, and so frighten these primitive people from acquiring undesirable habits. Thus he tells them that the place for sinners is Hell, and that Hell is a place full of fire, with snakes, scorpions and poisonous plants (zaqûm). In the same manner he explains the meaning of the angelic qualities of man in concrete forms, telling them that the place for the good is Paradise, which is a garden, full of good food and drink, pretty girls and boys. A prophet always has to express his teachings in the form of such primitive similes, which are intended and devised equally for the understanding of people of all grades of intelligence, down to the lowest. Primitive people do not understand anything except what can be associated with the experience of their senses, and it is of no use talking to them about anything beyond this ; but intelligent people will at once grasp the purport of the simile.

At the same time the prophet must give to the people his commandments, which they have to follow in order that the world should not lapse into a state of anarchy ; and these commandments must be the same for all,—otherwise every one may claim to be an exception, or to have special privileges, and such conditions may be to the detriment of mankind. [55]

But the conditions of mankind are always changing, under the influence of stars, and peculiarities of different periods, and thus the sharī'at, or the Divine law revealed to mankind, must change. Thus, if the prophet leaves to them a book, its language must be allegorical, and its teachings must be expressed in similes. Only these are intelligible to the primitive people; they cannot understand anything beyond the outward meaning of things, ẓāhir, because they are in their intellectual development similar to brutes; these should follow the outward side of the Prophet's instructions; and this, in reality, is similar to straw or bark. But those who are capable of understanding the inner meaning (bāṭin), and themselves seek for knowledge of the real (ḥaqīqat), living not only by their lower instincts, but also by reason and thought,—these can perceive the meaning of those instructions and commandments.

If, as we have proved, the prescriptions of the religion concerned with commandments for outward piety, ẓāhir, are changing with everything in this ever-changing world, it is clear that the internal meaning of the sharī'at is concerned with the existence of the world of the eternal and real. These, indeed, are necessarily unchangeable and unalterable, because theirs is the world connected with God and Divinity, and this is absolutely unchangeable in its substance. The Truth stands by its own meaning, and the reality of the world is the Truth (Ḥaqq). The stable existence is to remain stable for ever. Thus we see that things in this world pass through different states outwardly; but their substance which is the power of God, is permanent and unalterable. Therefore the letter, ẓāhir, of the religious teaching (sharī'at), which is concerned with the world as it appears to us, must be continually changing, while the inner meaning of it, the bāṭin, which is the revelation of the eternal laws (ḥaqā'iq), is concerned with the world of reality; and since the latter is the same as the world of the Divinity, it is unchangeable.

Thus it is necessary that someone should establish the outward religion, which contains the prescriptions equally obligatory to all, and expressed in a simple and concrete form, thus introducing law into this world. Such a person is called a nabī, or prophet. But similarly there should be a person who ought to explain the inner or deeper meaning of the religion (bāṭinī sharī'at). As human beings vary (in their intellectual capabilities), though their physical appearance may be similar to each other, such a person has to discriminate in giving different commandments to every one, discreetly, not a uniform command to all. He has to reveal the original meaning of the teaching of the prophet, which the latter had to express in a form accessible to the understanding of everybody; he separates the people who are capable of attaining the knowledge (ahli haqiqat) from those who can understand only through similes. He explains the meaning of these allegories, presenting them in an abstract form, just as the prophet in his teaching deals with the matters belonging to the world of sense. The revealed religion (shari'at) is the outer form of the Laws of the Real (haqiqat), while the latter is the inner meaning of the religious practices. [56] The outward form is an indication of the inner contents; the positive religion is an allegory; the eternal laws of the Real, haqiqat, are only allegorized in it. The allegory must fully correspond with its implied meaning. Thus the world of Reality, which is the same as the world of Divinity, is to be lived in after earthly death, as stated in the Coran (XXIX, 64): "Verily the abode of the next world,—that is life". This means that there is no life or animation, except in man. It follows from this that whatever is given as an allegory in the shari'at, i.e. prayer, fast, hajj, religious dues, the Coran, etc.,—of all these the reality is man¹; thus the prayer is (in) man, and the fast is (in) man, and the zakât is (in) man, and the Coran is (in) man, and so on,—every thing the same. Similarly, just as there is one who preaches these allegories, the shari'at, so in the same way it is necessary that there should be one who explains what is allegorized in the religion, i.e. the bâtin of the shari'at. Such a man is called Wasi, i.e. the Executor of the Prophet's will.

It is stated in the Coran that Abraham, while leaving his last will to his own son, said (Cor. XXXI, 12): "Do not practice idolatry, because it is a great crime". Therefore, to be an idolater, or a worshipper of the object which is regarded as being similar to God, is to be a sinner. This "giving God companions", shirk, is exactly what the followers of the shari'at do sometimes. There is no greater sin and crime of this kind than to regard some one the equal (in his rights) of 'Alî,—peace be upon him! The following of the real Truth (haqiqat), is the freedom from that "giving God companions or equals", and this freedom depends on following the Wasi. The meaning of the office of the wasi, executor, as an ordinary term, is the person to whom one entrusts his property, family, and everything after his death, with the right to use these at his own discretion. Similarly, when the Prophet establishes the rule of his sharî'at, he entrusts to his Waşî his property, i.e. his Law and his Book, and his family, i.e. his community, making the Waşî their ruler. But, as his law and his book contain the outer (ẓâhir) and the inner (bâtin) sense, his sons, i.e. members of the community, carry a different share of the inheritance.

The doctrine of the Divine revelation (tanzîl) is connected with the ẓâhir, or the outward meaning of the sacred book, in so far as the sharî'at is based upon it. And, as the Prophet has to address all people equally, just as if giving an equal share to his own sons in his lifetime, he makes no difference between the different groups. To those who understand the tanzîl, or plain teaching, the Waşî gives the tanzîl, and to those who need the ta'wîl, or esoteric meaning, he gives the ta'wîl; thus he teaches every one according to his intellectual ability. [57]

Thus we have proved that, as the ta'wîl can only be given by a Waşî, every Nâtiq has a Waşî. So Adam had Seth, Noah—Sem, Abraham—Ismail, Moses—Aaron, Jesus—Simon, and Muhammad, the Apostle of God,—‘Alî. The story of ‘Alî,—prostration and glory be due at his mention!—may be found in every book and in every collection of ḥadîths; and, with the help of logical arguments and of indications in the tradition, we have already proved his high position.

The real point concerning him is contained in what the Prophet has said about him: “he will pay my debt”. This means that while the Prophet had to express himself in allegories, and did not show his community the way to the inner sense of the religion, as was the command of his message,—Mawlâ-nâ ‘Alî had to pay the Prophet’s debt. This means that he had to bring the people out of the allegorical religion, and the unintelligibility of the sharî'at in its ẓâhir, and lead them to the state of illumination (paydâ’i) in the world of reality (ḥaqîqat).

The term tanzîl, or revelation, comes from the verb meaning to “bring down”, or to make something descend from a higher to a lower place. And the term ta'wîl is derived from awwal, and means “to trace something to its origin”. The ẓâhir, or external form, is the derivative; what lies under the (apparent) world is permanent and eternal. Thus the Lord of the ta'wîl is the one who turns his speech from the ẓâhir towards the inner reality, ḥaqîqat, and helps people to see it.

The Prophet is also called Formative Conscious Principle (‘Aqlî kull), the Foremost (Sâbiq), the Throne (of God, Kursî), the Destiny (qadâ), the Pen (Qalam), the Speaker (Nâtiq), the Apparent (ẓâhir), the sky, the day, the noon, the city, the mover (mutaḥarrik), the Revealer (munazzil), and the one whose teaching ultimately is cancelled (mansûkh).

The Waşî is called Conscious Life Principle (Nafsi kull), the Asâs (foundation, i.e. of Imamât), the Second (or following, thâni),¹ the Table (Lawh), free will (qadar), the letter N (nân), the Silent (ṣâmit), the Inner (bâtin), the earth, the night, the gate, the Quiet (sâkin), the Explainer (mu'awwil), and the Cancelling (nâsikih). The Prophet and the Waşî together are also called the "Two Foundations", asâsain, and the reason and the mind are both together called the "two reasons", 'aqlayn.

As the faculty of the reasonable speech is a form of the activity of the "reasoning mind", nafsi nâtiqa, the Nâtiq is supported by the Nafsi kull, from which he receives the ta'yîd, or spiritual assistance,—this is explained in different ways.

No Nâtiq is free from human weaknesses, as is told in the stories about prophets, and in the Coran. It is the spiritual help of the Nafsi kull that keeps him [58] from committing errors. It is said about the prophets in the Coran (XVII, 76): "And had it not been that We made thee firm, thou wouldst have well-nigh leant towards them a little". In other words, "had it not been that We supported thee, thou wert very near to feeling some liking for false people". This refers to the succession in the caliphate, which the Prophet could give to strangers. And this would be a great error,² if the Conscious Life Principle could commit it towards him.

And in every period of time it is inevitable that there should be a Proof, hujjat, who should be infallible as will be mentioned in the chapter dealing with this question.

May our Lord help his slaves, and may he make firm their belief turning away from the path of futility and error, and concentrating all their efforts and energy on carrying out the commands of the Lord!

² Read in the text: khafâ'ist.

CHAPTER V

On the meaning of Imamât, on the periods of Occultation (satr) and of Manifestation (kashf) of the Imam, and on the meaning of the Great Resurrection (Qiyâmatu'l-qiya'mât).

With the help and blessing of Our Lord, the "One who ariseth" at the Day of Resurrection, the Lord of the eighteen thousand worlds, One who forgives the sins of mankind, we have explained in the preceding chapters, and made it clear, that things existing in this world cannot exist by themselves. Some one must give them existence and make them appear, because every design on the table of existence depends on an author: for the possessed cannot exist without the possessor.

With regard to this matter the people in this world, except for this truthful community (i.e. Ismailis), hold two points of view: one, which is the point of the school called Mu'a'ttîla, or agnostics, and the other, that of the sect called Mushabbîha, or anthropomorphists.

The Mu'a'ttîla, or agnostics, are those who hold that the Allhighest and Real One has no attributes (ṣifât). They say that he is free (munazzah) from form, that His Substance is beyond human knowledge, and can never be comprehended. This school is subdivided into two parties: one of them plainly denies His attributes, but the other does not deny His possessing such attributes, but admits them only because they regard that such attributes are suitable (lâ'iq) to Him, as, for instance, His being Omniscient.¹

We may ask these people: "what then is the object of His knowledge?" They would reply: "it is suitable to His Substance that it should include knowledge". They will say the same thing about all attributes, such as His almightiness, His hearing and seeing every thing, etc., as preached by the prophets. Thus, this school assert such attributes entirely on their own authority: the nature of the Deity, according to them, cannot be known, as He has no form, His Substance cannot be perceived, and His attributes can never be (directly) understood. Then how is it possible to know about His existence, [59] and how is it possible to worship Him? But prophets and saints have come for the purpose of teaching mankind to know Him, and thus of bringing them to Him.

In the Fuṣūli mubārak,¹ or the "Blessed chapters", it is mentioned that once a Daylamite had a dispute with a representative of this particular school at Isfahan. His opponent said: "God has no hands, no eyes", etc.,—he mentioned every part of the human body. The Daylamite replied: "O thou, tail-less! The thing that thou describest is a melon or a water-melon".²

The other school, the Mushabbiha, or anthropomorphists, hold that God has the appearance of a man; He sits on His throne, resting His legs on it, and holding in His hand a scale, by which He weighs the daily bread of people and gives it to them. This school does not permit an allegorical explanation of anything, but accepts literally everything that is mentioned in the Coran and in the ḥadīths. Thus they are just like animals that look only for the rind and chaff, and never get to the fruit and grain. Once a learned man from Gilan was asked: "What is weighed by the scale, which is mentioned (as being in the hands of God)"? He replied: "On the one side of it there is rice, and on the other there is wheat; the rice God showers to us, and the wheat He throws to the inhabitants of the hills".³

They hold that the Coran is eternal, in form (ṣūrat), or contents, and in written letters (ḥarf). Whoever does not believe in this is a kāfir. Another learned man, belonging to this school, was asked once: "If someone dips the hair of a pig in wine, and with it writes quotations from the Coran on thy dress, will these quotations be eternal?" The learned man replied: "Yes". I said to him: "Will the namāz (in such dress) be lawful, according to thy persuasion?" He replied: "No". Said I: "Then how can such quotations be eternal, while a prayer with them is unlawful?"

They say also that nobody knows the ways (ā'in) of God; the Prophet alone saw Him on the night of the Ascension when he went to the top of the sky. And they say that Jabra'il used to descend from God, from the top of the sky.

¹ This quotation agrees with the so-called Haft-bābi Bābā Sayyid-nā (see p. 5, line 15, to p. 6, line 2 of my edition). It is very interesting to find why does the compiler style it "Fuṣūli mubārak":—does this mean that he believes in the book being the work of Bābā Sayyid-nā, or does he in reality quote an earlier work from which this passage is incorporated into the Haft-bāb?

² Here the quotation ends.

Both these schools regard each other as kâfirs, and in this both are right. But this truthful community, i.e. the Ismailis (may God make it stable!) say: "Things in this world must have their Lord, who is, always was, and always will be; He has form and [60] attributes, and, at the same time, has no form and no attributes." It is impossible for one to understand a thing unless he has something in common with that thing's substance and form, for otherwise the object would be entirely incomprehensible to him. And it is impossible to find any way of discovering what is beyond the limits of the knowable.

The intention of God is that He should become known through His Man (Mardi Ū), and should be worshipped in him. Thus He chose man from all creation, and bestowed upon him His own form, properties or attributes. Man is given His own figure, as testified by all the prophets and the righteous (nîkân). Thus (it is said that) when 'Azrâ'il made the body of Adam from clay, the voice of God was heard to say: "Draw the figure of Adam". 'Azrâ'il said: "O Holy Creator, I do not know what design I have to draw". The voice of the Creator said: "Take a bowl with water, place it before thee, look at My reflection in it, and draw the design of Adam in accordance with it". So it is stated in the Coran (?): "Verily the Merciful One created Adam in resemblance of His own form".¹ It is not said that God became manifested in the form of Adam. Therefore the form of Adam is His own form. Similarly in the Bible (Tawrât) it is mentioned: "We wanted to create man according to Our own figure and form so that people should know Me, and should worship Me".² Similarly, it is stated in the Injil that once Jesus was asked what God was like? He replied: "This same form" (i.e. human). And (in a hadîth) it is stated: "I saw God in 'Arafât, riding a camel, with a red cloak over His shoulders". And Zoroaster in the book of Avesta says: "If you want to see God, look at the human face".³

Thus one must know God in His Man,—“know God by Muḥammad and the Ḥaydar of the time”.⁴

The prophets and the righteous (nîkân) thus indicated that he should possess human form,—great and exalted be He!—The truthful of the time call him Our Lord (Mawlâ-nâ), ¹ This Arabic sentence, apparently a hadîth, is frequently quoted here, invariably as a verse of the Coran (cf. also pp. 72, 103, 112, text). Persian translation, which accompanies this sentence, invariably regards the word ar-rahmân as a definition to "ṣûrati-hî",—quite against the rules of grammar. It gives: ṣûrati khâṣṣi rahmânî-yi khûd-ash.

² Cf. Genesis, I, 26-27: "And God said: let us make man in Our image, after Our likeness. So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him".

³ This seems to be purely imaginary.

⁴ In the HB of Abû Ishâq, with which this place literally agrees, this hemistich is omitted.

[61] Imam of the time, and the Qā'im of the Day of Resurrection. The name Our Lord (Mawlā-nā) is one of the greatest names of God. It is stated in the Coran (II, 286) "Thou art Our Lord". And (IX, 51) "and He is Our Lord". And (XLVII, 12) "and Allah is the Lord of those who believe".

The meaning of the expression "Our Lord", Mawlā-nā, is the Lord of the world,—exalted and extolled be He!—who is called also the Imam of the time. The meaning of the Imam is the leader, or the head, and the leader is one whose commands and orders are obeyed by others, as all the slaves have to obey the orders and the commands of their lord. It is also stated in the Coran (XLVIII, 18): "God was well pleased with the believers when they did swear allegiance to thee beneath the tree", i.e. said God the Allhighest: "I am pleased with those of my slaves who take the oath of allegiance under the tree of Tûbâ to 'Alî,—peace be upon him". It is also stated in the Coran (XXXVI, 11): "And everything have We counted in an apparent guide (fî imâmin mubînin)".

He is obvious, if thou lookest into thy soul.

O thou, do not look only on the passions for the water and dust;

See the Light of the Truth by pure eyes,—

Thou canst not see it through this and that.¹

And (XVII, 73): "The day when We will call all men through their leader", i.e. to-morrow, at the day of Resurrection, God the Allhighest will call every community through the Imam and the leader of their time.

In a hadîth the Prophet says: "If the earth remains without an Imam even for a while, it will perish at once, with all its people". And in another hadîth it is stated: "Whoever died without knowing the Imam of his time, died as an unbeliever, and the unbelievers go to Hell". [62]

If thou dost not recognize the Imam of the time as the Truth.

Thou shalt go to Hell, regardless of a hundred thousand (years) of devotion.²

Unless the name of the Imam implies His own person, and all that is told refers to Himself,—exalted and extolled be He,—why should it be so that if He ceased to exist, the world also would cease to exist? And why should it be that one who does not recognize Him, dies as a kâfir, and his place is in Hell?

Once Imam Zaynu'l-âbidîn was asked: "How do you know God?" He replied: "Through His Man of the time".

² Omitted in the HB Abû Ishâq. Here it is quoted also on pp. 63 and 72 (text).

They asked : " And who is His Man of the time ? " He replied : " His deputy (gumāshṭa), i.e. the Imam of the time, is the Proof (ḥujjat) of God the Allhighest ; he is sent down to mankind, as mankind cannot have (any other) proof ". They asked : " What is the knowledge of God ? " He replied : " Knowledge of God is the knowledge of the Imam of the time ". One of the Imams said : " What is said about God, is (also) said about us ".¹

And with regard to the fact that he,—exalted and extolled be He,—is called the Qā'im of Resurrection, we must say that he, the Imam, possesses all the open and hidden properties of God (zuhūr wa buṭūnī Khudā). Every thing that is found in this world has its beginning, necessarily or otherwise, as well as its end ; and everything that has no end has no beginning, because the beginning is only a counterpart of the end, and the end is the end only in relation to the beginning.

The different religions and sects have their origin in relation to the influences of the changing conditions of the world. Religions and sects also have a beginning and an end. This is obvious from the ḥadīth : " From father to son, generation after generation,—whosoever seeks after something shall find it ; he shall find it as having been already possessed by his ancestors, in the life of people. Verily, the earth is never left without a true leader (ḥujjat) of God the Allhighest ". It means that God said : " We made him Our proof amongst men, beginning with his ancestors, by a transmission of the appointment in the office (naṣṣ), generation after generation, descendant after descendant ". God the Allhighest said (Cor., LVIII, 5) : " That is that ye may believe in God and His Apostle ; and these are the bounds (ḥudūd) of God ; and for the unbelievers is grievous woe ". This means : every one who transgresses the ḥudūd, or the exalted bounds, becomes an unbeliever. He will receive a painful punishment,—God forbid ! [63] As a poet says :

If thou dost not recognize as true the Imam of the time,

Thou wilt go to Hell, regardless of a hundred thousand (years) of devotion.²

Thus it follows that everything has to have a limit ; and in the same way the religion introduced by every Nāṭiq has to be cancelled and replaced by a new religion. As it is inevitable that every religion has to have a beginning, it has also to have an end. Such an end of the religion or sect is called its qiyāmat, or the Day of Judgement, and the final end of several religions is called qiyāmatu'l-qiyāmāt ; the person through whom this is effected is called the Qā'im of the Qiyāmat.

¹ The name of the Imam who said this is omitted in both versions.

² The same quotation is also given on pp. 62 and 72 (text).

All the past Imams agree in regarding as the goal of everything its attainment of perfection. In the "Blessed chapters" (Fuṣūli mubārak) it is stated that the qiyāmat is eternal in nature, and the substance of the Qā'im always is present in the world, at every period of time. The perfecting of the religions and sects depends on him, and nothing can last without him, because (only) he can distinguish properly and explain the real meaning of the sharī'at, which is allegorical in its form.

We have already explained that every prophet who comes into this world to lay the foundation of a new religion, must appoint some one to lead the people out of the allegories and to show them the way towards (real) unitarianism (wahdat). Such a person is the Qā'im of the Resurrection, and he has to exist always :

Under the rule of the sharī'at the people seek for him in the heavens ;

But the Light of His manifestation is always apparent on the earth.¹

Otherwise the people of this world would (always) remain with the belief in allegories only.

The Qiyāmati qiyāmāt, or "Resurrection of resurrections", is when the Qā'im manifests himself, with his punishing sword of Unity, to all the peoples of the world. With the first blow of the trumpet he will make all the people die, and with the second blow, by the hand of his almightiness, he will make them all alive again, and they will gain eternal life, the unending and Divine existence.²

And in the "Blessed chapters" (Fuṣūli mubārak) by the Lord of the Earth and of Heaven, Our Lord Abū'l-Ḥasan³ 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām it is stated : "We said that we would kill with the punishing sword of greatness and unity (wahdat) all the people of the world. On one occasion we killed some of them, and on another occasion we kept our promise, so that everything was fulfilled (bā sarī shud) ; and we also killed Death, and made all alive again.⁴ Then by the eternity of the Eternally Extant, and by the existence of the Necessarily Eternal, we have taken the earth and the skies of the sharī'at off, and spread the earth and the skies of the Real Existence (haqiqat)."

[64] It is stated in the Coran (XIV, 49) : "On the day when the earth shall be changed for another earth, and the heavens too". As Muṣṭafā came at the beginning of the last millennium,

² Cf. a quotation of the poetry ascribed to Khwāja Nasīr (Tūsī ?) in the Ma'dinu'l-haqā'iq, fol. 10 (Ismailitica, I, pp. 19 and 36).

³ Usually his name is given as simply Ḥasan. In the HB Abū Ishāq his name is omitted :—Khaddāvanul 'alā dhikri-hi's-salām.

⁴ Again a purely Christian idea.

and said that after him there would be no other sharī'at, it necessarily follows that the Great Resurrection, the Qiyāmati qiyāmāt, is to come (at the end) of his period (dawr).

The indications given by all prophets and by all religions are similar to this. At the time of Adam Our Lord was called Malik Shūlīm, i.e. Seth; the followers of Adam are called *Jāniba*¹; they say that Malik Shūlīm is to return on the Last Day, when he will give his commandments to the people, and explain those mysteries of God's wisdom which are hidden in the sharī'at. The events that took place in the story of Adam and Iblīs, and all that happened, were connected with him.

At the time of Noah Our Lord was called Malik Yazdâq; and his followers are called Barāhīm²; they believe that he is to return on the last Day, to give his commandments, and to send the deserving people to Paradise, and the sinful to Hell. Noah complained to him that some people did not accept his teaching (da'wat), so he gave orders that all should be drowned in the zāhir of the sharī'at. So all were drowned, only those were saved who stuck to the Ark of Noah. Said the Prophet: "My legitimate successors (dhurriyyat) are like the Ark of Noah: whoever abides in it, is saved, and whoever keeps away from it is drowned".³

At the time of Abraham Our Lord was called Maliku's-salām; and even to-day this truthful community invoke him in their prayers. The community of Abraham are called Gabrs, and they also believe that Maliku's-salām is to return on the Last Day. The story of Abraham's looking at the stars, the moon and the sun refer to the dā'i, the bāb, and the hujjat. He never rested until he saw Our Lord, and when he saw him, [65] he served the Lord, and paid to him the tithe. Zoroaster was a hujjat of Our Lord, who appeared at the end of the period of Abraham.

At the time of Moses Our Lord was called Dhū'l-qarnayn. The story of his seeing at night the Light over the tree means the zāhir of the sharī'at. The tree is man, or person, and the Light means the profession of monotheism and the unity of Our Lord. Moses used to call Our Lord Shamba, the Sabbath.⁴

² In the HB Bābā Sayyid-nā (see the preceding note), original MS, p. 9, is given a more correct form, Barāhīma, i.e. Brahmins.

³ This is a well-known Shi'ite ḥadīth,—it is often quoted in the works of Ibn Bābūya al-Qummī.

⁴ In the HB Bābā Sayyid-nā (orig. MS, p. 10) it appears that Moses himself was so called.

At the time of Jesus Our Lord was called Ma'add,¹ and at the time of our Prophet he was called Mawlâ-nâ 'Alî, li-dhikri-hi's-sujûd.

What Jesus meant by promising to come back, to complete the purpose of the Qiyâmat, and to show God to the people, was an allusion to 'Alî. The Prophet said that 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib is to come at the Day of the Judgment, and to raise alone the banner of the Qiyâmat.

All the Imams are Mawlâ-nâ 'Alî himself, all of them are contained (mundarij) in him,—

“as a candle is lighted from another candle”.²

All of them are one in their unique substance; the Imam may appear sometimes as a youth, sometimes as an old man, and at another time as a child,—this is in order that the world should remain as it is. He is the manifestation of all mysteries, and he manifests himself in thirty thousand different guises; every day he looks (naẓar mi-kumad) thirty thousand times on his creations so that the world should remain in order.

The “Resurrection of (all) resurrections”, Qiyâmati qiyâmât, promised by all prophets and saints, was this: the Lord of the eighteen thousand worlds, Our Lord Hasan ‘alâ dhikri-hi's-salâm, was pleased to manifest himself in all his glory in the fort of Alamût,³ as he said himself in the course of his address (khutba): “Rise, for the Qiyâmat has arrived! Verily, the expectation of the sign has come true, and it is this: the Qiyâmat which is the end of all qiyâmats, has arrived,—the day when one ceases to know through indications and signs; the day when one ceases to know from revelations, from sayings of saints, and their indications, and when bodies are engaged in worship; the day when the actions, the speeches, the guiding signs [66] and the indications have reached their final and ultimate goal. Whoever by his own eyes sees the Original Substance, he has seen all the revelations and all the Divine signs; but whoever perceives it through its names and attributes, he is misled and confused, and prevented (from real knowledge).”⁴

¹ So also in the Rawdatu't-taslim (cf. “An Ismailitic Work by Nasiru'd-din Tusî”, JRAS, 1931, p. 559), in the HB Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ (orig. MS, p. 11), etc., while the Kulâmî Fîr in other places (57, 71, 102) prefers Sham'ûni's-safâ.

² Omitted in the HB Abû Ishâq.

³ Cf. above, Introduction, II.

⁴ Read: wa man adraku-hu bi-asmâ'i-hi wa ʿifâti-hi wa huwa . . . More details of the proclamation of the Qiyâmati'l-qiyâmât are given in the HB Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, p. 21; the account given in the HB Abû Ishâq, is worth quoting in full (for the text see Appendix):

“On the seventeenth day of the blessed month of Ramadân of the year 559 (8-VIII-1164), at the hour of the constellation Virgo, when the sun was in the sign of Cancer, he ordered that on the square of Alamût a minbar, or preaching chair, should be erected, facing the West. At the

And Our Lord, the Qâ'im of the qiyâmats,—prostration and glory be due to him!—is the Lord of all things in existence; he is the Lord who is the Absolute Existence; He is all,—there is no existence outside of him; all that is comes from him. He opened the gates of his mercy, making all, by the light of his knowledge, see, hear, speak, and live in eternity; praise and glory are due to him for his generosity,—every one who knows has to render it! Extolled in the extreme is that One, the Glorified One, whose essence is knowledge!

And then he delivered a speech, beginning with: "Dhakartu fî-hi mâ'tamasa-hu Sayyidu'n-nubl" . . . And then he read an epistle beginning with: "Nahnu'l-hâdirûn al-marjûdûn" . . ."

With the help of the Lord, the Qâ'imu'l-qiyâmat, we will write some paragraphs about the date of the Great Resurrection (Qiyâmati qiyâmât), as predicted by prophets and leaders of the religion, as all of them gave information about it, and offered indications¹; also we will write a note on, and the translation of the address (khuṭba) of the Lord, explaining it as far as this humble slave of the rightful and rightly guided religion of Ismailism,—God make it firm in the Eastern lands of the earth and in the Western!—can understand. All this will be mentioned in those "Blessed chapters" on behalf of Our Lord. We will now take up the question of the period of satr, or occultation, and of kashf, or manifestation.

In the time of every prophet who laid the foundation of the new religion, the Imam manifested himself in his own holy substance (dhâti muqaddas). The prophets had to point him out to the people. The periods of occultation, satr, had to come four corners of the minbar four banners were placed; the murids from Khorasan were placed at the right side, the people from 'Irâqi 'Ajam at the left, and the people from Daylamân, Rûdbâr and Barda' (?)—in front, in the middle of the square. He ordered the faqîh Muḥammad Bustî to ascend the kursî, and to sit on it. And then he, Lord of thousands of worlds and of men, Mawlâ-nâ Ḥasan 'alâ dhikri-hî's-salâm himself, dressed in white, and with a white turban on his head, descended from the Fort of Alamût, about noon, and very slowly approached from the right of the minbar, and ascended it. Then he thrice said greetings to the people: first to the Daylamites, then to those on the right, and then to those on the left. He sat for a while on the minbar, then rose again, and, holding his sword, he said in a loud voice: "O ye, the inhabitants of the world, Jinns, men and angels! Know and be aware that this day is called the Day of Union. And whoever will follow the orders will be saved from the punishment of the Day of Judgment. Now you have to carry the news of these orders of Our Lord to all the faithful (mu'mindn), so that they may understand them and obey them."

¹ It is not clear whether he has really written such a work. In the HB Abû Ishâq the text literally agrees in this passage, but instead of the first person Plur. of the Future tense is used the expression nawishtha and. This does not tally with the next sentence which again literally agrees with our text, and contains the words: ba-qadrî ki in kamtarini bandagân . . . râ ma'lâm bâda bâshad.

after such a manifestation, as a trial for the slaves. If the followers of the Imam are not the people of unshakeable faith and seekers after the truth and knowledge, their hearts will go, and they shall become like lunatics. But if they firmly believe, and seek for the Truth, they shall attain perfect knowledge (of the Imam); they will know that Our Lord the Qâ'im of the Qiyâmat always is present in the world, always was, and always will be. [67]

Sometimes he is manifest, and sometimes hidden, sometimes in the form of a father, and sometimes in the form of a son, or a child, or a youth, or an old man, and at other times in the womb of his mother,—

‘Alî was he who, still being in the womb of his mother, Told the Prophet in his ears the meaning of the Coran, by heart.

God the Allhighest said in the Coran (LVII, 3): “He is the first and the last, the manifest and the hidden, and knows everything”:

Sometimes he becomes an old man, or child, or youth;
Sometimes he goes to the heaven in a mi‘râj, sometimes he goes into an abyss;

What worry to a knowing man, even if He comes up in a hundred forms,

Sometimes as Mustanşir, and sometimes as Salâmu’l-lâh.¹

All this he reveals in such a way as to suit the understanding of mankind, in order that the world should remain. The people, being unable to see what is beyond their own selves, would be otherwise unable to know their Imam, and would not find a way to him. And if it were not so, as is said:

Before the creation of the world, so many thousands years,

There already were Mustafâ and ‘Alî, sitting together,²

—there would be no unchangeability in the realm of the Divinity and Godhead; thus they appear to mankind in this way.

Sometimes it happens that a period of the concealment of the Imam (satr), and of the hiding of the real faith (taqiyya) arrives owing to the heaviness of the sins of the faithful, as is said:

² The same quotation appears on p. 38 (text).

Thou committest sins on the earth, and thou dost not know,
That the moon in the heaven becomes eclipsed due to thy evil acts.

This happens when Our Lord looks at them with anger; and the return of the period of his manifestation (kashf) comes from his mercy, when he looks at his slaves with kindness. The period of manifestation and presence of the Imam is like day, and the Bearer of the Truth (Muḥiqq) is like the sun; the period of occultation is like night. His ḥujjat is like the moon, the dā'is are like stars. At night, when the sun is hidden, the light comes only from the moon and from the stars. So, during the period of the satr, or occultation, when the people of truth cannot come directly in touch with the sacred person of the Truth-giver (Muḥiqq), they can find the way to the right faith in obedience to, and knowledge of, the persons who at that time are deputed by the Imam. Such are the greatest ḥujjat, the bâb, or the sacred "gate" to his knowledge, [68] as is said:

The path to him lies through the heart of the ḥujjat;
The ḥujjat knows everything by the direct Divine help (ta'yîd) to his heart.

At the period of the hidden (maṣtûr) Imams, during the first period of satr, which arrived soon after the death of the Prophet and of his Waṣî, the ḥujjat was 'Abdu'l-lâhi Qaddâh¹; and in the second period of satr the ḥujjat was Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ.² And the eternal Light, Mawlâ-nâ Hâdî was he whose mysteries were known to Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ.

As at day-time the stars do not give light when the sun is in the sky, so at the time of Mawlâ-nâ 'Alî Salmân did not preach in his favour. At every period of the manifestation, the faithful must recognize the Bearer of the Truth (Muḥiqq) and learn his message (sirr) from those who are entrusted with preaching (da'wat) in his favour, as he is in reality, and as in the relative form (dar ḥaqîqat wa idâfat). And in the period of the satr, or occultation, his great da'wat is in charge of his ḥujjat and his dâ'is. "There will be a guide (hujjat) to the people [after the Prophet]."¹ But it happens sometimes that the Imam, even during his personal manifestation (zuhûr), commissions the hujjat to carry on the da'wat: but it is impossible for both the Imam and his hujjat to be hidden. At the time of the Qiyâmati qiyâmât, when everything will be revealed, there will be no hindrance, either belonging to the physical world, the zâhir, or to the spiritual sphere, the bâ'in, before the eyes of the people; then neither the hujjat, nor other dignitaries will be manifest, the Qâ'im will be then himself the source (wujûd) of everything.

¹ In the HB Abû Ishâq is given 'Abdu'l-lâhi Maymûni Qaddâh. References to him in Ismaili works are found very rarely. In a late work (belonging to Fatimid tradition) on esoteric Ismailism, the Zahrû'l-ma'ânî, by Sayyid-nâ Idrîs (d. 872/1468), 'Abdu'l-lâh is regarded as a descendant of Salmân Fârîsî.

In the book called Kanzu'l-gharâ'ib it is stated that the true prophets and the righteous saints came into this world by the order of God; they were Divinely supported, and instructed by Him, thus acting on His behalf, their mission being necessary (wâjib) to Him. The world cannot remain in order without the presence of prophets and their lieutenants. If all actions of mankind have to be regarded as proper and permissible (kardânî), it would result in the world's being ruined because then we would have to regard everything as lawful: murder, rape, all possible grave crimes, and even the slaughtering of all human beings by each other, as these are actions which a human being can do; and if every action were lawful, then these would be lawful too. Yet, if every (independent) action were prohibited and prevented from being done, life would be impossible,—both these extremities are impossible and absurd.

No one, except the Real Actor, knows for certain what action is lawful, and what is not. [69] It is therefore necessary to God, in the system of his created world, to select someone from amongst mankind, and to endow him with the knowledge of the value of actions, through the Divine inspiration (ilhâm) and revelation (wahy). Those who get their knowledge of the commandments of God, and the standard of actions through revelation (wahy), are called prophets, and those who receive it through inspiration (ilhâm), are the Imams and saints (awliyâ). They order the people to act in such a way that they separate good actions from bad, showing which are good and which are bad; then they command them to do those which are regarded as good, and prohibit the doing of those which are bad, so that the world should attain an orderly state, and should not deteriorate. Such (a system of) commandments and prohibitions is called shar', or law, and him who gives the law they call ṣāhibi shar'. The wisdom (ḥikmat) of God decides whom to send at each particular time, so that he may bring his book, which cancels the book and the shar'i'at of his predecessor. Whenever such is the order of God, it is the duty of the faithful to believe in the book and the shar'i'at of the prophet who cancels the law of those who came before him. The meaning of the naskh, or cancellation, is making it futile; if the shar'i'at is cancelled, it becomes useless, one has to abandon it, and to believe in the new prophet. The real prophet is he of whom God said (XXXIII, 40): "Muḥammad is not the father of any of your men, but the Apostle of God, and the final prophet". He is also the one who gives the law, the rules of the spiritual progress (ṭarīqat), the knowledge of the Reality (ḥaqīqat), and the absolute knowledge of God (ma'rīfat). All these forms of knowledge are found in his descendants; they always were found, and are found at present; and all his miracles, such as the Mirāj, or ascension to heaven, the splitting of the moon (by his finger), etc.,—all are true.

Whoever believes in a way different from this, and whoever objects to his shar'i'at, without the order of the Lord of the time, becomes a kāfir; and even if he repents, his repentance will never be accepted. In reality he is following the evil instincts of himself, thus becoming disobedient and a kāfir, in accordance with the utterance of the Prophet: "Whoever dies without recognizing the Imam of his time, dies as a kāfir, and the place of the kāfir is in Hell, even if he is a Jew, Christian, or Zoroastrian". [70] This is because when there is no prophet or law-giver in the world, his people may be under various illusions (ṣūrat-hā); if these are not destroyed by the Imam of the time, it is possible that all the people may become kāfirs,—God save us from this! He, the Imam, saves the mysteries of the prophets from oblivion, and with the help of these mysteries he calls to God all the people, in accordance with every one's capability of understanding, and teaches them the knowledge of God.

Such true Imams after the Prophet are the Commander of the Faithful 'Alī, and his descendants, till the Day of Resurrection. Whoever believes otherwise, is a kāfir, in accordance with what was said by the Prophet: "Whoever follows a religious leader other than 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, and his lineal rightful descendants, he is a cursed unbeliever, even if he is a faithful follower of 'Isā b. Maryam".

With regard to what we said about the religions of the earlier prophets being cancelled, it should be noted that the commandments of the earlier Imams also can be cancelled; this has happened on many occasions. It happens that, in connection with the special requirements of their times, some prophets and Imams introduce new practices, peculiar to themselves; and subsequently one of them, also for the benefit of some special requirements of the time, acts against the prescriptions of his predecessors. It is necessary to recognize each of these two contradictory orders in its proper time, and to follow the one which was ordered at the time in question, in order to be a faithful follower, as is stated in the Coran (IV, 62): "O ye who believe! obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those in authority amongst you". So that one should not become one of the disobedient or deceiving, about whom God said (XXV, 46): "Nay, they err more from the way",—God save us from this!

The fifth question¹ is that about the ma'âd, or the future life. This belief implies the return of the individual soul to its source, in one of these three ways:

The first is that of the souls of the good and obedient, whose good deeds in the world [71] outweigh their bad: those who are not criminals, heretics (mulhid), or irreligious people, who in this world did not neglect matters pertaining to the future life, and never attached more importance to matters of this world than to those of that. Those who always spent their time in worshipping God, in doing meritorious deeds, in carefully following the prescriptions for the life in this world and in that, and being perfectly obedient; and this is the virtue of the faithful which is something like the "Lote-tree of the last eternal limit" (Sidratu'l-muntahâ) of those who possess religious knowledge. The people who act thus are called the people of the right hand, or of the right wing; they are the pious and righteous, the well-behaving, those who recognize the Imam of their time, as is said in the Coran (IV, 87): "Whoso associates (himself) sincerely, shall have his share therefrom". Their virtues will be rewarded in Paradise, in the manner we have explained.

The second variety of the people is called the people of the left hand, or wing. They are seekers after the wealth and pleasures of this world, evil-doers, and offenders against themselves, and those who do not obey the orders of the Imams and the prophets; as the Prophet said: "This world is like carrion, and only dogs are after it". Such people will go to Hell, which is to be their reward, as promised in the Coran.

The third kind of people are the heirs of the palace of Unity, the chosen servants of the Throne of the Almighty, and the intimate trustees of the Abode of the Divine Union; the Creator has given them the name of the associates (muḡarrabân), according to the verses of the Coran (LVI, 10-11): "And the foremost,—the foremost are those who are brought nigh". They are beyond Paradise and Hell, and are allowed, after having witnessed the beauty of the Divine irresistible Might (jabarût), to be the witnesses of the world of the Divine Power (malakût). They are prophets and saints (awliyâ), and it is said about them:

I will not go to Paradise until I see Thy beautiful countenance,—

Of what use is Paradise for me if the Beloved is not there? ¹

When some one of the second group, i.e. the sinful ones, even in appearance (ba-ṣûrat) believes in Muḡammad and his posterity, as stated in the Coran (III, 30), "Descending one from the other, and God is the One who hears and knows", or, in accordance with the verse (IV, 62): "O ye who believe, obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those in authority amongst you", and gives an outward testimony, [72] supporting this by the faith of the heart, he, though he has sinned (accidentally), after suffering punishment for some time, will be defended by the Prophet and his descendants, the intimate trustees (of God). By their intercession such a person will be saved, and will not remain for ever in the state of those who are being eternally punished.

Those who do not believe in all sincerity, who do not obey the Imams, and, perhaps, do not recognize the Imam of their time, are the munkirs, or unbelievers, and their place is in Hell for ever. If they do not attain the knowledge of the Imam of their time, or the knowledge of their own selves (nafs) (?),² they die as heathens, contrary to what is the case with the good, as God mentioned in the Coran (XCV, 5): "Then We will send them to the lowest of the low". And it was said before this: "We have created man in the best of form. If he does not recognize himself, We send him to the lowest of the low",—God save us from this!³

If thou dost not recognize the Imam of thy time as the Truth itself,

² In another place, see p. 68, it is stated, in accordance with the well-known Sufic ḥadīth, that whosoever acquires the knowledge of himself, he, through this, acquires the knowledge of God.

³ Here the "fifth mas'ala" ends, and the text of the HB Abū Ishāq again begins to agree.

⁴ The same quotation appears on pp. 62 and 63 (text).

All that is given in a condensed form in that first emanation (tajalli),¹ is here given in detail, in accordance with the verse : "God the Merciful created Adam in resemblance of His own form."²

When we sent Adam out,
We put Our own beauty in the desert.

In accordance with a ḥadīth, God said : "I was a hidden treasure, and wanted to become known, so I created the creatures, so as to become known to them". This means that God the Most High says : "I was hidden, and wanted to become manifest, then I created the Universal Reason and the Universal Spirit ('Aqli kull wa Nafsi kull'). And out of love for these two Lights I created the world and the people of this world, so that I might become manifest,—and I attained what I desired."

The Perfect Man was the crown of all creation, being a manifestation of the Divine attributes of Beauty and Greatness ; he accepted the burden of responsibility. A truthful wise man³ says concerning this : [73]

The Heaven could not take up the burden of the responsibility,
The fateful die then fell to my humble name.

Man comprises the whole (jāmi'a) of the Reality (ḥaqīqat), in the sense that what is in a great mass diffused in the Macrocosmos, all this in nucleus is contained in man. This means that whatever is found in space (āfāq), is found in the soul (anfus). The man who attains the knowledge of the Imam of his time becomes an intimate servant of the Abode of the Divine Glory. Then he finds the path of happiness in both worlds, which is the knowledge of himself, and which is composed of the knowledge of the beginning of existence, and its ultimate purpose (mabda' wa ma'ād). It is said in a reliable ḥadīth : "Whoever attains knowledge of himself, he has already attained the knowledge of his Lord".

Become a knower of thy own nature,—
Then be the first amongst men.⁴

As soon as one attains the knowledge of self, he attains the knowledge of the Imam of his time, his standing becomes high

⁴ This bayt belongs to the Rawshand'i-nāma of Nāṣiri Khusrāw (p. 528, verse 7 of the Tehran printed edition).

in creation, and he attains a high degree of honour, in accordance with the verse of the Coran (XCV, 4): "We have indeed created man in the best of symmetry". He becomes then one of the people of the "right hand", to whom will belong (Cor. XCVIII, 7) "gardens of Eden (which they shall enter), beneath which the rivers flow,—they will live there forever".

Praise be to God, and thanks to Him, that this knowledge of the Real Truth (ḥaqīqat) is so widespread nowadays that those who hear it, are unable to refute it, and many of those who denied it have now accepted it. Let us hope that they, by the generosity and the mercy of Our Lord, will gain complete faith, becoming members of the community of those who sit in rows waiting for orders at the door of the Divāni taqarrub, i.e. "Palace of easy access", as important and intimate servants, in the Abode of trustfulness.

After the Prophet his Waşī, Executor, solves all the difficulties which arise in his community, preventing the people from falling into error, disobeying, or rebelling. After himself he appoints another Imam, and transfers to him the knowledge of the mysteries. Such Waşīs were six in number, each with every Nātiq: Seth at the time of Adam, Sâm at the time of Noah, Ismâ'il at the time of Abraham, Aaron [74] at the time of Moses, Sham'ûnu's-şafâ (Simon) at the time of Jesus, and the Commander of the Faithful at the time of Muḥammad.

The Commander of the Faithful 'Alī was the greatest amongst all prophets and saints, pious and holy. Concerning him there are many direct indications in the Coran and in the ḥadīths, such as the sūras "Tabâraka", "Yâ-sîn", "Hal atâ", and the verses like "Al-lâh nûru's-samawât wa'l-ard"; the sûra "In-nâ anzalnâ" is also about him, as God said that just as the month of Ramaḍân is better than a thousand other months, so the Imam of the time is greater than a thousand prophets and apostles.

This means that the light of Prophethood is derived from the light of walâyat (i.e. Imamship). Is there any honour that can equal what the Prophet said about 'Alī: "My flesh is from thy flesh, my blood is from thy blood, my body is from thy body, and my spirit is from thy spirit"? And there is a ḥadīth about Mawlâ-nâ 'Alī: "I am the city of knowledge, and 'Alī is its gate".

I heard that he (the Prophet) uttered the words similar to jewels,

In the ḥadīth making the spirit to rise, uttered by his ruby-like lips:

"I am the city of knowledge, and 'Alī is its gate,"—

What an honouring ḥadīth (in favour of the one) whose watch-dog at the door I am.

In another poem :

If the seas become ink, and all trees—reed pens,
 If the seven heavens become paper, and Jabra'il the one who offers praise,
 If all the Jinns and men were to write the praise to the Shâh,—
 Not even one point out of a thousand would be recorded.

It is necessary to know that the Imam is the ruler of the religion, and gives orders with regard to whatever he thinks is beneficial to the religious life or to the welfare of the people. His nature belongs to the realm of the greatest and most impenetrable mystery, and to the wisdom of the eternal infallible commandments, as stated in the hadith : " If the earth were to remain without the Imam even for a while, it would perish ", as he is the centre of the heavens and of the earth, and the world cannot exist without him. [75]

Now we have to explain the difference between the real hereditary Imam, mustaqarr, and the temporarily acting Imam, mustawda'. The difference between them exists only in so far as the question of inheritance is concerned, as in the case of Imam Hasan and Imam Husayn.

The " personal " Imam, mustawda', is a son of the Imam, the oldest, if there are several of them, who also knows all the mysteries of Imamatus, and so long as he discharges his duty he is the greatest of all people of his time. But he is not endowed with the privilege of transmitting his Imamatus to his descendants, who can never become Imams, only Sayyids.

The ordinary Imam, mustaqarr, is endowed with all the privileges of Imamatus, and transmits them to his successors. After 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib the Imam was Imam Hasan, who was only a personal Imam¹; then Imam Husayn, the hereditary Imam, mustaqarr. After him Imam Zaynu'l-âbidîn, then Muḥammad Bâqir, then Imam Ja'far Ṣâdiq; after him Imam Mûsâ Kâzîm, on the same conditions as Imam Hasan after (Imam) 'Alî.²—he had not the privilege of transmitting the nass, or heritage. After him Imam Ismâ'il,³ who was an absolute Lord (az arbâbi illâq),—his vision was directed to the Absolute Contemplated (Manẓûri Mutlaq). He did not follow the same practices as the followers of the letter of the law (shar'). And this is no defect at all in the realm of the Reality, as is stated in the Coran (XI, 8) :

³ It is really strange to see such persistent and obstinate disregard of history. The author was surely acquainted with the fact that the appointment of Mûsâ Kâzîm was due to the premature death of Imam Ismâ'il. Why should he pervert the facts, and for what purpose?—seems really puzzling.

"There is no beast that walks upon the earth but its provision is from God. He knows its settlement and its resting-place; all is in the perspicuous book". Since Ismâ'il knew that Imamât was to remain with his descendants, he agreed to the naṣṣ of Mûsâ Kâzim, so that they were not opposed to each other. It is known to all that, as stated in the book called Rawḍatu't-taslīm,¹ when Mûsâ Kâzim was imprisoned by the caliphs of Baghdad, his enemies told him that his brother, Imam Ismâ'il, was trying to usurp his position. He replied: "How can you tell such lies,—he is the one appointed by God and by the Prophet, by the verse of the Coran (III, 30): Descending one from the other, and God hears and knows". He then prayed for Ismâ'il, saying: "God, do not deprive my descendants of the blessing of the descendants of Ismâ'il". This is narrated in the book called 'Umdat'u't-tâlib,² which is one of the (most) reliable works on the descendants of the Prophet. [76]

This case exactly resembles that of the prophets Ishâq and Ismâ'il.³ So many descendants of Ishâq have perished, and ultimately the office of prophethood and of Imamât remained in the progeny of Ismâ'il. We must now overcome our inclinations either to see things in a wrong light, or to disregard them, and must see that both are one and the same thing,—one does not exclude the other.

Remember that thou must obey and follow the Imam of the time; thou must be prompt to do everything that he orders. The office of Imamât existed before the creation of the world, of space, and of Adam, but it became permanent, and was transferred from father to son (dar nasl), from the time of Abraham, as is mentioned in the Coran (III, 30): "Verily, God has chosen Adam, and Noah and Abraham's people, and 'Imrân's people above the world",—i.e. "Verily, I have selected Adam and Noah, and 'Imrân's people"; the latter refers to Abū Tâlib, because the "descendants one from the other, till the Day of Judgment" (Cor. III, 30), i.e. the Imams, have been in every period, and continue at present in the 'itrat, or descendants of the Prophet. The Imam sometimes receives his office by an express appointment, naṣṣi šarîḥ, sometimes by an implied indication, naṣṣi khafî. Therefore it is necessary that the Imam should either appoint as his successor one of his sons, or declare openly that after his death so-and-so is to be the Imam. In addition to this the naṣṣ may consist in the Imam's conferring upon one of his sons of something that is definitely associated with Imamât; or he should give instructions to the asâs(?),¹ or the Imam should tell this to one of his thoroughly trusted ḥujjats, or dâ'is, in a clear and unequivocal way.

² In the 'Umdat'u't-tâlib (cf. above, Introduction, III), pp. 208-209 of the Bombay lithogr. ed. of 1318, the story is quite different from this. There is nothing, of course, about the relations between Ismâ'il and Mûsâ, as the latter was not appointed the Imam until Ismâ'il died, but there is much about the rivalry between him and the son of Ismâ'il, Muḥammad. The attitude of Mûsâ Kâzim to his nephew appears to have been not as idyllic as our author represents it. The details of the story, which is given here, are omitted in the HB Abû Ishâq.

Thus the Imams are those who are near God (muqarrabân), who are trusted by Him and chosen by Him; and the Shi'ites, or followers of the Imams, are the people who (on the Day of Judgment) will be placed on the right hand. Theirs is the way which is called "good" in the ḥadîth: "Those who observe good customs and practices, they will receive a reward, a large reward", i.e. "Whoever teaches the people a good practice, I shall teach him twice as much", etc.,—so that ultimately all these people should act in expectation of the reward for good behaviour.

For these reasons it is necessary that the ḥujjat, the dâ'î, and the ma'dhûn should carry on preaching of the religion (da'wat) within the limits of their ability and competence. It is said that if there is even an ant in its hole, and if some benefit to the da'wat may be expected [77] from it, the dâ'î must sit even years in expectation before that hole, waiting for the chance when that ant comes out; then he should preach to it, as perhaps from that ant the religion (dîn) may be strengthened, and he, the dâ'î, can share the reward.

These dignitaries are the people who on the Day of Judgment will be placed on the right side: all of them, either the ḥujjat, or the dâ'î, or ma'dhûn, or the mu'allim, or the mustajîb, must fear God, be chaste, clean in thought, strict in piety, obedient, truthful and sincere, genuinely generous, and must possess a sincere faith in the da'wat of Our Lord. They must be absolutely ready to do any service for him, in accordance with the verse of the Coran (IV, 62): "Obey God, and obey the Apostle of God, and those in authority amongst you". They must regard it their duty to strengthen the religion, so that they may acquire a greater reward for the da'wat than other dignitaries. The religion and piety can exist only through the da'wat, and the stronger this is, the greater is the reward. It is said in the book called *Nasā'ih*¹:

O faithful, obey His command.

It is for this that the Prophet received inspiration from God.

A faithful believer must be pious and self-restrained, as is said in the Coran (XLIX, 13): "Verily, the most honourable of you in the sight of God is the most pious of you". Know that it is necessary for you to follow obediently Him who is the Source of being. Know that God is watching you and is always present, at the time of your walking, or speaking, or sleeping. Live in such a way as not to be ashamed before God, who always sees you; form a habit of being truthful, as it is a cure against misfortune. Pay the tithe of your income to him, because, as the Prophet said, "Payment of the tithe brings blessing upon the property". The faithful must pay one-fifth of his income to the Prophet and his descendants. And every dīnār,² which is spent in the way of God, every hundred in this world will bring you one thousand in blessing in the future life. And it is stated in the ḥadīth: "Whoever gives money as charity for the sake of religion (ḥasana), will receive ten times as much in return". This is called the debt of the ḥasana. [78] It is said in the Coran (?): "Pray, pay the tax",—and also (LVII, 17): "They have lent to God a goodly loan". And it is said: "A hundred in this world in the next life will become a thousand",—and this is the result of the "goodly loan" (ḥasana), as a reward for it.

Helping one's co-religionists and brothers is a fundamental religious duty,—do not become slack in its discharge, as this brings a great spiritual advantage. The purity of thought of the faithful is effected by moderation in food, in talk, and sleep.

² The appearance of such an archaic term may be explained, most probably, by its retention from an old work which is here quoted. It is common in the works on fiqh, both Sunnite and Shi'ite.

Do not show your pride in worldly matters, and do not despise those who are poor,—this becomes only the mean among the unbelievers, and the fools. Pray to God to give you right and sound faith, and the knowledge of God.

The purpose of being one of the faithful, mu'min, is to set an example to others, so that they should see and think : " Why should not I be like the mu'min ? " Suppress enmity and envy, and do not let hatred come into thy heart, because hatred, envy, and violence deprive the faithful of faith. Purify your hearts of enmity to each other, as it is not right of the faithful to have it in his heart. His heart is the house of God ; or, as the Prophet said,—“ the faithful is the Throne of God ”. This means that whoever has hatred in his heart, desecrates the house of God. And when the house becomes polluted, the master of the house cannot dwell in it. Thus the faithful loses his faith (imān). Keep away from fanaticism (ta'aṣṣub), except in the case of the enemies of the religion. Never tell lies to the friends of the Prophet and of his descendants ('itrat) ; and be polite to everybody, always observing the policy of generosity and goodwill,—these three virtues are the hidden axis of all pious deeds. If you quarrel amongst yourselves, do everything possible to secure peace ; make your ideal humility or meekness,—by this you can make your lives and conditions similar to those in the heaven. Do not turn your faces away from those who represent the Imam of the time ; be steady in religion, because this world is only a loan, as stated in the Coran (LVIII, 5) : “ That is that ye may believe in God and His Apostle ; and these are the bounds of God ; and for the unbelievers is grievous woe ”. [79]

My dear friend, take care of thy soul, and keep away from evil and mischief as much as possible. Do not spoil in your youth the valuable jewel of the soul.

Bābā Sayyid-nā says on this subject¹ : “ Limitless praise and thanks are due to the substance of Muḥammad, the chosen from all prophets, who collected the principles of the shari'at of all the law-givers, in accordance with the verse of the Coran (II, 152) : “ These, on them are blessings from their Lord and mercy, and they it is who are guided ” ; and to the manifestation the One who manifests the substance, which is, as the Prophet said : “ I and 'Alī were both a light before God the Allhighest, fourteen thousand years before Adam was created ”. And, explaining the things as they are in Reality, on the question of taḥḥid, or the profession of God's unity, the Prophet said : “ I and 'Alī come from one and the same light, I am 'Alī, and I am from him", i.e. "I am of his substance". And in the abode of this world, for explaining His great might and authority, he, the Prophet, in a perfect (=last ?) speech (khutba), (referring to his position, which is as high as his perfect nature), tells that he is "the abode of wisdom, and 'Alî is its gate". He came to open the doors of knowledge and to unlock the gate of wisdom and spiritual vision. And blessings on his descendants of whom every one is like a guiding star in the heavens, to show the way to all those who lost their way in the desert of sin and ignorance. And especially to that Substance, which cannot be regarded except as the dot of the holy nature in the plurality of the letters of the being, and in the centre of the circumference of the circle of the existence. This sacred manifestation cannot be described adequately by the language of the humble or of the noble, when one has to offer it praise and glory.

O thou, the attribute of the Soul of the World,
 O thou, who bringest faith and piety to all !
 There is no one except Thee who really speaks,
 Speaks in both worlds, by the tongues of all.
 Though God has sent an Apostle,
 There is no Universal Spirit and Soul except Thee.
 Thou wert a companion of all, and from Thee
 Every one's heart and soul is full of light. [80]

Prayers of God and His blessing be upon him and upon his descendants and offsprings, the pure !

Then : For a long time I had the desire and inclination, hidden and open (to write a treatise) explaining the sermon, khutba, which is attributed to the Commander of the Faithful and the Imam of the pious, the centre of the religion (?), the defeater of the proud and the destroyer of unbelievers, 'Alî ibn Abî Tâlib,—greatest blessings be upon him !—The book is called Khutbatu'l-bayân, or, as some hold, Khutba'i anâbat, or the "Sermon of the appointment of the lieutenant", etc.; it is based on the words of the Prophet. How can these sacred words be analysed and synthetized in such a way as not to appear to conflict with the letter of the religion, ẓâhir, and not to provoke objections from the orthodox ?

To reply this I have to mention that in a ḥadîth it is stated : "The slave of God, with the help of the acts of piety, never ceases to approach Me by performing religious practices (in addition to what is commanded for every faithful), until I begin to like him (for the sake of these). And when I, God, really begin to love him, I become his hearing, by which he hears; and his sight by which he sees; his hand by which he takes, and his foot by which he walks".¹

What is intended in this passage is this: the organs of man, and their functions, such as those of hands, feet, etc., or hearing, sight, etc., are connected with the nature of man. Thus in both (?) ḥadīths which are mentioned above, every name agrees (?).¹ It is clear that the Master of Life is the possessor of all the truth. Thus whatever man says, or hears under such circumstances, it is He, God, and no one except Him, who speaks or hears. Some of the people who attained to such a high degree used sometimes to utter words which may appear objectionable to the common people, and opposed to the letter (ẓāhir) of the sharī'at; for instance (the well-known expression) "I am the Truth", or "Praise be to me". The Prophet said: "I and 'Alī are that Light which spoke to Moses". [81]

Al-lāh, Muḥammad, and 'Alī are one and the same substance,

Though to those whose vision is imperfect they appear as three.

We may explain this: whenever iron is put into fire, surrounded with burning charcoals, and the fire is made to blaze, the iron, being exposed to the flames, and remaining in a close touch with it, is purified of its blackness, solidity, and impurity, and reaches the state in which it acquires all properties usually associated with fire itself, such as sparking or burning, which are the ultimate nature of fire, and which thus become found in iron. In the same way, the slave of God who attains the distinction of being specially favoured by God owing to pious actions, as mentioned above, becomes God's own, devoted hands and feet, hearing and sight. Then his every action is in fact the action or property of God, as the Prophet says (Cor. VIII, 17): "Thou didst not shoot when thou didst shoot, but God did shoot". Though in appearance the act of shooting is attributable to the Prophet, in reality it was an act of the Truth.

Thus in this ḥadīth, concerning the position of 'Alī, the Prophet said: "He ('Alī) is loved by God and by His Apostle". And as God has called him His Friend and His beloved, who can question, why and how this is?

In another ḥadīth it is said: "I and 'Alī are praised in the Substance of God". And again he said: "I am the word of God, the preacher (Nātiq), and one who converses with God".—because conversation is the highest limit of friendly relations and association; whoever attains this degree is as if praised in the Substance of God, who is only One.

As thus the Prophet calls him "the Word of God"; and, as God has created both of them by His Word, bringing them into existence, this is in accordance with the words of God (Cor. XXXVI, 82): "Verily, His bidding is only when [82] He desires anything, to say it "be",—and it is". We may add that "bringing into existence", ijād, means when that thing becomes apparent. And also it is said in the Coran (VIII, 7): "God wished to prove the truth true by His words". And He makes falsehood false by His words, too.

It is proved thus that all things are subject to the will of the *Šāmit*¹ of the Truth, i.e. the Imam, and are under his control, as stated in the Coran (VII, 52): "And the sun, and the moon, and the stars are subject to His biddings", or (XVII, 87): "They will ask thee of the spirit. Say: the spirit comes at the biddings of my Lord", as the Imam is "I am the Order of God and the Spirit". And the command (amr) of God is that by which the word of order, "be", appeared. Therefore, it is befitting to every soul that sees through illumination, inspiration, or inquiry by the word of the Preacher (Nātiq), to say (Cor. LVII, 3): "I am the First and the Last, Manifest and Hidden, knowing every thing".

As God said that the Amīr, i.e. 'Alī, is the Word (Kalima) of the Divine Command "be", therefore, it follows, it is true that he is as is said: "I am the designer of men in the wombs of their mothers". Because every design which appears on the surface of nature, and by which every existent thing in this world is stamped, comes out of that (primaeval) Word of the Divine order.

This is why it is perfectly right that he, the Imam, should say: "I am the Word of God", because if, by chance, it disappears from the things of this world, everything ceases to exist. And this is why 'Alī said: "Thy medicine, though thou dost not realise this, is in thee; but thou missest it when it is absent."² And he said also: "Reflect about thy being an infinitesimal thing, and that in thee the Macrocosmos is condensed". In other words the Prophet says that 'Alī is comprised in himself as also is Macrocosmos: "Thou art the Guiding Book. The One who makes manifest (every thing), becomes Himself manifested in its letters". [83] For the same reason the saints of God said: "I am the Coran and the first chapter of it, and the spirit of the spirit, amongst the spirits that are the nearest unto Him ”¹ (?)

² This, and the following Arabic quotations are taken from the apocryphal Diwān of 'Alī ibn Abī Tālib, cf., pp. 45-46 of the Bombay lithogr. ed. 1340. There are several variants: the second bayt begins with wa lahsabū instead of a taẓ'amu; the third bayt ends with al-muḍmar instead of al-maẓhar.

And the Prophet said : “ O ‘Alī, thou wert hidden with all the prophets, and thou hast become manifest with me ”. And he added : “ Thou art the book of God. Thou art the mystery of God, because no one knows thy mysterious substance except God. The mystery of God is revealed in His words which all deal with the exalted position, mine and thine ”.

The Prophet also said : “ All mysteries of God which are in the heavenly books, i.e. Tawrât, Injil, and Zabûr, are in the Coran ; and all that are in the Coran are contained in the first chapter of it ; and all that are in the Fâtiha are contained in the formula of the Basmala, “ in the name of God ” ; and all that is found in this formula is contained in its first letter b (ب), and, ultimately, in the dot under that letter ”. Thus it is obvious that ‘Alī is the meaning of that dot, the mystery of God, the mystery of all heavenly books ; and that he was with all prophets and in all revealed books. Thus all the mysteries of the hidden heavenly books are in him. And, as all these heavenly books found their completion in the Prophet, it is thus obvious that they became complete in ‘Alī. And whoever prefers to abide by the letter (tanzîl) of these revealed books, becomes like a Gabr, or a Christian, or a Jew,² or an Armenian, or Hindu, or an unbeliever, or an heretic ; he thus becomes one of the male or female unbelievers, those who “ go on the wrong path ”. And whoever attains the knowledge of ta’wîl, and acquires the knowledge (of the Imam), attains salvation and (eternal) relief.

From the Prophet, there was his “ nearest Relative ”,³

‘Alī, who was his hidden companion,—

He also was with all prophets secretly ;—

The Word of God was thus manifested. [84]

The basis of all systems (of religion) was the Substance of ‘Alī,

The (Divine) wisdom found its perfection in him.

God revealed in the story of Moses that when the latter came near the fire, the fire cried : “ Verily I am God ”. It is said in the Coran (XX, 11-12) : “ And when he came to it, he was called to : O Moses, verily, I am thy Lord, so take off thy sandals". And when God sent fire, and the Mount Sinai was burnt, He said : " Verily, I am God, the Lord of the worlds ".

¹ This quotation apparently is not from the same Dīwān, and seems to be not poetry, though its mutilated condition does not permit to be positive about this.

² Here the term “ Jew ” is given twice, in an ordinary Persian form as Yahūd, and in Central Asian form—Jahūt.

³ In both copies of the text, and in the HB Abū Ishāq, the quotation begins in the same way, though it seems to be wrong, as the sentence appears to be ungrammatical.

Thus the Real Truth is manifested in him, whose nature is the Light of God, in the first instance because, as mentioned in the verses of the Coran, it is revealed in the utterances of the Prophet : " Verily, I am with God, and I and 'Alî are two Lights before God, who existed fourteen thousand years before Adam was created ; and when he was created, this Light was transferred to his progeny, and it never ceased to pass from father to son, until it became divided into two branches, one of these being in the family of 'Abdu'l-lâh (the father of the Prophet), and the other, which was the branch of 'Alî, in the family of Abû Tâlib ; thus 'Alî is from me, and I am from him ".

And in another hadîth the Prophet says : " I and 'Alî both are from one and the same Light ". And it is stated in the Coran (XXIV, 35) : " God is the light of the heavens and the earth ; His light is as a niche in which is a lamp ". Thus as God is the light of the heavens and [85] of the earth, and as all lights are rays from the light of Muḥammad, thus 'Alî is the source of that light, because the Prophet is the real True Light (Nûri Ḥaqq), whose source is 'Alî :

'Alî it was who made the morning of Prophethood to dawn, Muḥammad is the seal-ring, and 'Alî is the design on its jewel.

Just as the Prophet said : " I am the light from which Moses derived his light of guidance ", i.e. 'Alî is that light which was borrowed by Moses for guidance. That fire which cried " I am thy Lord " was that Light.

The Prophet says : " The Lord of all things is the Word " be ", and 'Alî is exactly that word ". The Prophet also said : " I and 'Alî are from one and the same light ". The office of the Prophet depends upon mankind, and is limited by the reception of the revelation through Jabra'il ; he would not be commissioned for his mission until such inspiration is conveyed to him ; it is obvious, therefore, that his mission depends on the services of Jabra'il, as is made clear in the Coran (LIII, 3-4) : " . . . nor speaks he out of lust,—it is but an inspiration inspired ". And Jabra'il is an angel bringing to the Prophet the inspiration from God, as stated in the Coran (V, 71) : " O thou, Apostle, preach what has been revealed to thee from thy Lord ". This implies :—" and thou art not commissioned to do something beyond this ". This mission of the Prophet is defined in the Coran (XIII, 40) : " Thy duty is only to deliver thy message, and Ours to reckon up ".

The position of 'Alî is that of Walâyat ; he has no intermediaries, but sees God without any intermediate " veils ".

And again the Prophet said: "I am carrying on war with revelation (tanzîl), and 'Alî—with ta'wîl"; but ta'wîl is the state of God Himself, as is said in the Coran (III. 5): "None know the interpretation (ta'wîl) of it except God, and the righteous". This means that the Prophet and 'Alî belong to one and the same reality (haqîqat), and there is no differentiation (ghay-rîyyat) in their substance,—it exists only in appearance and in persons. And all that they say about belief in the One God (tawhîd), or about the difficulties [86] which they solve,—all this wisdom is that of the degree of Walâyat, because the Prophet has the degree of prophethood and of Walâyat as well. The Imam has the degree of Walâyat in mystery, and the prophethood is open and manifest, but the degree of the "Successor", or "Friend of God" is higher and superior to that of prophethood. Therefore the Walâyat of 'Alî is superior to the Nubuwwat of prophets, because the Walâyat of the Commander of the Faithful is the same as the Walâyat of the Prophet about which the latter said: "I have moments of (direct) intercourse with God in which only the angels of the highest rank and prophets (?) can participate". This means that at some moments the Prophet has (direct) communication with God, in which no one can participate, except the highest rank of angels, like Jabra'îl, and the Apostles, like himself, who has the rank of prophethood, which belongs to the degree of Walâyat, also belonging to the Prophet.

Thus it is probably that difficult subject which the Prophet explains, i.e. absorption in God (fanâ' fî'l-lâh), and eternal life in God (baqâ' bi'l-lâh).¹ And the Prophet said also: "I am the dot under the letter φ , and I am the hidden book". And he said also: "Wisdom is like a single dot, but the ignorant made it a multitude". This dot means the dot under the letter φ in the initial word of the formula of Basmala, "in the name of God". And his substance, which is like a dot, forms every thing, as all the letters are developed from it. In saying that knowledge is but a single dot, he refers to his own substance because his substance is the essence of all knowledge. All the prophets through whom sacred books were revealed and all such heavenly books themselves, cannot be disconnected from these letters; and the letters cannot be dissociated from the dot. Thus the dot participates and forms the basis of all. This is why the Prophet said: "O 'Alî, thou wert with all the prophets in mystery, and thou hast descended with me in open". This means: "O 'Alî, thou art the mystery of God; and the mystery of God made itself manifested in the person of Muḥammad".

¹ Both these terms, and the subject itself, are entirely Sufic,—Ismailism proper does not know these.

Another poet says :

If thou couldst learn, after a careful search,
The whole of the story, explaining the nature of 'Alī,
It would become clear to thee, by God,
That 'Alī is the one who speaks through all tongues.¹

The Prophet said : " From the light emanating from the face of 'Alī God created 70,000 angels, who pray for mercy for him, and for his friends, till the Day of Judgment ". [88] And the Prophet also said :

" When I was taken to the heavens on the night of the Ascension (Mi'rāj), and as I was passing through a corner of it, I saw an angel who sat on a chair (minbar) of light, and other angels were standing around him. I asked Jabra'il, who this angel was ?—Jabra'il replied : " Come near, and greet him ". When I went near him, and greeted him, I saw that he was my cousin, 'Alī ibn Abī Tālib. I asked Jabra'il : " When did he come before me to the fourth heaven ? " Jabra'il replied : " O Prophet of God, 'Alī is the Manifestation of the miracles ; he is the central support of the earth and of the heavens ; the earth and the heavens cannot exist without him. But the angels, out of longing for 'Alī, complained to God, and God has created an angel from the Light of 'Alī, and now all of them in the night on Friday, and on Friday itself visit him 70,000 times, offering their praises and glorifications to God ".

In the Manāqib of Imam Muḥammad Bāqir² it is narrated that the Prophet said : " During my Ascension God the Allhigh-est spoke to me by the tongue of 'Alī ibn Abī Tālib. I asked : " O my Lord, dost Thou speak to me, or 'Alī does this ? " The reply of God was : " O Muḥammad, I am not similar to anything in the world ; so it is no good to think of Me in the same way as of human beings, or to compare Me with anything, and it is no good to see Me as something definable. I have created thee from My own light, and 'Alī was created from thy light. Then, looking at every corner of thy heart, I found 'Alī everywhere, and found that I loved no one more than 'Alī ibn Abī Tālib. This is why I spoke to thee by the tongue of 'Alī, so that thy heart shall be quiet, and not frightened by awe " ³.

The Prophet said : " Love for 'Alī destroys sins, just as fire consumes fuel ".

² No work with such title is known amongst early Shi'ite books. Most probably the author again gives a casual designation instead of its original title.

³ These stories sound extremely non-Ismailitic, and most probably are derived from some popular Ithna-'ashari works on the Mi'rāj. They are not given in the HB Abū Ishāq, but from here both versions again begin to agree,—more or less.

The Prophet said : " If mankind could be united in the love for 'Alī ibn Abī Tālib, God would not have created the fire of Hell ".

The Prophet also said : " God made a covenant with me that He will not accept the faith of any of His slaves except for the love to the Prophet, to 'Alī, and his descendants ". [89]

And he said : " Whoever is attached to 'Alī and to my descendants (awlad), he is attached to me ; and whoever loves me, loves God ".

And he said : " Whoever hates 'Alī and my descendants, he hates me, and he who hates me, hates God the Allhighest ".

True it is what the Prophet says ! May Our Lord bless his slaves and make them pious, lending them His miraculous help, by His mercy and His generosity !

CHAPTER VI

On the origin of the physical and spiritual worlds, on the origin and the end of things, and on the explanation of the degrees of dignitaries, from the mustajīb to the Imām.

In the preceding bābs we have proved that only God has absolute existence : everything that is, exists through Him ; everything that separates itself from the existence of God, falls into absolute non-existence. Therefore the physical world, which is governed (by the laws), from the highest celestial sphere to the centre of the earth, exists only through the existence of God, i.e. it stands only by some force, which is one of the forms of the Might of God, and which makes it existent. The skies are like the father, the lights are like speech (nutq), and their sons are the inorganic matter, plants and animals.¹ This power of God is spread in the heavens, which are like the father, and in the elements which are like the mother, and in the phenomena of physical nature (mawālīd), which are like their children. All these are synthetized in man ; and because all such forms of the power of God thus become re-united in the person of man, his person, or form, has to be that of God Himself. [90] The world is nothing but a magnified system of the properties of man ; and man is a synthesis of the properties (or elements) of the world. Thus, in reality, man is the Macrocosmos ; the elements of which he is composed all return to their proper place (markaz). Therefore we can call these scattered elements, of which man is composed, the world of things (‘ālamī mawjūdāt).

The world of spirits, or of the spiritual, means the world of realities (ḥaqā’iq), i.e. the world of ideas revealed in religion (dīn). It is because the existence of every thing rests upon its real prototype (ḥaqīqat) which underlies the genus of things of every kind. The reality underlying all things (together) is revealed in the conceptions of religion (dīn). The spiritual world is the world of life (jān), while the corporeal world is the world of body and of (inorganic) matter ; both together are complete, but separately are nothing.

In the “ Blessed chapters ” (Fuṣūḥi mubārak)² it is written that the body and the soul together form a body, and the soul and body together form a soul (or life, jān). The abstract plus the sensual form together an abstraction, and the sensual plus abstract form together a sensual perception¹; because if you look at a living soul from the point of relativity, it will appear as a body; and if you look at a body from the point of view of absolute reality, it will be nothing but a living soul. And if an abstract notion is looked at from the point of relativity, it is nothing but a sensual perception, just as the sensual perception, looked upon from the point of view of the reality, is an abstract notion. If you look at the reality itself from the point of view of relativity, it will be relative, and if the relativity is seen from the point of view of reality, it will be the reality. And if one sees the Unity of God from the point of view of relativity, it will appear as plurality, but if the plurality of the creation is seen from the point of view of the reality, it appears as the Unity of God.

² This is yet another literal quotation from the same source as that of the HB Bābā Sayyid-nā, p. 27 (orig. MS).

In the same "Blessed chapters"² it is written that whatever is entirely real, it has nothing to do with relativity. And everything that is only relative has no share in reality. And what is relative from reality, has nothing to do with either; and what is really real, and relatively relative, belongs to both these categories. Thus whoever sees the real and the relative in their proper positions, will be free from false and fictitious ideas.

It is also said in the "Blessed chapters"³ that on the Last Day, when God will manifest Himself as a visible person, the sharī'at [91] will appear futile and fictitious.

We have already stated that on the Last Day everything will become alive, as is said in the Coran (XXIX, 64): "Verily, the abode of the next world, that is life,—if they did but know!" This means that no one is alive except him who attained the knowledge about reality (haqīqat), as is also said in the Coran (XVI, 21): "Dead, not living"; and the future life is (entirely) the realm of religious realities, rūhāniyyāt. Thus the world is (like) a man. The Prophet says⁴ that in the future life stones and heaps of dry earth will speak; and since none except man can speak, it thus appears that in the future life everything will return to its origin, and that the original form of man is that in which he was created. This world of sense is, as stated in the Coran (XLVIII, 10): "The hand of God is above their hands; and whoso perjures himself does but perjure himself

² This passage does not belong to the HB Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, though to some extent resembles it.

³ Again a literal quotation from HB Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ, p. 27 (orig. MS).

⁴ Another quotation from the same work, p. 28 (orig. MS).

against himself; but he who fulfils what he has covenanted with God shall bring him mighty hire". This means that there is no hand above His hand, because his mystery is the mystery of God, his ears are the ears of God, his eyes are the eyes of God, his tongue, his mouth, his speech, his commands, his prohibitions,—all are those of God; and the orders and prohibitions, the power of cancelling and altering are all in his hands. It is he who gives orders, by the saying (Cor. V, 60): "Verily, your protector is God and His Apostle", and "Verily, I am the deputy of God on earth".

"The hand of God is above their hands",—is revealed concerning him,

Because there never will be anybody's hand above his hand.¹

The sharî'at, and the laws of this world, and the "return" (ma'âd) of all the faithful and pious, all refer to the sacred substance of Our Lord,—Exalted and Extolled be He,—as is stated in the Coran (XXI, 93): "Everything returns to Us"; and (XCVI, 8): "Verily, the things return to thy Lord"; and (II, 151): "Verily, we are God's and, verily, to Him do we return".

The world of man who acquires the knowledge of the Imam is the world of eternal life, and unending existence. But the end (ma'âd) of the unbelievers and renegades is nothing but eternal non-existence and final extinction, [92] which is spiritual Hell. Some of them may return (into life?) in the form of animals; but finally they will kill each other. As we have already mentioned, they will never attain the knowledge of the Truth,—except gradually. As we have shown, the people who possess the Truth are those who belong to the religion (dîn) of the da'wat of Our Lord. Thus none who does not associate with them can find the way to God. So long as he does not do this, he is fallen far away from God, who is eternal Life and perpetual Existence. And if he falls far from these, he goes to non-existence.

Thus it is clear that the people with whose help one may attain salvation (ma'âd), are the people of the religion (dîn) and of the da'wat. The salvation (ma'âd) of the enemies of religion (ahli tadâdd), is to seek for the Truth, to step on the highway of the Truth, and to become members of the "people of gradual progress", ahli tarattub, i.e. the Ismaili community. And if they try then their best, they come back to the people of Unity, ahli wahdat. And those mu'mins who are in possession of good qualities and good morals, and are not defaulters in the discharge of their service to God, become angels. But those who turn their faces away from God, or those who mislead others, are real dîws and ghûls. And those who in their goodness have not attained the degree of angels, and in their badness have not attained the degree of the dîw, shall become paris.¹

To sum up, the Throne of God, 'Arsh, the Kursî, the Board (Lawh), the Pen (Qalam), Paradise, and Hell,—all these refer to (the soul of) man. Thus, Paradise is the state of the man who calls people to God and to things Divine,—such a person is Good (sawâb). This is why the Prophet says that Salmân is the life (or soul, jân) of Paradise. And Hell is the state of the man who drives the people from God and from things Divine; such a man is a punishment to himself and to all the people of Hell.

Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ says² that if a black stone is to be punished, it is named after a bad man. Therefore it transpires that in the future life the black or white stone is (like) a human being³; and no one can attain freedom from fictitious beliefs until everything is visualized (mu'ayyan), and personified (mushakhkhaş) for him.

With the help of Our Lord, we will tell this in the chapter on conscious mind (nafsi nâtiqa), explaining in detail what is the beginning and the end of things (mabda' wa ma'âd).

A faithful one, who possesses the virtues and devotion to God, and is helped by support ('inâyat) and the mercy of the Lord of his time, whom he knows, develops a great longing for the knowledge of God, and seeks the way unto Him. Then, after wandering amongst the 72 sects, [93] he sees all their futility, and finds for certain that he, like others, worshipped not God but his own fictitious ideas and fantasies. The fire of remorse begins to devour him, burning his (personal or individual) existence or non-existence, or his individuality,—all become burnt. With the help of Our Lord, who shows him the right way, he comes across one of the functionaries (hudûd) of the true religion (dîn), i.e. a dâ'î, or a competent teacher. After the true teacher tries him in many ways, and finds him suitable as a servant to Our Lord, he reveals to him the doctrine of the da'wat, as much as he is capable to understand, and he accepts it with all his heart and soul (jân). Then he becomes subjected to various regulations and restrictions, from which he does not shrink. This new servant who is in possession of pure faith (sâhib yaqîn), receives the name of mustajîb (i.e. one who has the right to ask questions concerning the secret doctrine of the religion), and the teacher instructs him in the proofs and principles of the True Faith. Concerning this there is said in the Coran (II, 24): "... that God sets forth a parable of a moth, or of what is bigger than it". The moth (or gnat) rises from the water of knowledge of the Reality ; it is the weakest of all creatures that fly. The flying towards heaven is an allusion to its being inimical to the elephant, as it can fly amongst the different birds and the stars of heaven, by which are meant the dignitaries of the right faith ; the elephant is a heavy animal, which always has to walk on the earth. He cannot even look at the sky ; he is like the learned man amongst the followers of the ẓâhir of the shar'at. But a mosquito gets through his skin (which is the ẓâhir). This is an allegory of the mustajîb's overpowering the people of the ẓâhir, and of making that doctrine lose its prestige in the eyes of its followers.

When the mustajîb is perfected in his learning, and his learning becomes such as to make him able to teach others, and to lead them out of their errors, he receives the title of ma'dhûni aşghar, or the "junior licencee", from the senior ma'dhûn, or from the teacher. He thus becomes licenced to deal with the people of those religions, and the teacher gives him a licence to preach amongst them. When he succeeds in this, and claims a higher degree, the hujjat gives him the title of the ma'dhûni akbar, or senior ma'dhûn ; this degree implies absolute freedom to preach amongst any people that he thinks necessary. When he tries to get a still higher degree, he becomes a teacher, mu'allim, by being appointed by the great hujjat in one of the provinces (jazâ'ir). He thus becomes one of the twelve lâhiqs, who are in charge of different provinces ; every mu'min, or mustajîb who resides in that district or province is under his command.¹ [94]

In addition to these degrees there is the degree of the dâ'î. This degree gives no special province into his charge, but he has the absolute licence to carry on the propaganda. After this there is the degree of the highest hujjat, and after comes that of the Imam. There is no intermediary between the Imam and the Great Hujjat. The knowledge of the hujjat is Divine (ta'yîdî), and he is infallible, or error-proof (ma'sûm az khatâ) : he corresponds with the First 'Aql. One cannot know the Lord except through him, as one cannot know God except through God. Only one man can really know God, and this is the great hujjat. All other people know Our Lord only through him, as the manifestation and the brilliance of the Reason ('aql) appears in him only. He is the "Gate of Knowledge", and the Gate of the glory and mercy of Our Lord. He is the means of knowing the Laws of the Reality (ḥaqā'iq), and of solving doubts; he is the governor and the commander of all the true faithful, and whoever disobeys him is placed in Hell, and suffers eternal punishment. The manifestation of the Divine attributes and His exalted properties attains its perfection in the ḥujjat. All ḥujjats are the same in substance. The Imam, who at the period of his (full) manifestation is the Qā'im of the great Resurrection, is very near to him; he is greater than the ḥujjat, through his revealing the mysteries of the Reality (ḥaqā'iq).

Whoever attains the mercy of Our Lord, is saved from punishment; and whoever is subjected to it, will always remain in such a state. May Our Lord give us friends as help, and may He keep open for His slaves the door of His mercy! These degrees which we calculated here are seven; their mystery will be explained in the seventh bāb, or chapter, if Our Lord helps us.

CHAPTER VII

Explaining some of the ta'wils, or allegories of different expressions; the reasons of this treatise being divided into seven chapters; and a summary of the interdependence between the Universe and the human individuality. All these I will explain, with the help of Mawlâ-nâ, Exalted and Extolled be He !

(A. The ta'wil of the prescriptions of the shari'at.)

Ritual Purification (tahârat). Its meaning is : making oneself clean from the acts which are committed by those who stick only to the outward side, ẓâhir of the teaching. Ablution means the returning to the knowledge of the Imam, because water in the system (hadd) of ta'wil symbolizes the knowledge of the real truth (ḥaqîqat). When a slave of God purifies himself from the acts of the ẓâhirîs, he attains the knowledge of the religion, which is the recognition of the Imam. And whenever he falls into ẓâhir, he has to return to the knowledge of ḥaqîqat, so that he may be again purified. [95] Washing the head, the hands, the nostrils, and the mouth means (obtaining) the knowledge of the dâ'î, of the lâḥiq,¹ and the teacher (mu'allim). Washing the face and both hands to elbow means the knowledge of both the Fundaments (Asâsain).² The touching (mash) of the head and the feet means the knowledge of both fundamental principles (aṣl), and the rejection to converse with the wicked or with the adversaries of the true religion, and abstaining from communicating the secret doctrines to outsiders (ahli ẓâhir).

The substitutional purification, tayammum, means that if there is no possibility of coming into touch with the hujjat, one has to seek purification with the help of the dâ'î, or the teacher (mu'allim), or the fully initiated (ma'dhûn).

Ritual uncleanness (janâbat) is of two kinds,—pollution in sexual intercourse, and in sleep. The meaning of sexual intercourse is instruction (ta'lim). This means that if a mistake or error happens in it, the teacher must purify himself with the knowledge which comes directly from God ('ilmi ta'yîdî), which is the "flowing water". But if he cannot obtain this original (ta'yîdî) knowledge, he should purify himself with the knowledge derived from instruction (ta'limî),—and this is similar to tayam-

² Usually this term implies the Prophet and 'Alî, cf. pp. 57 and 102 (of the text).

mum. Pollution in sleep (ihtilâm) is a sign of adolescence. This means that when a faithful comes to the age of maturity, being instructed with the help of the original (ta'yîdî) knowledge and the disciplines of the religion, he must free himself from the teaching of the ordinary doctrine ('ulûmî zâhir).

Prayer (namâz). Its meaning is "being in contact" (pay-wastagî), because the word ṣalât, prayer, comes from the word waṣlat, i.e. contact, junction.¹ This is the arriving at, or reaching the knowledge of the Imam and of the true religion (dîni haqq), after the purification (tahârat), which means becoming free from association with the adversaries. The call to prayer (bângî namâz) is preaching (da'wat), i.e. calling the people who seek for truth (aḥli haqq) to the recognition and knowledge of the Imam. It is a very important matter,—for this reason one has to say: "Come to the best of actions",²—it really is the best one can do. The Prophet said: "The mu'adhdhins, or the persons who call the people to prayer, will be those who have the longest necks on the day of Resurrection". This means that the Prophet called the dâ'î long-necked, which in ta'wîl means one who knows the people well. Whoever knows the mysteries of the sharî'at, has arrived at ḥaqîqat. And whoever has attained the knowledge of the Imam has arrived at the state of continuous prayer, as it is said (Cor. LXX, 23): "Those who persist in their prayer". Such people are exempt from the prescriptions of outward law (sharî'at). It is said in the Coran about the law (sharâ'i') (LVII, 13): "Within it shall be mercy, and outside and before it is torment". The grave is the human body, and the torments of the grave are the prescriptions of the sharî'at. The trustees of Hell, the Nakîr and Munkar, are tyrants oppressing the outside world.

Our Lord, the King of the Day of Resurrection (Qâ'imû'l-Qiyâmat) is the Lord of the time,—prostration and glorification be due at his mention!—His rules and laws of the Resurrection [96] are the inner meaning of the prescriptions of the sharî'at. The angels conveying the reward are functionaries of his religion (ḥudûdî dîn). The inhabitants of Paradise are those who became emancipated from the letter of law (zâhir), and who attained the understanding of its inner meaning (bâṭin). In this world their reward is their being relieved from undergoing the obligatory rules imposed by the sharî'at. The Prophet said: "Their punishment and chains on them become non-existent". The meaning of the Day of Resurrection is what is said (Cor. LXXXVI, 9): "The day when the secrets shall be tried".

² As is well known, this sentence forms a part of the Shi'ite formula of the adhân, or prayer call. It is never used by the Sunnites.

The meaning of the chief mosque is the hujjat, as all come around him ; other mosques are the teachers. The meaning of the qibla is the turning of everybody towards the hujjat, which is necessary ; but the hujjat turns his face towards the Imam only.

The meaning of the fast (rûza) is to observe the taqiyya, i.e. precautionary dissimulation, and to keep secret from the enemies the tenets of the religion which is to be preached (dîni da'wat). The day of the festival (of breaking fast) is the day of the Great Resurrection (Qiyâmati qiyâmât), when, by the omnipotence of the command of the Qâ'im, all people will be overpowered by argument and proof.

The meaning of the zakât, or religious tax, is teaching the religion, and making it reach the faithful in accordance with their capacity to understand it. All over the world the zakât is collected by the deputy governor (wâlî), who divides it according to the oath (?), bay'at, of different people.¹ Is it not that all the knowledge of the religion is found with the Imam, and he conveys it to everybody in proportion to his degree of advancement ? The distributor is the hujjat, who conveys as much of it as one can stand.

The meaning of hajj, or pilgrimage to Ka'ba, is gradually abandoning beliefs which one originally had, and advancing by stages, from mustajîb to hujjat. The uttering of the formula of labbay-ka means accepting the preaching of the dâ'i. And putting on the special pilgrim's dress, ihrâm, means getting away from the practice and the society of people who stick only to the letter of the religion, zâhir. Hunting, or taking possession, or sexual intercourse, etc., all are prohibited until the hajj is finished. This means that when one abandons the people of zâhir, he must not preach to anybody until he reaches the Ka'ba and the qibla of the True religion, haqîqat, and receives the permission to carry on the preaching (da'wat). Running, or circumambulating (in the rites of the pilgrimage) means hastening towards the Imam. Observing the hajj ceremonies of jam' and kasr signifies the hujjat and the Imam. Throwing stones means driving away devil-like people. Taking the water of Zamzam is seeking after the knowledge of the religion. And taking away the ihrâm means getting away from the punishment of the prescriptions of shari'at.

The meaning of the (restrictions connected with having) menstruations is this : every high priest (lâhîq) or teacher (mu'allim) who feels some doubt in religion, even if he has the permission [97] to teach others, must abstain from performing the namâz, i.e. continuing preaching (da'wat), until he overcomes that doubt. Pregnant women have no menstruations,—this symbolizes those who have accepted the real knowledge (ḥaqīqat), and who thus became free from doubt and suspicion. As old women have no menstruations, thus those who are for a long time in the state of acceptance of the religion become immune from doubt and suspicion. The meaning of istihāda (or purification after menstruation) is referring in everything to the teacher (mu'allim), and inquiring of him so long as one feels a doubt in religion.

The meaning of sleep is being negligent in religious matters, after the knowledge of religion had been communicated to one; and a complete neglect is like death. Sleep resembles death, though in reality it is not the same. Thus those who enter the religion and the da'wat, which mean life, may fall into the sleep of negligence. To awake from the sleep is to reflect about this negligence, and purifications after sleep mean returning to the knowledge of religion.

The meaning of dress, and generally covering one's nudity, is the keeping hidden, from those who do not deserve to be trusted, the things and the covenants that are secret.

Prostration when imploring forgiveness for the sin committed means this: if a believer who is fully initiated (ma'dhūn), or a dā'i, commits a mistake, he must return to the higher (bāṭin) knowledge which is with the ḥujjat, because the prostration (sajda) symbolizes the Nāṭiq or the ḥujjat.

The meaning of travelling (safar) is progress along the degrees of ta'lim, i.e. learning the doctrine.

The meaning of marriage (nikāḥ) is being connected with the teacher (mu'allim), and the conception of the seed of his orders, i.e. accepting the word of his preaching (da'wat).

The meaning of divorce is keeping aloof from unworthy people, i.e. those who are not worthy of being trusted with the word of the religion.

The meaning of death is failing to acquire true knowledge (ma'rifat), and true religion (ḥaqīqat). The meaning of the prayer over the dead is this: when the pupil falls into ignorance, i.e. when he dies, himself, or when his true spirit (rūḥi ḥaqīqat) is killed by false teaching, his religious teacher helps him with the preaching of the true knowledge. If he accepts it, he becomes resuscitated, as if by the breathing of Jesus. If not,—he will be buried in the dust of the ignorance of superficial knowledge ('ilmī zāhir), and he will decompose in it.

(B. The ta'wīl of some selected verses of the Coran.)

In this treatise (risāla), thus much we have given of the ta'wīls, or allegorical interpretations, of different prescriptions of sharī'at, and of the outward meaning of the Coran, which also.

are explained here. I will mention here yet another number of ta'wils of the verses of the Coran.

God the Allhighest said (Cor. IV, 158): "For the injustice of those who are Jews have we forbidden them good things", from the food.¹ This means that those who were in touch with the Prophet, committed a crime, i.e. they referred his command about the appointment of his Waṣī, as a caliph, to some one else,—and the meaning of crime (ẓulm) is committing what is not lawful. In the preceding chapters we have found [98] that the office of the caliph belongs only to the Waṣī of the Prophet. Therefore "pure food" became prohibited to them, i.e. the interpretation (ta'wil) of the Coran, which is pure. This was the (exclusive) privilege of 'Alī, because the whole of the Coran is bequeathed to him, while obvious doubts and taking possession by force belongs to people of ẓāhir, or superficial understanding of religion.

The knowledge of the mysteries of the prescriptions of sharī'at, and cancellation of the burdens imposed by these, are not for those who stick to the outward side of religion (ẓāhir); this is indicated in the verse of the Coran (V, 6): "Lawful for you today are good things". Day is the time when the sun is visible, and this symbolizes the appearance of the sun of Imamat, —to every one who reaches the sunshine of Imamat, and can see by it, good things are accessible, as is stated also in the verse (VII, 30): "Say: who has prohibited the ornaments of God which He brought forth for His servants, and the good things of His providing?" This means: Say, O Muḥammad, that the path of seeking the (inner) meaning (of religion) is prohibited to those who practice (outward) obedience, worship, and recite prayers, and to them the gorgeous dress and the ornaments are unlawful and improper, because God has prepared these pure ornaments (only) for His (thoroughly devoted) slaves. It is also said in the Coran (XLI, 44): "Say: this is for those who believe,—a guidance and healing", i.e. (these ornaments) are the verses of the Coran, which belong to the faithful; they indicate them the right path and the healing. Error and humiliation belong to those who stick to the outer side of the religion (ẓāhir), persisting in their belief that the Coran cannot be interpreted allegorically. The "pure bread" is the world of realities ('ālamī ḥaqīqat), which is free from the contamination of doubt and error, and which is accessible to those who recognize the Imam of their time, so much as they have capacity for this, knowing their superior dignitaries (ḥudūdī 'ulwā).

It is said in the Coran (XXXIII, 7): "And when We took of the prophets their oath,—from thee, from Noah, and ¹ The last two words are apparently taken from the Cor. VII, 30.

Abraham, and Jesus", to establish the religion.¹ This means : O Muḥammad, We took the oath of allegiance to Imamāt from all the prophets, who had to observe the covenant of Ghadīr Khumm, i.e. that they should lead the people to the Qā'im of the Qiyāmat, observing the rights of their Waṣīs, who are the guardians of the ta'wīl of the First and Last Day. It is said in the Coran (CX, 1) : "When comes God's help and victory, and thou shalt see men enter into God's religion by troops,—then celebrate the praises of thy Lord, and ask forgiveness of Him. Verily, He is relentant". This means : when the Qā'im of the Qiyāmat manifests himself, the people will come in crowds to join the religion of Truth. Pray then for forgiveness, [99] and return to God from the ways of acting such as belong to the ẓāhir. One has to turn from what is a mere symbol in the outward form of religion, and go to what is implied in it. It is said in the Coran (II, 6) : "God has set a seal upon their hearts and on their hearing ; and on their eyes is a dimness". This means : God has sealed the hearts, eyes, and ears of the people who stick only to the outward form of religion (ẓāhir), so that they cannot find their way to the Truth (ḥaqīqat). It is said in the Coran (IV, 54) : "They believe in Jibt and Tāghūt",² i.e. they believe in the leaders who lead them astray and make them err, as is said in another verse of the Coran (II, 17 or 166) : "Deaf, dumb, blind, and they shall not see" (or turn, from errors). There are many other verses which allude to those who are blind and deaf when concerned with the true Imams, but believe in the false leaders,—their hearts and eyes are sealed.

It is said about the true Imams (II, 258) : "The patron of those who believe, He brings them forth from darkness to light", i.e. they, the Imams, make the whole world full of light. This is also said about the true Imams (XXIV, 35) : "God is the light of the heavens and the earth ; His light is like a niche, in which is a lantern, and in the lantern is a lamp". This means that the Light of the Truth of the Most High is the Imam of the time ; it shines in the heavens and the earth, filling them with light. It shines from the niche of the Prophet, by whose light mankind is guided. The lamp is the heart of 'Alī, who is the Waṣī of the Prophet,—he lights the glittering stars of the line of his successors (dhurriyyat), which shine from the blessed olive tree, i.e. Abraham, the Friend of God, and 'Alī, the descendant of 'Imrān. The Prophet is a descendant of Abraham, and 'Alī is a descendant of 'Imrān, as is said in the verse of the Coran (III, 30) : "Verily, God has chosen Adam, and Noah, and Abraham's people, and 'Imrān's people above the worlds".

² Names of two demons or idols, mentioned in the Coran.

Tâbâ from the Throne of God,—welcome¹
 Every heart that is obedient to the Imam of the time.

It has already been explained in the Third Chapter that the following verse refers to the false leader. [100] (Imâmânî bâtil) (II, 259): "But those who disbelieve, their patrons are (like) Tâghûṭ,—they lead them forth from light to darkness". The name Tâghûṭ comes from ṭughyân,—disobedience, i.e. insubordination to the command of God, i.e. to the true Imams.² It is said (VI, 122): "Is he who was dead and We have quickened him", i.e. by the knowledge of religion we resuscitated him who through his ignorance was dead. It is said (XV, 99): "And serve thy Lord until certainty shall come to thee", i.e. one has to bear the burden of the restrictions of shari'at only until one has attained the state of complete conviction in his belief.

It is also said (Cor. XXIV, 31): "And let them not display their ornaments . . . save to their husbands and fathers, or the fathers of their husbands", i.e. women, by whom are meant the new initiates, should not disclose the secret doctrine. Teachers are compared with men, and new initiates with women,—they should not reveal to the enemies what they know about the doctrine and its preaching; they can speak about this only to their husbands, i.e. their teachers.

It is also said (V, 96): "Kill not game while ye are on pilgrimage",—i.e. one should not carry on preaching without special permission and instruction. But one has the right to kill small snakes, scorpions, and large snakes which are dangerous; this means that one can fight the avowed enemies of the religion, the Gog and Magog who threaten the faithful,³ and whom Abraham has annihilated,—they were the people who used to stick (only) to the outward form of religion. And the story about how he smote their chief on his shoulder with an axe, means that he defeated them by their own arguments.

It is said (XVI, 92): "Verily, God bids you do justice and good". The meaning of justice is the rank of the Prophet, as justice means both shari'at and the Prophet. And the meaning of "doing good" is connected with the rank of the Waṣī, i.e. Mawlâ-nâ 'Alī, because it implies his doing some people a special favour ('aṭâ). This is the rank of the Waṣī, who always was, and always will be, because (LVII, 3): "He is the first and the last, and the manifest and the hidden; and he all things doth know", choosing some people to whom he reveals his ta'wîl. It is said in a ḥadīth: "Doing good means that you worship God as when you see Him present before you". And Mawlâ-nâ says: "I would not worship the Lord, could I not see Him, and if He did not prohibit fornication".¹

¹ In both copies this bayt appears in an incomplete form, in the first half some words being omitted. It is omitted in the HB Abū Ishāq.

² The etymology is again popular.

³ The next few words are illegible in both copies.

 [101] May Our Lord help His slaves to obey the religion!

(C. The reason why this treatise is divided into seven chapters.)

We have given here some interpretations (ta'wîl) of the Coran, so that they would not be missing in this work. Now we have to explain why this book is divided into seven chapters.

Looking into the system of the true religion, its Foundation (Asâs) and its Preacher (Nâtiq), we find that the degrees of its dignitaries are seven, from Imâm, Bâb, Asâs,² to mustajîb. On examining the Universe and human nature, we see that everything therein consists of units of seven. It is said in the Coran (XLI, 53): "We will show them Our signs in the regions and in themselves", i.e. we will show them the degrees of the dignitaries (hudûd) of the religion in the Universe and in their own nature. We will give here some of them.

First of all, the number of the first seven ranks (hadd) is a perfect number. The meaning of perfection is its being composed of numbers which are perfect in their being simple numbers,—thus it is a sum of simple (perfect) ones. This number is composed of three degrees: first the Nâtiq, secondly the Asâs, and thirdly the Bâb. They are perfect in their being only one in each kind; being taken in pairs they make four; four plus three is seven. We find that everything in the Universe and in human nature is composed on the same lines; there is, however, another type, composed of eight. The latter is also derived from seven, because, if calculated from one, which corresponds with the degree of walâyat, it will make only seven. And still another type is composed of twelve, and this consists of four and three which make seven. Thus all numbers are reduced to seven.

There are seven heavens, which have seven planets;³ there are seven earths, seven seas, seven climes, seven strong winds, seven days of the week,—these make seven times seven.

Man has seven parts of the body: two hands, two feet and legs, a face, nose, heart, liver, stomach lungs, spleen and kidneys. In another way: hair, skin, flesh, bones, veins, fat, and blood. Also seven senses of perception (mudrik): hearing, sight, taste, smell, growth, [102] reasoning, and imagination.

² Cf. about this term p. 72, note 1. Bâb here probably means the hujjat.

³ Usually Muhammadan astronomers accept nine falaks, adding to these seven also the falak of the fixed stars, and the falaku'l-muhtâf.

Seven forms of instinct: attraction, touch, digestion, repulsion, direction, growth, and procreation. Man comes out of seven substances: plasm, clay, sperm, clotted blood, foetus, flesh, and bones. It is said: "We created him finally". Stability is found only in combination. And man in his life passes through seven phases: new born child, infant, child, boy, youth, adult, and old man. Thus these also appear in sevens.

"Muhammad the Apostle of God" is written (in Arabic) with only seven letters. Similarly, the expression "there is no deity but Allah". The Coran is divided into seven parts (qismat): there are seven lengthy chapters in it. Seven chapters begin with a prefixed letter mim: there are seven verses (in the first chapter): the formula "in the name of God" is also composed of seven letters.

There are seven lawgivers,—six periods of the religious law (shari'at): Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, and Muhammad the Apostle of God, and one is that of the Qa'im,—prostration and glorification be due at his mention! The Wasīs are also seven¹: Seth, Sām, Ismā'il, Aaron, Simon, and Mawlā-nā 'Alī. It is said in a ḥadīth: "(God) created them from seven, gave bread from seven, and they prostrated to God seven times" (?).

There are only seven tastes, seven colours. The expression "but Allah"² is the scale on which all the prescriptions of the religion become equal. The knowledge of the (hidden meaning of) letters is the foundation of all sciences. I have to say therefore: the formula of the profession of tawḥīd contains two prescriptions, one negative, and the other positive, and seven "jewels". The expression "but Allah" consists of four elements. The sentence "there is no deity but Allah" in writing is composed of seven separate groups of letters which are joined to one another (muqta'at). It consists of twelve letters. Altogether there are twenty-eight.

[The author continues in the same strain his speculations about these mystical numbers, seven, twelve, twenty-eight, etc. He seeks for explanation of their supposed to be mystical meaning in arbitrary and fanciful associating them with different planets, elements, physical faculties, etc., in accordance with the ancient ideas. It is hardly worth while to repeat all this stuff in full.]

We have found the sphere of religion similarly composed of groups of seven, cf. the Nāṭiq and Asās: three degrees of believers

¹ There is no mention anywhere of the name of the Waṣī who will accompany the expected Qa'im, and it seems that there is even no indication as to whether the latter will have one. The early Fatimid tradition regarded Imam Muhammad b. Ismā'il as the initiator of the seventh millennial dawr. But later on this belief was apparently forgotten; anyhow, it is never mentioned in the Nizari works. But even in this tradition there is no mention of the Waṣī of the Sābi'u'n-nuṣṣa, as the Qa'im is there called.

² i.e. the second half of the Muhammadan creed.

receive from the Nâtîq the revelation (tanzîl), and from the Asâs the interpretation (ta'wîl); these degrees are those of mustajîb, of ma'dhun, and of mu'allim. Four other degrees receive (the knowledge) by special favour, 'atâ: the lâhiq, the hujjat, and the two asâses.¹ [103] There are seven Imams in every period.² There are twelve lâhiqs.³ Altogether these are twenty-eight. The expression "there is no deity but Allah", which is basic (mizân), in such matters, consists of twelve letters. The same is the case with the expression "Muhammad the Apostle of God", and the "Commander of the Faithful", "Alî ibn Abî Tâlib", "Muhammad ibn Ismâ'il". Similarly, the name of the Qâ'im, the Lord of 18,000 worlds,—prostration and glory be due at his mention!—Mawlâ-nâ Mustansîr bi'l-lâh, is composed of twelve letters. By his exalted name all creation is kept in existence. God the Most High said: "The Creator of everything and the nourisher of every living creature". And in another place is said: "Living One who never dies. Merciful, whose light never becomes extinguished in the heavens, on the earth, and in human beings". In the Coran (XXX, 29) God addresses these words to the Nâtîq: "Set thy face steadfast towards the religion as a hanîf, according to the constitution whereon God has constituted men; there is no altering the creation of God,—that is the standard religion". This is proved by the words of God: "God created Adam after His own form, the Merciful",⁴ and (XXXII, 8): "And breathed into him of His spirit". And it is said further on (Cor. II, 32): "And when We said to the angels: prostrate before Adam,—they prostrated before him, save Iblîs, who refused and was too proud, thus becoming one of the unbelievers". He said: "Prostration is only due to God, but Adam is created from dust, and dust is a dark substance. I am created from fire, and fire is from light". When he thus disobeyed God, a curse fell upon him, and he became expelled forever. [104]

The same light is present in the world, and God's order to prostrate before Adam is an absolute duty and the foundation of the religious duties of man, who should recognize the Adam of his own time and know him, so as to be saved and to obtain peace.

¹ As already mentioned (cf. note 1 on p. 88), the lâhiq and the hujjat are usually treated in Fatimid literature as synonyms.

² This is again a relic of the earlier strata of the Ismaili evolution. The "seven Imams" often appear in the Wajhi dîn, just as they are frequently mentioned in the early Fatimid literature. But later on the idea is more and more forgotten. In the genuine Nizari literature such references are quite exceptional.

³ Thus we can see that these lâhiqs are the same as the hujjats (cf. note 1 on p. 88).

⁴ Again the same doubtful expression, cf. above, note 1 on p. 55 (of the translation).

The Prophet said : " I was a prophet when Adam was still between clay and water ". This means that God the Most High said that many thousand years before the creation of either the world or Adam, the light of Prophethood and of walâyat was with Him, behind the veil of the Substance which is " beyond doubt ". " I wanted to manifest Myself in the world, so I appeared in this form, and with these attributes. " ¹

This is the right religion (dîn) of God the Most High : and in ta'wil the word " religion " (dîn) means the Imam. The meaning of this (?) verse ² is as follows : " Know, O Nâtiq, thy Imam and thy God, so that thou mayest acquire the right faith ". This right religion is the fîtrat, or predestined nature, which comes from God, i.e. (the religion of) the highest hudûd, or ranks, by which the human beings are living. ³ This means that the higher ranks in the religious hierarchy, and those who possess higher knowledge, profess the same original faith of creation (fîtrat). These people are merely the produce (âthâr) of the higher degrees of creation (hudûdi 'ulwâ), being only their visible personifications. If the veil of personality is lifted, only the original substance remains, as is said in the Coran (XXVIII, 88) : " Everything is perishable except His face ", and His face is the Imam. The same matter is referred to in the verse (?) ⁴ : " Everything returns to its original state ".

Everything returns to its original state,—
Pure gold, silver, and lead. ⁵

In another verse (XXX, 10) : " God produces a creation, then He makes it go back again ", and (II, 260 ?) : " Then He revives it, and then makes it die ".

This is the end of the portion dealing with the parallelism between the Universe and the individual human beings (âfâq wa anfus). [105]

² There is no verse of the Coran quoted here. In the 25th Ṣaḥîfa, which most probably is the original from which this passage is taken, it is also stated, after the word Imâm (here the end of the 7th line) : ya'ni âyat in ast ; but no âyat is quoted. Thus it seems that it is omitted in the original itself.

³ The last words are omitted in the Ṣaḥîfa.

⁴ This is not from the Coran, but probably from a ḥadîth. In the 25th Ṣaḥîfa, which is probably the original, after this follows a quotation of the Cor. XXX, 10, which here appears further on. Here is inserted a portion of the 24th Ṣaḥîfa, including a bayt.

⁵ It is interesting to note that this verse appears in the Ṣaḥîfa, which generally avoids poetical quotations.

(D. Allegorical interpretation of eschatological ideas.)

Now we may take up different topics (fawá'id), with the help and power of the Lord of the time ;—may it be that only what he puts into his slave's mouth will be said here !

'Abdu'l-lâh ibn 'Abbâs says that the tree, the fruit of which Adam tasted (though having been forbidden), and the leaves of which he put on himself as a kind of dress, was the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, i.e. it was a kind of wisdom. The fruits of that tree were the higher knowledge ('ilmi bâtin), so that people have a right to call it the tree of Paradise. And those leaves, in the middle of which the fruits grow, are the knowledge of the outward side of the religion (ẓâhir),—they only are food for animals.

If the tree of the knowledge of good and of evil is (within) man, as is said (Cor. XX, 118) : "... the tree of Paradise (or immortality) and the kingdom that shall not wane",—then Paradise should also be (within) man. Because immortality (khuld) and the kingdom that shall not wane can only be fruits of the tree which (grows where one) sees God.

The words of repentance of Adam which he uttered, and which were accepted, also were (within) man, as may be seen from the Coran (XIV, 29) : "A good word is like a good tree whose root is firm and whose branches are in the sky"¹. In the sphere of religious knowledge the expression the "tree of Tûbâ" signifies the true Imam. A ray from the light of his knowledge reappears in the nature of every inhabitant of Paradise who is a slave of the Imam, and who recognizes him. Whatever his faithful slaves accomplish in the religion, or in the realm of what is the command of God, all this becomes perfect at once, as God said (Cor. LVI, 35) : "And We made them virgins, with pomegranate-like breasts".

Tûbâ, as is well-known, is a tree in Paradise, and its branches overhang the highest part of it. Everything that the inhabitants of Paradise want, at once appears on its branches. This is an allegory for those who receive direct inspiration (ta'yîd) from God, as their knowledge ('ilm), power (qudrat), and desire (irâdat),—all three are but one. Therefore, whatever may be the object of desire of those who are granted the ta'yîd, it is at once gained by the virtue of their knowledge of it.

All the inmates of Paradise have a share in the ta'yîd. For this reason it is narrated that a branch of the Tûbâ tree hangs over the window of the cell of every inmate of Paradise, as indicated in the Coran (XLIV, 54): "We have given them the properties of (or: united them with) [106] the real hūrīs".

This degree is not attainable to outsiders (nā-mahram), or to enemies (ahlī tadādd). This is why in the Coran it is specially noted (LV, 72): "Hūrīs kept back in the tents",—i.e. there are some hūrīs who are kept aside under a screen. And whoever in his behaviour is like an angel, without having really attained the angelic nature, or one who possesses the angelic nature, but is (no longer?) an angel,—he will be unable to attain the privilege of seeing the real hūrīs. This is indicated in the verse of the Coran (LV, 56): "(Maids) whom no man nor jinn has deflowered before",—this could be done only by angels, of angelic nature. As the soul returns and retreats to such condition and state as described, God grants every His friend, who possesses higher knowledge, an ever new pleasure, similar to that which a lover gets when meeting his beloved again.

On hūrīs (hūru'l-'in), and the Tūbā-tree. Know that those whom God helps shall be able to see things as they really are, beholding the traces of Divine benevolence in every atom of His kingdom and Omnipotence.¹ And when the vision of the lights of the Substance of the Creator,² which is manifest in every atom, becomes hypostasized (mutamaththal),—no doubt, it will adopt the "most beautiful form" (aḥsanu's-ṣūrat),—and this is what is meant by the hūrīs of Paradise. It is obvious that the state of beatitude (tamattu')³ is not derived by the persons of clear spiritual vision from merely seeing (Paradise). It is only an act of the Divine command ('ālamī amr) that the whole of the spirit, and entire substance of the possessor of the knowledge ('ārīf) become assimilated (mutamaththal) with that form (ṣūrat) by the way of a complete union (ittihād) and coincidence (yakānagī) because the contemplation of knowledge (dānish) of something by a person, becomes inseparable from the substance (dhāt) of that person.

On Paradise and its doors.⁴ Know that in the realm of abstract ideas Paradise means eternal existence (baqā) and knowledge (dānish). In the experience of the senses it means pleasure. Thus, in other words, it signifies the people who follow the Truth and attain the eternal life, i.e. those who are the masters

² Instead of the expression dhātī mubdī' (p. 106, line 11) it is better to read dhātī mubdī', as given in the 35th Ṣaḥīfa, from which this passage is quoted. The term mubdī' is always used in the early Isma'ili works to convey the idea of "Creator".

⁴ This is a literal quotation from the 33rd and 34th Ṣaḥīfas (from here as far as p. 107, line 5, and pp. 108, l. 4 to 110, l. 4 of the text).

of the ta'wîl, and those who know the real meaning of the Divine revelation, tanzîl. And the people seeking pleasures are those who are only looking for position and wealth.

The people of this world are divided into three classes : the advanced (sâbiq), the people of the right hand (ahli yamîn), and the people of the left hand (ahli shamâl). The first group, the sâbiqs, are those who profess the unity of God (ahli waḥdat). [107] Perfection of Paradise depends on them, as the Apostle of God said with reference to Salmân (Fârsî) : " Verily, Paradise wishes more to have Salmân amongst its inmates than Salmân wishes to be in Paradise ". And it is also with reference to this class of people that is said : " God, drown us completely (to save) us from its drowning (?) " ¹. Each of them has a separate cell, over which, and at the window of which, hangs a branch of the Tûbâ tree ; hûris and pretty boys serve them. The most revered amongst the inmates of Paradise are clothed with seventy thousand dresses of the silk of Paradise ; and the least respected amongst them are clothed with seventy dresses made of Paradisial silk.

They receive their drink from the four streams of Paradise. those of water, milk, refined honey, and wine. Their food comes from that overhanging branch of the Tûbâ tree from which they get whatever they like. There are also " Hûris, secluded in the tents " (Cor. LV, 72).

Paradise is the dwelling place of those who abstain from things sinful. But the enemies of the religion (ahli taḍâdd) are the inmates of Hell, and are tortured by the adverse circumstances in this world,—they are the people of Hell. There is a reference in the Coran to these three classes of people (XXXV, 29) : " And of them are some who wrong themselves, and of them are some who take a middle course, and of them are some who vie in good works ".

When people leave this temporary world for the abode of eternity, first of all they have to answer the questions of Munkar and Nakîr : " Who is your Lord, what is your faith, who is the Prophet whom you follow, who is your Imam, what is the object of your worship (qibla), and what are you generally ? " If a proper answer comes forth from the slave : " My Lord is the Creator of the world, my faith is the pure religion of Muḥammad the Chosen, my Imam is the Imam of the present time, etc.",—then one of the doors of Paradise will be opened before him. But if his answer is unsatisfactory,—God forbid,—he will be taken on to the bridge of the "Straight Path", Ṣirāṭu'l-mustaqīm, which means going uphill for a thousand years, and for one thousand years by a level road, and for one thousand years downhill; it is thinner than a hair, and sharper than the edge of a sword. If his reply about his Lord being the Creator is satisfactory, an angel of mercy will appear on his right side, and will carry him over the bridge of Ṣirāṭ just as if by a highway, [108] from the East to the West,—it will appear to him as soft and level as the palm of the hand. If his reply is unsatisfactory, —God forbid,—he will fall into Hell and fire, and will be severely tortured there.

The best of the inmates of Hell are clothed with a thousand dresses of fire: their food is the weight of a man of zaqūm poison, and half a man of fire; as this goes down to the stomach, it will burn everything in the four passages of the body, and half of it will stick in the throat, so that its burning will be noticeable on the four ways of the Universe,—it would be as dreadful as causing death.

Another class is formed by those people who try their best; and some of them are the foremost (sābiq), in their goodness.

It is well known that there are eight doors in Paradise, and these are the symbols for the eight forms of the activity of the human being, i.e. perception of senses, imagination, and reasoning power; also the five external (ẓāhir) senses, and, in addition to these, thought, imagination, and reason; when these seven faculties follow the last named, i.e. reason, surely only good actions are done by the individual¹; they lead him to the happiness of Paradise. Thus these eight faculties correspond with the eight doors of Paradise. And the one who attains Paradise is the man whose senses follow the dictates of reason. No sinful actions are done by him, and he continually practices only good and laudable actions,—Paradise is his eternal abode.

On the streams of Paradise. There are four streams in Paradise: water which does not harm; milk; wine, and refined honey, as is said in the Coran (XLVII, 16): "In it are rivers of water without corruption, and rivers of milk, the taste whereof changes not; and rivers of wine, delicious to those who drink; and rivers of honey clarified". The river of water is useful to every being,—to man, animal, and plant. This is a symbol for the preaching (da'wat) of a Nātiq, which is intended to be understood by everybody. The meaning of the prescriptions of sharī'at, and the wise word of the Nātiq, reach equally the people of unity (ahli waḥdat) and [109] the people of gradual progress (ahli tarattub), who correspond with man, and also the enemies (ahli taḳādd), who correspond with beasts. Every Nātiq has his own peculiarities. Just as there is brackish water, which affects the health, or harmless water, so the different religious systems, shar'ats, initiated by different Nâfiqs are composed of different elements. Some elements are intended for everybody, such as promise of punishment, the circumstances of the Resurrection, or the command of abstention from doing what is prohibited.¹ Some of such prescriptions impose a burden upon the followers of the formal religion, as in the case of hard observances prescribed to the Zâhirîs, such as fast, prayer, religious tax, and hajj. Some other commandments are not burdensome, such as the command to cultivate laudable qualities, or to reveal the mysteries.²

Every one who follows the command of God is with the Creator,
And who does not follow it, he is not with Him.³

The river of milk brings benefit to a more limited number of beings than, in the case of water. All plants and some species of living creatures, as, for instance, birds, have no need of it. This is a symbol of the mysteries of the great hujjat; ⁴ "the taste of which never changes",—i.e. they need no further interpretation (ta'wîl). This is concerned only with the people who possess power (dawlat) and who are engaged in special preaching (da'wati khâss) ⁵ (of the true religion), i.e. the followers of the Imam of the time, who obey what is ordered in the Coran (IV. 62): "O ye who believe, obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those in authority amongst you". The Prophet said: "I am the city of knowledge, and 'Alî is its gate", i.e. the most sacred Bâb.

Honey is used by a still more limited number of beings than milk. Only man and certain animals derive any benefit from it. It exists for the purpose of healing some diseases of man. This is a symbol of the ta'wîls of the Asâs, which are intended to cure the disease of imitative piety (taghîd), and the stupidity (jahl) of the people. It is concerned only with the learned; just as is the case with honey which appears either as raw, or partly clarified, or completely clarified. The ta'wîls ⁶ are also of three degrees: interpretation of the meaning of a story,—which is the simplest; interpretation of the prescrip-

² Apparently the negative particle na is omitted here, and one should read: "or not to reveal the mysteries".

³ This bayt is omitted in the Şahîfa.

⁴ Instead of the expression hujjati a'zam, which is so often used in this work, the Şahîfa gives in the corresponding place simply hujjatân, in the Plural.

⁵ In the Şahîfa simply ahli da'wat.

⁶ In the Şahîfa is added wa tanzîlât, apparently by an oversight.

tions of religion,—the middle way; and interpretation of the similes which imply mysteries.

The river of wine is intended for a still smaller number of users than that of honey, just as wine is confined to the taste of human beings only. It gives relief from sorrow and sadness. It is a symbol of the ta'yîd, or Divine inspiration from the Imam, which is accessible only to a few men, [110] giving them relief from the fear of this world and the next. Wine is impure and forbidden to the people of this world, but permitted and pure to the people of Paradise, as is said in the Coran (XVI, 116): "He has forbidden you that which dies of itself, and blood, and the flesh of swine". (This prohibition) belongs to the teaching of the Nâtîq. Sometimes there is no difference for anybody, and it is forbidden even to the enemies of religion, ahli ta'dâdd. Sometimes, however, there is a difference, and it is lawful to the inhabitants of Paradise and the people of union (ahli wahdat),¹ i.e. hujjats, dâ'is, ma'dhûns, mu'allîms, and mustajîbs.

In our religion wine is permitted, but

It is forbidden to drink it without seeing thy face,
O cypress, with the blossom like body.

On the "Straight Path" (Şirâtu'l-mustaqîm), on the Balance, and the period of time between death and Judgment.

Know that the Şirât is a bridge over Hell. It is thinner than a hair, sharper than the edge of a sword;² it is the road of ascent for a thousand years of marching, of one thousand years of level road, and one thousand years of descent. Know also that the expression "counting", hisâb, means the gathering of all one's good and bad actions,³ as is said in the Coran (XCIX, 7-8): "And he who does the weight of an atom of good shall see it; and he who does the weight of an atom of evil shall see it". All this is attained through recognizing the Imam of the time. And⁴ one who acts in accordance with the command: "Take an account of yourselves before others take it",—such people will always be busy with meditating over what they do or what they say. They will be of those about whom it is said in the Coran (LXXXIV, 8): "He shall be reckoned with by an easy reckoning", because, as is said also in the Coran (VII, 7-8): "The balance on that day is true, and whosoever scales are heavy, they are prosperous; but whosoever scales are light, they it is who lose themselves". The meaning of heaviness of actions, when weighed on the

² These two sentences are literally quoted from the 32nd Şahîfa.

⁴ From here the 31st Şahîfa is merely paraphrased.

balance of human acts, is varied. If the cause of the action is not the carnal self, contentment is derived from it, and one who acts in this way derives from it the feeling of pleasure, joy, and contentment, [111] as is said in the Coran (CI, 5): "And as for him whose balance is heavy, he shall be in a well-pleasing life". The meaning of the weights which weight down (the opposite side of) the scale, are the influence (athar) of actions which cause confusion, such as acts of lust and passion, in the soul of man. Through these, one who acts falls into the deepest part of Hell (hâwiya), as is said in the Coran (CI, 6): "But as for him whose balance is light his dwelling shall be the pit of Hell".¹

It is said about Jesus in the Coran (IV, 169): "His Word which He cast into Mary and a spirit from Him". And Jesus says in the Injil: "I am the Good that was sent from the heaven".²

The purpose of those who are good is not to tell stories about what happens. Their purpose is to foresee what is going to happen in the future. God has given everyone life. He is the origin of life of the world and of man,—the world cannot exist without Him. Therefore, the world and man exist with Him, and His slaves exist with Him, while this visible world, and those who depend only on it, do not really exist. In the Coran (?)³ this visible world is compared with the false Imams, who are worshipped by the kâfirs and by the deceivers (munâfiq): "This world is forbidden to those who belong to the next world; and the next world is forbidden to those who belong to this; and both these are forbidden to the people who belong to God".⁴

I will not go to Paradise until I behold Thy beautiful face,—

Of what use is Paradise if the Beloved is not in it? ⁵

This visible world is compared with a mirage, as is said:—

What does resemble this world, if not a mirage?

Only He exists—why dost thou run after the unreal?

All people are deceived by it,—

Big and small, child and adult.

Mirage means in reality non-existence (nîstî-yi haqîqî); it exists only in human imagination. It appears that (real) worship

¹ Here the quotation and the paraphrase of the 31st Ṣaḥîfa ends. As the subject is suddenly changed without any apparent division in the text, we may think that it is mutilated, and something is omitted here.

² It is difficult to guess what verse of the New Testament is intended here.

³ This is obviously to be read: ḥadîth.

⁴ Cf. the 16th Ṣaḥîfa, in which the same ḥadîth is quoted.

⁵ The same bayt is quoted on p. 71 (text).

of God, and knowledge of God consist in completely (li-kullî'l-wujûd) taking away from one's mind the concentration on himself, and his self consciousness, cultivating instead of these the knowledge that one exists [112] only through Him, and that (in reality) is nothing by himself. In this way one can attain the recognition (ma'rifat) of the person who is united with Him (Shakhshi wahdat). Such a person is the proof (hujjat) of God the Most High,—Mawlâ-nâ, exalted and extolled be He!

If at any time even a hundred thousand people form an agreement amongst themselves, this will not be a unity: no, it will be difference itself. It is necessary that they must be united by the ties imposed by God, by His commands and prohibitions. Only by this they may attain salvation and the peace of the soul. It is said in the Coran (LXVI, 6): "They disobey not God in what He bids them, but they do what they are bidden". If thou be a rebelling dîw, or devil, the door of shari'at, or of ṭariqat of God is different for thee, just as the ways of knowing God, or of worshipping Him are different.

The people of this visible world merely pronounce with their tongues the name of God, which is also a creation. They thus know only the name, not God Himself, because they do not know God through the Man of God. By their imagination, they have invented an idea for this name. Thus, obviously, they recognize their own fiction, not God. In their prayers and invocations they turn their faces towards the sky, or towards a house, but they obviously do not know the master of that house; they are simply blind from their birth. It is about them that God says (Cor. II, 17): "Deaf, dumb, blind, and they shall not turn away",—thus they undoubtedly will be sent to that place (i.e. Hell) on the day of Resurrection. One cannot know God by (ordinary) ways of recognition, nor by (ordinary) knowledge. On the day of Resurrection one must not be conscious of himself or of anything. If you recognize Him, you will be nothing in your eyes, because He is everything. There is no closer degree of approaching Him than by regarding one's self as nonexistent. Therefore the Qâ'im, the Resurrection, the recognition, God, worship, the object of worship, knowledge, reward, etc.,—will all be one and the same thing, and it (really) is one and the same thing. We can see by intuition (ba-hukmi nazar) that all these things are similar to one another, and that all things (generally) are proofs of God's existence. And by the enlightenment of the Resurrection (Qiyâmat),—God Himself becomes His own proof. Then there will be no "seeing" (nazar), or intuition, and no instruction from others (ta'lim),—He must be recognized by Himself, directly.

No man will recognize Him by his own effort,—
His Substance can only be known through Himself.

The relation between sharī'at and qiyāmat is that their sequence cannot be reversed, and sharī'at cannot follow qiyāmat, because it would anyhow remain the same qiyāmat. It is not true that the difference between these two is negligible, and that qiyāmat does not differ (from sharī'at), [113] because if it would really be opposed to it, it would be existence, and the opposite of existence cannot also belong to existence.¹ The Lord of the world, Mawlā-nā,—at whose mention be prostration and glorification!—says about this, that creation is a “veil” of its Creator, and the state of creation is a “veil” of Divinity. Similarly, sharī'at is a “veil” of qiyāmat.

There is no great distance between this world and that,
But on the road there there is a wall which is thy own existence.

Thus, recognizing God, worshipping God, knowing God, invoking God,—all form “veils” of God. And even the word and the action of the True Man (Muḥiqq) is in reality his “veil”. Justice and bounty of God are His “veils”,—the “veils” of Divinity. If we say: “O God”, we invoke God, not anything else. Some people ask me: “Thou dost say in Paradise: O glory be to God.” But I say: “Thou art the Lord of both worlds, the Lord of Paradise and of Hell, everything is by Thy will and command!” Thou sayest: “I want to become one of the inhabitants of Paradise”. They say to someone: “Be the king of the whole world”. He replies: “If I am not permitted to be a subject, I do not want to be a king”.

Every one who says: I know, or I do not know; or I recognize, or I do not recognize; or I want or I do not want; I worship, or I do not worship; I am, or I am not,—all this he says with regard to his belonging to a world of plurality (kathrat). If thou knowest something, it is the same in reality as thou dost not know it. And if thou dost not know, it is the same as if thou knowest. If thou existest, it is the same as if thou dost not exist, and if thou dost not exist, it is the same as if thou art existent. What hast thou to do with all these? What hast thou to do with thyself and with what is other than thyself? If thou dost not think in this way, thou wilt attain the state of a true believer, of one who believes in the unity of God (wahdat and wāḥid). The expressions “this” and “that” have no meaning by themselves. Similarly “I” and “thou” also are meaningless. Thou art the same person as he. This is the meaning of wahdat and of wāḥid, i.e. of unity and unitarianism. Resignation from thinking, speaking, acting, from one's self is both sharī'at and qiyāmat. But sharī'at is your own personal (conscious) being or not-being, moving or not-moving, knowing or not-knowing, speaking or not-speaking, acting or not-acting, while qiyâmat means that the "self" disappears.¹

Prophets and Imams do not come for the purpose of teaching people something new. No, they come for the purpose [114] of clearing away from their memory all those things which they, the people, have learnt, which caused them to fall away from their original natural religion (fitrat), and thus bring them back to this their fitrat. Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ,—may God sanctify his spirit!—says that higher knowledge, the Prophet, and the Imam, all constitute the fitrat; and the Paradise from which Adam fell was also the fitrat.

The same Bâbâ Sayyid-nâ says: the natural religion (fitrat) of Arabs is such that they do not care about their relatives (?).² Thus the Prophet said: "I belong to the Arab nation, but (all) Arabs do not belong to me", because in matters of religion nationality is of no importance, and the faithful may be recruited from any nation.

What learned theologians and philosophers tell in their highly artificial speculations, does not bring one to knowing God,—can a child be born from artificial sperm? So, just as man can be born only from natural human sperm, so the human character, spiritual nature, and his salvation (tab' wa sûrat wa ma'âd) can only be derived from the original (fitratî) speech of God. Mawlâ-nâ Ma'add (prostration be due at his mention),³ says that this may be proved by the hadîth (?): "Reason corrects (the matter) in order that the correct should be (really) correct", i.e. as the original fitrat. Mawlâ-nâ Bâqir,—prostration and glorification be at his mention!—says: "In the way of God there is no room for artificial constructions or sophisticated theorizing. When a brother in truth is initiated, joining the religion by the mystery of predestination (fitrat), the talk of learned theologians is not the best thing for him. It is necessary to bring people first to obedience, to sharî'at and its prescriptions (aḥkâm), so that people may rise from the state of beasts, who go by their primitive ways. They should begin to feel as human beings (naḥsânî), and then actually become real human beings". It is said that after this there is a still higher degree, that of reason, and the possibility (mahall) of righteousness (ṣawâb), which the people have to attain in order to become reasonable (aqlânî) beings. Thus one degree is superseded by another, a more perfect one. The Messiah said: "I came not to reject the Torah, but to perfect it".¹

² So also in the HB Abû Ishâq. Apparently this is a primitive explanation of the catholic tendencies of Islam.

³ Perhaps the name should be read Mu'izz?

Physical birth takes place in the world of tanzîl, or of the Divine revelation which is intended for everybody. Spiritual birth takes place in the world of ta'wîl, or the revelation of the hidden meaning of the religion. Tanzîl itself consists both of the outward and of the hidden meaning, but usually the people disregard this fact, and thus they do not attain salvation (ma'âd). The Messiah said: "One who is not born twice will never attain the kingdom of heavens".² If anyone performs all good deeds which are ordered by prophets and saints, nikân, and even if he does more than this, if he recognizes all prophets, saints, and Imams of the past, and believes in them,—all this will be of no use for him, and he will die as a heathen unless and until he recognizes the Imam and the Lord of his own time: [115] otherwise he will die as one who never believed in the Prophet. and his position will be the same as that of idolaters and renegades (mushrikân wa munâfiqân). Knowledge of God, of the Prophet, and of the Imam, all are connected by God with the "Man of the time" (Mardi waqt, i.e. Imam). His command is the command of God the Allhighest, as is said in the Coran (IV. 62): "Obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those in authority amongst you". The command of the Imams of the past makes no difference (hâsil na-dârad).

Mawlâ-nâ Ja'far Sâdiq relates in the hadîth: "By father from grand-father, one descending from the other . . . , that the Prophet said: one of my (direct) descendants is (always) standing by (qâ'im) in my community"; the duration of lives of such lieutenants are the same as those of ordinary people. They will never remain inaccessible to anybody, but in every period there will be (at least) some chosen ones who will know and see the Qâ'im, and lead other people to him,³ as is said in the Coran (XXXVI, 11): "And everything We have included in the obvious Imâm". And also (Cor. XXVIII, 88): "Everything perishes save for His face". And also in accordance with this verse (XLVIII, 10): "God's hand is above their hands". It is he (the Imam) who is referred to here.

The verse "God's hand is above their hands" was revealed with regard to him, because Nobody's hand ever is higher than his hand.⁴

¹ St. Matthew, V, 17: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets: I am not come to destroy but to fulfil".

² St. John, III, 3: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God".

⁴ The same bayt is quoted above, on p. 91 (text).

It is related from Imam Zaynu'l-'âbidîn : " Recognition (ma'rifat) of God is recognition of the Imam of the time, devotion to whom is as obligatory to everybody as obedience to God ". It is said : " And (he is) from God the Allhighest ". Thus recognition and obedience to him is obligatory and incumbent upon the slaves of God, so long as the sky and the earth last.

It is impossible to think that there could not have been an Imam before Muḥammad the Chosen. [116] In reality for many thousand centuries before this world and people (were created) he was, he is at present, and will (always) be. After recognition of the Imam one must also know that there always was an Imam from the time of the creation of the world to the creation of Adam, from Adam to the last Prophet, from the Last Prophet to this moment ; that he always is, and will be, to the end of the world. Obedience to him is the same as obedience to God, —it is obligatory to all slaves of God. It is said in the Coran (LI, 56) : " And I have not created the Jinn and mankind save that they may worship Me ",—" and know Me ".¹ Therefore worshipping God is bound with recognizing Him, and knowing God is the most difficult thing. The proper (ḥaqq) and the first available way is that one may need (somebody else's) instruction (ta'lim). The Prophet said that slaves of God and the faithful should know and recognize Him, and should act in accordance with their knowledge of Him, so that " to-morrow on the Day of Resurrection " they would not feel ashamed and disgraced.

We have explained the right way leading towards salvation, —now we may finish this, invoking blessings upon the Prophet and his Successors.

Praise be to God, the Lord of the worlds, the praise of those who offer thanks to Him ; and prayers and blessings be on His Apostle, the trusted, and on all Good and Pure, and on the truthful Imams. May Mawlâ-nâ give his gracious help to all the faithful so that they are pious, and may He bless this humblest of all the slaves of the guiding and rightly guided da'wat,—may God establish it in the Eastern parts of the earth as well as in the Western,—(help him) with His eternal help and unending guidance ! May He keep the heart and the tongue of this His slave, and of all the slaves of God, from things improper, either in thinking or in speaking ! May He open the door of His bounty to the world and its inhabitants, and may He grant his guidance to the path of salvation to this humble slave, through his connection with the line of the good and pure Imams, whose great ḥujjat,—the means and the source of all blessings,—no one can disobey, in accordance with the verse of the Coran (LXXVIII, 38) : " The day when the Spirit and the angels shall stand in ranks, they shall not speak save to whom the Merciful permits, and who speaks aright ". [117] May He make us sure-footed on His " straight path ",—" Verily, He is the best of all helpers and assistants, by His bounty and mercy,—O the Most Merciful of all the merciful ! "

This is the end of the book, called " Seven Chapters " (Haft Bâb), by the King of the wise-men, and the head of those who search for the Truth, the proof (hujjat) of the Qâ'im, the Eternal,—Abû Mu'in, the amîr of amîrs, the leader of men, Sultân Shâh Nâsiri Khusraw,—may God sanctify his sacred spirit !

Finished with the help of God, the Nourisher, on the 14th of the month of Shawwâl, Saturday, of the year 1207 (i.e. Saturday, the 25th May, 1793). It was on that day that this copy was completed.¹ The copyist prays those who serve the religion of the time, and who search after the true faith, to be so kind as to correct any mistakes and omissions, if such there be, when being gracious enough to read this book. But God knows best !

¹ Strangely, there is no mention of the name of the copyist, and of the place of copying, while both are usually given in every copy.

(The original text differs very slightly from the version given in the pseudo-HBAI, and the translation given in the note 4 on p. 60 needs only a few alterations. Instead of the apparently later muridân, which is a Sufic term, the original gives rafîqân,—"comrades, friends". The name of Barda', which is rather illegible in the HBAI, is to be read barâbar, i.e. "opposite". Instead of ba-âhastagî-yi har chi tamâm-tar the original gives ba-âhangî, i.e. "in accord with perfect manner". The text begins to differ very much after the passage containing the beginning of the address of the Imam. It is translated here in full).

... He said in a loud voice : " O ye, inhabitants of the world, Jinns, men and angels ! Know that Mawlâ-nâ Qâ'im of the Qiyâmat,—prostration and glorification be to him on his mention !—is the Lord of (all) things created, the Absolute Existence ; he is, in every way, beyond all negation of his existence, because he is more exalted than anything that sinners can associate with Him. knows (this) must offer glorifications and thanks to him. He is exalted beyond this in a great degree. And he . . . to his time (?), he is by his nature one who knows ”.

Then he, the Imam, uttered the sermon which begins with : “ It is said : and in what consists the Qiyāmat ? O lord of . . . (?) ”. After this he read a copy of the epistle which begins with : “ We are present and we exist ”. Then he delivered his first sermon (khutba). Then he sat for a while, and then rose, and delivered his second khutba. After this faqîh Muḥammad Bustî stood up on his chair (kursî), turning his face towards the minbar, and read aloud the whole of the khutba and the Great Epistle, explaining them. And the Lord also remained standing until the reading was finished. Then he descended from the minbar, and recited two rik'ats of prayer, as appropriate on a holiday.

On that day, to the end of it, people exchanged congratulations, feasting and rejoicing to the utmost. Restrictions and prohibitions of the sharî'at were lifted from them. And on that day he ordered that in Mu'minâbâd of Quhistân and everywhere there should be a holiday.

And we, with the help of Mawlâ-nâ the Qâ'im of the Qiyāmat will write some chapters on the date (or history) of the Great Qiyāmat, which was predicted by prophets and saints, and of which glad tidings and prophecies were given by them. We will give an account of the blessed sermon (khutba), together with a translation and an explanation of it, in the best way that this humble slave of the guiding da'wat knows. All this will be included in those chapters, if God pleases. O Mawlâ-nâ !

از این عالم بچندین هزار قرن عالم و آدم بوده است و هست و خواهد بودن پس دانستن
 او واجب آن است که بدانند که امام از دُورِ عالم تا آدم از آدم تا خاتم از خاتم تا باین
 دم همیشه هست و بود و باشد تا انقراضِ عالم و طاعتِ او طاعتِ خدای تعالی است
 و واجب است بر همه بندگان و در قرآن شریف می آید که قوله تعالی عَزَّ مِنْ قَالٍ
 وَمَا خَلَقْتُ الْجِنَّ وَالْإِنْسَ إِلَّا لِيَعْبُدُونِ وَأَنْ يَعْرِفُونَنِي یعنی
 گفت خدای تعالی که نیافریدم پری و آدمی را الا برای آنکه مرا بشناسند و بپرستند
 پس پرستیدن موقوف بشناختن و شناختن خدای تعالی شکل ترین همه چیز است
 حق و اولی بود که بتعلیم احتیاج داشته باشد و رسول علیه السلام فرموده اند که
 بندگان و مؤمنان بدانند و بشناسند و شناخت کار کنند تا فرودای قیامت
 نخل و شتر سار نمانند ما نمودیم راه خیر و نجات ختم بر نبی و آل صلوات

الْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ رَبِّ الْعَالَمِينَ وَحَمْدُ الشَّاكِرِينَ وَالصَّلَوَاتُ
 وَالسَّلَامُ عَلَى رَسُولِهِ النَّبِيِّ الْأَمِينِ وَعَلَى آلِهِ الطَّيِّبِينَ وَالطَّاهِرِينَ
 وَالْأَثَمَةِ الصَّادِقِينَ مولانا همه بندگان خود را توفیق دین داری کرامت کند
 و این بنده کمترین بندگان دعوتِ مَدِیْهِ مَهْدِیْهِ ثَبَّتْهَا اللَّهُ فِي مَشَارِقِ الْأَرْضِ
 وَمَغَارِبِهَا رَ الْبَغَايَةِ اِزْلَى و هدایت لم یزلی منظور نظر خود کند و دل و زبان او
 و جمله بندگان را از ناشایست در کردار و گفتار نگاه دارد و او را بوسیله سلسله طیبین
 که سر از طاعتِ حجتِ بزرگوار او که واسطه و وسیله همه سعادتهاست نه میچند
 بقول این آیت کریمه که قوله تعالی 'يَوْمَ يَقُومُ الرُّوحُ وَالْمَلَائِكَةُ
 صَفًّا لَا يَتَكَلَّمُونَ إِلَّا مَنْ أَذِنَ لَهُ الرَّحْمَنُ وَقَالَ صَوَابًا'

نداند و نشاند او را هیچ سود ندارد و مرگش مرگ جاہلان باشد و مرگ کسی باشد که بی پیغمبر مرده باشد و حال او با حال دیگر منافقان و مشرکان یکسان باشد خدا شناسی و پیغمبر شناسی و امام شناسی بر دو وقت باز بسته است و فرمان آن فرمان خدای تعالی است بحکم اطیعوا الله و اطیعوا الرسول و اولی الامر منکم و فرمان امامان گذشته حاصل ندارد و حضرت امام جعفر صادق می فرماید که قال النبی علیه السلام ابا عن جد و نسلاً بعد نسل یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که یکی از فرزندان من در میان امت من قائم است و مدت اعمار ایشان چنانچه اهل زمانه را ممکن باشد و هرگز نباشد که هیچ کس را با ایشان راه نباشد بلکه در هر روزگاری چند شخص خاص آن قائم وقت را بشناسند و دانند و مردم را راه نمائی کنند بحکم و کُلَّ شَیْءٍ أَحْصَيْنَاهُ فِي إِمَامٍ مُّبِينٍ وَحُكْمُ كُلِّ شَیْءٍ هَا لَيْكَ إِلَّا وَجْهَهُ و بقول این آیت کریمه که قوله تعالی يَدُ اللَّهِ فَوْقَ أَيْدِيهِمْ أَنْ دَسَتْ يَدُ اللَّهِ اسْتَ تَرْجَمَهُ

یاد الله فوق ایدیهیهم از آن آید نشان او که بالاتر دست و نباشد دست کسی اصلاً و از امام زین العابدین نقل است که فرموده اند که مَعْرِفَةُ اللَّهِ مَعْرِفَةُ إِمَامِهِ زَمَانِهِمُ الَّذِي حَبَّبَتْهُ عَلَيْهِمْ طَاعَةٌ یعنی معرفت خدای تعالی معرفت امام زمان است و اهل آن زمان را که طاعت او برایشان واجب است در هر روزگاری که باشد قوله تعالی وَمِنْ عِنْدِ اللَّهِ تعالی یعنی در هر روزگاری که باشد معرفت او بر بندگان خدای تعالی واجب و لازم باشد تا مادامیکه آسمان و زمین باشد و پیش از دو روز حضرت محمد مصطفی صلی الله علیه و آله و سلم شاید که امام نبوده باشد بلکه

له از آیه ۲ از سوره النساء (4) له از آیه ۱۱ از سوره نساء (36) له از آیه ۸۸ از سوره القصص (28)

له از آیه ۱۰ از سوره النحل (48)

تا مردم را هر چه آموخته اند بدان از فطرتی بنیاده اند از یادشان باز برند و بفطرت اول
برسانند حضرت بابا سیدنا قدس الله روحه می فرماید که معرفت پیغمبر و امام فطرت است
و بهشت که آدم از آنجا افتاد فطرت بود، هم او فرماید چنانچه عرب را فطرتی است که بخوشتا
حاجت نیست چنانچه پیغمبر علیه السلام فرموده اند که من از عربم عرب از من نه چرا که
نباید در دین مردمی باشد بر آن منظور و دیگران را از ایشان باید گرفت اینکه مشکلم
و فیلسوف میگویند سخن صنایع راه بنده شناسی نبرد که بنطفه صنایع مردم را نشیستی کرد
و پس چنانچه الا از نطفه مردم نیاید الا از سخن الهی فطرتی طبع و صورت و معاد نیاید و مولانا
معهذ لکزه السجود می فرماید که بر آن آن است که یُصَحِّحُ الْعَقْلُ لِصِحَّةِ الصَّحِيحِ
یعنی آن فطرت اول مولانا باقر لکزه السجود و تسبیح فرماید که این نه سخن صنایع برهم نه
است در راه خدا چون برادر حقیقی بحسب محنت است که از سر فطرت راست بیاید آ
ز سخن متکلمان است که در ایشان بهتر یابند هم باول شریعت و احکام بیاورد تا مردم
از انعام و بهائم که حکایت طبعی کند جدا شوند تا حکایت ایشان انسانی شود و در درجه انسانی
در آیند پس از آن گویند مرتبه دیگر است عقل است و محل صواب است تا حکایت آن
عقلانی شود پس ابطال آن یکی از بهر کمال آن دیگری باشد مسیح گوید مَا حِثُّ لَإِبْطَالِ
قَوَادَةٍ وَلَیْکِنْ لَا کَمَلَهَا

ولادت جسمانی در عالم تنزلی ولادت روحانی در عالم تأویل و اگر تنزلی که ظاهر و باطن
است ندانند راه با معاد نبرند مسیح گوید مَنْ لَمْ یُؤَلِّدْ مَرَّتَیْنِ لَمْ یَبْلُغْ مَلْکُوتَ
السَّمَاءِ اگر کسی همه کارائی که انبیاء و نیکان فرموده اند بجای آورد و بران بنفراید
و انبیا و همه اولیا و امامان گذشته را بداند و اعتقاد کند اما امام وقت را و خداوند زمانیش را

نباشد و اگر مقابل بودی هست بودی و مقابل هست نشاید که نصیب بی هست باشد
 خداوند عالم مولانا علی لایزاله التَّجود و التَّسبیح می فرماید که خلق حجاب خداست و خلقی حجاب
 خدائی و شریعت حجاب قیامت است (ترجمه)

ز دنیا تا بقبی نیست بسیار ولی در ره وجودت دیوار
 همین خداشناسی و خداپرستی و خدا دانی و خدا خوانی که حجاب خداست هم قول و فعل محقق که
 بحقیقت حجاب محقق است عدل و فضل خدا هر دو هم حجاب خداست و خدائی ما گفتیم خدا
 و خدای می خوانیم نه یا چیز دیگر را گویند به بهشت نمی گوئی ای سبحان الله من می گویم تو
 خداوند هر دو جهانی و خداوند بهشت و دوزخ باشی تا همه بخواست و حکم تو باشی تو میگوئی مرا
 می باید که یکی از بهشتیان باشم یکی را گویند تو پادشاه همه همان باشی گوید اگر مرا گذارند
 که رعیت باشم پادشاهی را نیز نمی خواهم و هر که گوید چیزی میدانم یا نمیدانم می شناسم

 نباشی اگر نباشی همان است که باشی ترا با خود با نیا چه کار ترا خود با تو و غیر تو چه کار اگر گوئی
 بوحدت درائی و واحدی این و او خود معنی ندارد من و تو معنی ندارد و تو این کس باشی

چنانچه در آیت آمده که فَأَمَّا مَنْ ثَقُلَتْ مَوَازِينُهُ فَهُوَ فِي عِيشَةٍ رَاضِيَةٍ
 و مردار سنگ موازین اثر فعل چند است که نفس فاعل را سبب آن تحیر و تنبیه و اوهوس
 حاصل گردد و از آن نفس فاعل به او رسد چنانچه در آیت آمده که قوله تعالى وَأَمَّا
 مَنْ خَفَّتْ مَوَازِينُهُ فَأُمُّهُ هَاوِيَةٌ و در شأن عیسی علیه السلام بقرآن شریف
 می آید که قوله تعالى وَكَلَّمَتْهُ أَلْقَاهَا إِلَى مَرْيَمَ وَرُوحٌ مِنْهُ وَعِیْ
 علیه السلام بانجیل می گوید که أَنَا الْخَيْرُ الَّذِي نُزِّلَ مِنَ السَّمَاءِ یَکَانَ رَا از
 گذشته باز گفتن مقصود نه افسانه است و مقصود آن است که در حال آینده باز بینند
 که خدای تعالی هستی را با کسی گذاشته است و اوست هستی عالم و آدم و عالم بی او
 نیست پس عالم و آدم با او و بندگان او با او هستند و دنیا و اهل دنیا نیستند اما در
 قرآن شریف مثل دنیا و مثل امان باطل که کافران و منافقان می پرستند که الدُّنْیَا
 حَرَامٌ عَلَى أَهْلِ الْآخِرَةِ وَالْآخِرَةُ حَرَامٌ عَلَى أَهْلِ الدُّنْیَا وَهُمَا حَرَامٌ
 عَلَى أَهْلِ اللَّهِ تَعَالَى یعنی حرام گردانیدم دنیا را بر اهل آخرت و آخرت حرام گردانیدم
 بر اهل دنیا و دنیا و آخرت حرام گردانیدم بر اهل الله (ترجمه)

جنت نروم تا رخ زیبات نه بینم فردوس چه کار آید اگر دوست نباشد
 و دنیا را مثل سراب زده اند چنانچه گفته شد (نظم)

چه ماند جهان مگر سراب زبستی او تو چون روی بشتاب
 همه گشتند خلق غره بدو زانکه خورد و بزرگ کودک و شتاب

و سراب نیستی حقائق است اما در او هم مردن است و می نماید که خدا شناسی و خدا
 پرستی آن است که خود را و دانش خود را بکل الوجود از یاد باز برند و خود را و هستی خود را

انسان است و بسبب فراغ از خوف دنیا و آخرت است چنانچه عمر بر اهل دنیا حرام است و بر اهل بهشت حلال و پاک است بقول این آیت که قوله تعالی حَرَّمَ عَلَيْكُمُ الْمَيْتَةَ وَالدَّمَ وَحُمَ الْخَنزِيرِ که مرتبه ناطق است گاه نیز منقسم میشود که حرام است بر اهل تضاد و گاه منقسم می شود که حلال می گردد بر اهل بهشت و وحدت که بختی و داعیان و مأذونان و محلمان و مستحیان اند (نظم)

در مذہب ما باده حلال است ولیکن
 بی روی توای سر و گل اندام حرام است
 اما آیدیم به بیان صراط المستقیم و میزان برنخ بدانکه صراطی است بر روی دوزخ
 کشیده از رموی بار کثیر و از تیغ تیز تر هزار ساله راه سر بالا و هزار ساله راه برابر
 و هزار ساله راه سر نشیب بدانکه حجاب عبارت است از خیر جمیع حسنات و سیئات
 است بدین معنی که قوله تعالی فَمَنْ يَعْمَلْ مِثْقَالَ ذَرَّةٍ خَيْرًا يَرَهُ وَمَنْ
 يَعْمَلْ مِثْقَالَ ذَرَّةٍ شَرًّا يَرَهُ و این همه بشناخت امام زمان حاصل می شود و
 هر کس که بفرموده حاسبوا أنفسکم قبل أن یحاسبوا عمل نموده باشد پیوسته
 بحاسبه افعال و اقوال خود مشغول بوده باشد از زمره یحاسب حساباً یا یسیر باشد
 که قوله تعالی وَالْوَزْنُ يَوْمَئِذٍ الْحَقُّ فَمَنْ ثَقُلَتْ مَوَازِينُهُ فَأُولَئِكَ
 هُمُ الْمُفْلِحُونَ وَمَنْ خَفَّتْ مَوَازِينُهُ فَأُولَئِكَ الَّذِينَ خَسِرُوا أَنفُسَهُمْ
 یعنی وزن کردن اعمال در روز قیامت حق است پس هر کس که گران باشد موازین اعمال
 نیک او پس او از مفلحان باشد و هر کسی که سبک باشد وزن اعمال نیک او او
 از زیان کاران زندگان است و مراد اگر انی اعمال در موازین فعل چند است که نفس فاعل را
 سبب آن فعل نمی کند و اطمینان حاصل شود و از آن فعل در عیش و طرب و رضا در آید

بهشت بوجود ایشان است چنانچه رسول فرموده در حق سلمان إِنَّ الْجَنَّةَ أَشَوْقٌ إِلَى سَلْمَانَ مِنْ سَلْمَانَ إِلَى الْجَنَّةِ یعنی بدوستیکه بهشت مشتاق تر است بسلمان از سلمان بهشت و در شأن این طائفه آمده است که اللَّهُمَّ غَرِّقْنَا مِنْ غَرِقِهَا غَرِّقًا یعنی ایشان را حجره که بالای حجره است و بر وزن حجره هر بهشتی شاخی از درخت طوبی آویزان و حوران و علما و خدمت استاده اند و بهترین بهشتیان را بهشت هزار عله از حور بهشت می پوشانند و کمترین بهشتیان را بهشت دوازده حور بهشت می پوشانند و از چهار حور بهشت که حوی آب حوی شیر و حوی عمل مصفا و حوی خمر است با ایشان آب می دهند و غرض بهشتیان از آن شاخ درخت طوبی است که هر چه مقصود آنهاست حاصل می گردد و خود مقصود است فی الخیار و بهشت جای پر بهر گاران است اهل نار اهل تضاد اند که باحوال متضاده عالم معذب اند و این طائفه اهل دوزخ اند و اشارت باین سه طائفه که فَعْنَهُمْ ظِلْمُ لِنَفْسِهِ وَمِنْهُمْ مُقْتَصِدٌ وَمِنْهُمْ سَائِقٌ بِالْخِطَاۃِ یعنی بعضی از اهل عالم ظالم نفس خود اند چون آدمیان از دوزخ بدار البقا سفر کنند اول سوال منکر و کبیر پیش آید که مَنْ رَبُّكُمْ وَمَا دِينُكُمْ وَمَنْ نَبِيُّكُمْ وَمَنْ اِمَامُكُمْ وَمَا قَبْلُكُمْ وَمَنْ اَخَوَانُكُمْ اگر جواب با صواب از زبان بنده من جاری شود که رب من پروردگار عالمیان است دین من دین پاک حضرت محمد مصطفی است و امام من امام حاضر الوقت است پس دری از درای بهشت بر روی او باز کنند و گردن فعود بالله انگاه بسیر پل صراط برند که هزار ساله راه سر بالا و هزار ساله راه برابر و هزار ساله راه سر نشیب از موی بار کثیره و از تیغ برتر است اگر از عده آنکه مَنْ رَبُّكُمْ برآید فرشته رحمت از دست راست او پیش شده سر پل صراط همچون شاه راه صراط مستقیم

بِحُورِ عِينٍ یعنی صفت گردانیدیم اهل بهشت را بحور عین و چون این مرتبه از دیده نامحرم که اهل تضاد اند پوشیده و مستور است و در قرآن شریف بآن وقف نموده شده که قوله تعالی 'حُورٌ مَّقْصُودَاتٌ فِي الْخِيَا' یعنی حور چندانکه باز داشته شده اند در پرده ها و هر کس که در سیرت ملک باشد بی ملکوت یا در ملکوت باشد بی ملک این مرتبه مشاهده حور العین او را حاصل نمی شود و اشارت باین آیت که قوله تعالی 'لَمْ يَطْمِئِنَّ اَنْفُسٌ قَبْلَهُمْ وَلَا جِئَتْ اِلَيْهِمْ نَرَسِيْدَةٌ' است بحوران بهشت از بهشتیان آدمی و نه جَنّی یعنی اهل ملک و ملکوت راست

در بیان بهشت و درامی بهشت بدانکه بهشت در عالم معقول عبارت است از بقا و دانش و در عالم محسوس عبارت است از لذات پس عبارت باشد از اهل حق و بقا و آن ارباب تاویل اند که حقائق تنزلی را دانسته اند نه اهل لذات که اصحاب جاه و مال اند اهل عالم سه اند سابقان و اهل عین و اهل شمال اما سابقان اهل وحدت اند و کمال

و بعد از آن فوائد متفرقه را یاد کنیم و گوئیم توفیق و قوت خداوند زمان و آن گفته شود که بر زبان بنده خود براند

عبد الله بن عباس رضی الله عنه گوید که آن شجره آدم که از ثمره اش بخورد و برش
 بخورد پوشید شجره علم خیر و شر بود یعنی علی بود و آن ثمره شجره علم باطنش بود که مردم را شاید
 که آن را شجره الخلد گویند و آن برگی که شمر در میانش می پرورد علم ظاهرش که خوش دیگر
 حیوانات را شاید و چون شجره علم خیر و شر مردمی بود شجره الخلد و ملک الایلی
 هم مرد باشد زیرا که خلد و ملک الایلی ثمره شجره تواند بود که خدا را انجا میسند و آن کلمه که
 توبه آدم بتو شش پذیرفتند مردمی باشد بقول این آیت که قوله تعالی 'مَثَلًا
 کَلِمَةً طَيِّبَةً كَشَجَرَةٍ طَيِّبَةٍ أَصْلُهَا ثَابِتٌ وَفَرْعُهَا فِي السَّمَاءِ' ^{طه}
 و در عالم دین درخت طوبی اشارت است بذات امام حق جل و ذره که پر تو نور معرفت او در
 وجود و بهر بهشتی که از بندگان عارف و سر بر میزند و هر چه بندگان او در عالم دین و عالم آخرت
 خود تمام کنند در زمان مهیا گردد و چنانچه خدای تعالی گفته اند که قوله تعالی 'فَجَعَلْنَاهُ
 أَجْكَارًا عُرْبًا' یعنی گفت خدای تعالی گردانیدیم ما حوران را و دختران را بکروار پستان
 بدانکه مشهور چنان است که درخت طوبی درختی است در بهشت که در غره بهشت شاخی از
 آن آویزان و هر چیزی که بهشتیان از روزگسند در زمان از آن درخت پیدا شود این
 بیان اشارت بر تبه اهل تأیید که علم و قدرت و ارادت ایشان هر سه یکست بر این وجه
 هر چه ارادت اهل تأیید بآن تعلق گردد و بر بهت علم ایشان در زمان آن خیر موجود گردد و مجموع
 اهل بهشت را از تأیید نصیبی هست کنایت بآن نموده شده که در حجه بهر بهشتی شاخی از
 درخت طوبی در روزن او آویزان و اشارت بدین معنی که قوله تعالی 'وَأَوْصَفْنَا' ^{طه}

شد پس همان نور در عالم است و امر مجده او بر آدم فرض عین و عین فرض است که آدم
دور خود را بداند و بشناسد تا ناجی و رستگار باشد

و باز فرمود و گفت که قال النبی علیه السلام کُنتُ نَبِيًّا وَاَدْمُ رَبِّیْنِ
الماء والطین یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که پیش از عالم و آدم نور نبوت و ولایت
بچندین هزار سال و قرن با من در پس پرده لاریب بودند خواستم که خود را در عالم هویدا
کنم بدین صورت و سیرت و صفت اظهار نمودم

این است دین راست خدای تعالی در حدیث اول و در کنایت است از امام معنی این
آیت این است که بشناس ای ماطق امام و خدای خود را تا در دین راست حاصل شود و
این دین راست فطرت خداست یعنی حد و دعلوی که آدمیان بحد و دعلوی زنده اند یعنی حد و
دین و عارفان ایشان هم بر آن فطرت آمده اند یعنی این مردمان همان آثار حد و دعلوی اند که
تشخیص ایشان تعیین یافته و چون نقاب شخص برگرفته شود همان ماند که بوده باشد
چنانکه در قرآن شریف آمده که قوله تعالی کُلُّ شَیْءٍ هَالِكٌ إِلَّا وَجْهَهُ
یعنی هر چیزی که هست فانی است الا روی آن چیزی که امام است و بدین معنی اشارت
است بدین آیت که قوله تعالی کُلُّ شَیْءٍ یَرْجِعُ إِلَىٰ اَصْلِهِ یعنی بازگشت همه
چیزها باصل اوست (ترجمه)

باز گردد باصل خود همه چیز ز رصفانی و نقوه و ارزیز
و بحکم این آیت که قوله تعالی اَللّٰهُ یَبْدُو الْخَلْقَ ثُمَّ یُعِیدُهُ ثُمَّ یَحْیِیْهِ
و یُمِیتُهُ یعنی خدای تعالی پدید گرداند خلق را پس باز گرداند ایشان را بسوی خود
ختم این نکته چند که در آفاق و انفس کریم

ائمه در عصر هفت باشد، لواحق دوازده، بیت و هشت باشد، لا اله الا الله که میرا
 است دوازده حرف، محمد رسول الله دوازده حرف، امیر المؤمنین دوازده حرف، علی
 ابن ابی طالب دوازده حرف، محمد بن اسماعیل دوازده حرف، همچنین نام بزرگوار قائم
 خداوندشده هزار عالم بزرگوار سجود و التسبیح مولانا مستنصر باشد دوازده حرف، و نام
 بزرگوارش که بآن همه موجودات زنده اند چنانچه خدای تعالی فرموده که خَالِقُ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ
 وَ رَازِقُ كُلِّ حَيٍّ وَ جَاعِلُ دَیْرِ فَرَمُودِهِ کَ حَيٍّ لَا یَمُوتُ کَرِیمٌ لَا یَزَالُ التَّوَرَّ
 فِی السَّمَاءِ وَ فِی الْأَرْضِ وَ فِی الْبَشَرِ چنانچه در قرآن شریف خطاب بناطق
 آمده که قوله تعالی، فَأَقِمْ وَجْهَكَ لِلدِّینِ حَنِيفًا فِطْرَةَ اللَّهِ الَّتِی
 فَطَرَ النَّاسَ عَلَیْهَا لَا تَبْدِيلَ لِخَلْقِ اللَّهِ ذَٰلِكَ الدِّینُ الْقَیِّمُ یعنی
 که بپای واری محمد روی خود را از برای دین نیکو، و آن دین سیفِ فطرت خداست که
 آدمیان را در آن فطرت آفریده است و نیست تبدیل مطلق خدای را، دلیل که قوله
 تعالی، خَلَقَ آدَمَ عَلَی صُورَتِهِ الرَّحْمَنِ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که خلق کردیم
 آدم را بصورت و صفت خاص رحمانی خود که قوله تعالی، وَ نَفَخَ فِیهِ مِنْ رُوحِهِ
 یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که دمیدم نفخ روح خود را در این قالب آدم، و باز خبر داده که قوله تعالی
 وَ إِذْ قُلْنَا لِلْمَلَائِكَةِ اسْجُدُوا لِآدَمَ فَسَجَدُوا إِلَّا إِبْلِيسَ أَبَى وَ اسْتَكْبَرَ
 وَ كَانَ مِنَ الْكَافِرِينَ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که جمیع فرشتگان و ملائکتان را که سجده
 کنید این آدم را آنگاه جمیع فرشتگان و ملائکتان سجده کردند الا ابلیس که استکبار
 نمود و گفت سجده مر خدای راست آدم از خاک است و خاک ظلمت است و من از آتش
 و آتش از نور است، چون نافرمانی کرد طوق لعنت در گردن او افتاد و رانده ازل و ابد

عاقله و واهمه و هفت قوت کارفرمای اول جاذبه و ماسکه و باضمه و دافعه و غافیه و
نامیه و مولده و هفت طور بوجود می آید ساله و طین و نطفه و علقه و مضغه و لحم و عظام
خَلَقْنَاهُ آخِرَةً و استقامت مجموع است و در عمر خود هفت طور گردد و ضیع و جبین
و صبی و غلام و شاب و کهل و شیخ و اینها هفت هفت است

و محمد رسول الله نیز هفت کلمه است و لا اله الا الله نیز هفت مقطع دارد و قرآن نیز
هفت قسمت است و هفت سوره طویل در آنجا است و هفت جامیم و هفت آیت است
و بسم الله نیز هفت حرف است

و صاحب احکام هفت اندوشتش ادوار شریع اند آدم و نوح و ابراهیم و موسی و
عیسی و محمد رسول الله و یکی از آن قائم است لَئِذْ كَرِهَ الْبُحُورُ و السَّبْجُ و اوصیا نیز هفت
اند شیث و سام و اسماعیل و یارون و شمعون و مولانا علی علیه السلام و در حدیث
می آید که قال النبی علیه السلام خَلَقْتُم مِّن سَبْعٍ وَ زَقَمْتُم مِّن سَبْعٍ
فَسَبَّحُوا اللَّهَ عَلَى سَبْعٍ

و کل مفره با هفت است و کل رنگها هفت است و لا اله الا الله نیز است که همه
احکام باور است شود اصل همه علم حروف است

پس گویم این یک کلمه توحید و حکم دارد نفی و اثبات و سه جوهر است لا اله الا الله
چهار کلمه است لا اله الا الله هفت مقطع دارد و لا اله الا الله دوازده حرف
است مجموع بیت و هشت باشد

عالم دین را نیز بر این میزان یا قلم ناطق و اساس ناطق تنزیل را و اساس ناطق
را سه درجه بنمایند مستغنی و مأذونی و معطی چهار درجه عطائی باشد لاحق و حجت اساین و

... مولانا همیشه بندگان را توفیق طاعت دین کرامت کند

و این نیرشتم از تأویلات قرآن شریف گفته شد تا این رساله از آن خالی نباشد
 اندیم بر سر وضع این رساله بر هفت باب گوئیم چون نظر در دین حق و اساس و ناطق
 کردیم حدود آن را بر هفت مرتبه یا تقسیم از امام و باب و اساس و مستحب و چون نظر
 در آفاق و انفس کردیم کلیات آن بر هفت مرتبه یا تقسیم و در قرآن شریف می آید که قوله
 تعالیٰ سَنُرِيهِمْ آيَاتِنَا فِي الْآفَاقِ وَفِي أَنْفُسِهِمْ لَعْنَةُ الْإِثْمَانِ یعنی بنمایم ایشان را
 مراتب حدود دین در آفاق و انفس شمه از آن بیان کنم

اولاً گوئیم عدد هفت حداقل عدد کامل است و معنی کامل آن است که مشتمل باشد
 بر عددی که کامل است در فردیت یعنی مرتبه جمع افراد داشته باشد و آن عدد بر سه مرتبه
 است یعنی ناطق و اساس و باب بر عدد یک کامل باشد و در زوجیت یعنی مرتبه ازواج
 داشته باشد و او عدد چهار است چهار و سه هفت باشد و موجودات آفاق و انفس
 را بر این میزان می یابیم و یک میزان دیگری است هشت هم از هفت جدای شود چه از یکی
 تا که بشمارند که ولایت است هفت می شود و یک میزان دیگر دوازده است و آن از
 چهار و سه که هفت است پیدای می شود پس اعداد هفت باشد

گوئیم هفت آسمان است که کهکب بسیار هفت گانه دارد و هفت زمین است و هفت
 دریاست و هفت اقلیم است و هفت باد و هفت ماه است و هفت روز هفته است و اینها
 هفت هفت است و انسان را هفت عضو است دو دست و دو پای و زانو و رومی و دماغ
 و دل و جگر و زهره و شش و سپرز و گرده و بوجه دیگر موی و پوست و گوشت و استخوان و
 رگ و پیه و خون و هفت قوت بدرک اول سامعه و باصره و ذائقه و شامه و نامیه و

وَالَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا أُولَٰئِكَ هُمُ الطَّاغُوتُ يُخْرِجُونَهُمْ مِنَ النُّورِ إِلَى الظُّلُمَاتِ
 یعنی طاغوت از طغیان است و آن سر باز کشیدن است از امر خداي تعالی که امان حق اند
 که قوله تعالی 'أَوْ مَن كَانَ مَيِّتًا فَأُحْيَيْنَاهُ' یعنی مردی که جل رازنده بعلم دین گردید
 که قوله تعالی 'وَأَعْبُدْ رَبَّكَ حَتَّىٰ يَأْتِيَكَ الْيَقِينُ' یعنی تکلیف شرعی تا آن
 زمان است که مردیقین نرسیده باشد که قوله تعالی 'وَلَا يُبْدِيَنَّ زِينَتَهُنَّ إِلَّا
 لِبُعُولَتِهِنَّ أَوْ آبَائِهِنَّ أَوْ آبَاءِ بُعُولَتِهِنَّ' یعنی زمانی که مستعملان اند ظاهر نگردانند این
 مسئله را معلمان چون مردان اند و مستعملان چون زنان و ظاهر نگردانند که در دین و دعوت
 بخاطر ایشان آید که بر شوهران ایشان که معلمان اند که قوله تعالی 'لَا تَقْتُلُوا الصَّيْدَ
 وَأَنْتُمْ حُرُمٌ' یعنی بی دستور و بی ارشاد دعوت حق نباید کرد و مار و کژدم و شعبان
 ضرر رساننده را توان کشت یعنی با اهل مباحثه مقاتله توان کرد و یا جوج و یا جوج که ضربه
 وین اند که ابراهیم خلیل الرحمن ایشان را خورد و مرد دگر و اهل ظاهر بودند و آنکه تیر بر
 دوش بزرگترین ایشان نهاد آنکه بحجت ایشان ایشان را باطل کرد که قوله
 تعالی 'إِنَّ اللَّهَ يَأْمُرُ بِالْعَدْلِ وَالْإِحْسَانِ' یعنی مراد بعدل مرتبه پیغمبر است
 چون شریعت عدل است و پیغمبر مراد باحسان مرتبه وصی است که مولانا علی است
 علیه السلام چه احسان آن است که بعضی را بعبط ممتاز کند و این مرتبه وصی است که همیشه
 بوده است و خواهد بود که قوله تعالی 'هُوَ الْأَوَّلُ وَالْآخِرُ وَالظَّاهِرُ
 وَالْبَاطِنُ وَهُوَ بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ عَلِيمٌ' که بعضی را بعبط تأویل ممتاز گردانند و در حد
 می آید که قال النبی علیه السلام 'الْإِحْسَانُ إِنْ تَعَبَّدَ اللَّهُ كَأَنَّكَ
 تَرَاهُ' و مولانا علی علیه السلام می فرماید که 'لَمْ أَعْبُدْ رَبًّا لَمْ أَرَاهُ وَيُنْهَى عَنِ الْفَحْشَاءِ

 أَبْصَارِهِمْ غِشَاوَةٌ' یعنی مهر کرد خدای تعالی بر دل و گوش و چشمهای اهل ظاهر را که راه
 بحقیقت نبرده اند که قوله تعالى 'يُؤْمِنُونَ بِالْجَبَّتِ وَالطَّاغُوتِ' یعنی ایمان
 آوردند پیشوایانی که ایشان را از راه بنده اند و گمراه کنند بقول این آیت که قوله
 تعالى 'صُمُّ بُكْمٌ عُمْيٌ فَهُمْ لَا يَبْصِرُونَ' و امثال اینها در شأن امان است
 که از امانان حق کور و کر شدند و با امانان باطل ایمان آوردند و چشم و دل ایشان مهر
 شد و در شأن امانان حق است که قوله تعالى 'وَلِيَ الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا يُخْرِجُهُمْ

کردیم که خلافت حقّ و صبی بود حرام شد بر ایشان روزیهای پاک یعنی تاویل قرآن که پاک
 است و تاویل قرآن علی علیه السلام راست که قرآن تمام ارث اوست و از شبهه ظاهر
 و تصرف غصب که اهل ظاهر را باشد و نیز حرام شد بر هر آنکه بر ظاهر شریعت استاده و
 از اسرار شریعت و رفع تکالیف از نشان این آیت که قوله تعالیٰ 'الْيَوْمَ أُحِلَّ لَكُمْ
 الطَّيِّبَاتُ' یعنی روز عبادت از زمانیت که آفتاب ظاهر باشد و مراد بر روز آفتاب الهی است
 یعنی هر که با آفتاب امامت رسید و بدو بنیاد طیبات بر او حلال شد بقول
 این آیت که قوله تعالیٰ 'مَنْ حَرَمَ زِينَةَ اللَّهِ الَّتِي أَخْرَجَ لِعِبَادِهِ وَالطَّيِّبَاتِ
 مِنَ الرِّزْقِ' یعنی گوی محمد که حرام کرده شد بسبیل استفهام بر اهل طاعت و عبادت و
 نماز و درست نیست بر ایشان و حرام است زینت و زیورهای که خدا می آفریند برای بندگانش
 خود همیا کرده است زیورهای پاک را بقول این آیت که قوله تعالیٰ 'قُلْ هُوَ لِلَّذِينَ
 آمَنُوا هُدًى وَشِفَاءٌ' یعنی آیتهای قرآنند که مؤمنان را راه راست و شفا است و این خطا
 و ذلت است بآن طائفه ظاهر که گویند قرآن را تاویل نشاید کرد و روزیهای پاک آن عالم
 حقیقت است که خالی از آمیزش شبهه و گمراهی است و حلال است بر آنکه امام وقت خود را
 بر تبه خود بدانند و صد و ده علوی را بشناسند بدین معنی که قوله تعالیٰ 'وَلَا تَأْخُذْ بَعِثَةِ

 عهد غدیر خم را یعنی اشارت کنند بقاء مایم قیامت و بر پای دارند وصی خود را که صاحب تاویل
 یوم اول و آخر است که قوله تعالیٰ 'إِذَا جَاءَ نَصْرُ اللَّهِ وَالْفَتْحُ وَرَأَيْتَ الْمُسْلِمِينَ
 بَخَّانًا' یعنی چون ظهور قائم قیامت باشد بسین که گروه بدین حق درمی آیند و تو استغفار

[illegible]

نشاید و ارنماز یعنی دعوت کردن تا از آن شک و شبهه بیرون نیاید و استن را خود حیض نباشد
یعنی هر که علم حقیقت برگرفت از شک و شبهت بیرون آمد و زن بزرگ سال را حیض نباشد
یعنی چون در درجه قبول دیرینه شد از شک و شبهت باز رست و معنی استحاضه آنکه تا مادامیکه
او را شک پیش آید در هر سخن با معتمد دین باز گردد و از معتمدان باز پرسد

و معنی خواب غافل بودن است از علم دین بعد از آنکه باور سیده چه غفلت کلی مردن است
و خواب مانند مرگ است اما حقیقه مرگ نیست یعنی در دین و دعوت که زندگی است در آمده
بخواب غفلت رفته و از خواب بیدار گشتن فکر کردن طهارت بعد از خواب جوع با علم دین کردن
و معنی لباس و برتر پوشیدن برتر و عمد از استحقاق پوشیده داشتن و معنی سجده سهواً آنکه
اگر نادون یا داعی را سود در میان افتد رجوع با علم باطن با حجت باید کرد چه سجده دلیل باطن و
حجت است و معنی سفر آنکه درجات تعلیم برود و معنی نکاح در عهد معتمد درآمدن و نقطه امرار آن
قبول کردن یعنی قبول سخن دعوت و معنی طلاق بیزاری از اناهل یعنی کسی که مستحق سخن دین
نباشد و معنی مردن آنکه از پائیه معرفت و حقیقت بفریفت و معنی نماز جنازه آنکه چون معتمد را
جمل پیدا شود بمیرد یا بدعوت باطل روح حقیقت او را بکشند و معتمد او را بدعوت علم حقیقت
یاری دهد اگر قبول کرد بنفوس عیسوی زنده شد اگر نه در خاک جمل علم ظاهر دفن کنند و بپوسد
و در این رساله این مقدار شمه بود از تأویلات شریع و ظاهر قرآن هم از اینجا تمام آن باید
جست و شمه نیز از تأویلات قرآن اینجا بدو خواهیم کرد که قوله تعالی فِي ظُلُمٍ مِنَ الَّذِينَ
هَادُوا وَ آخَرُ مِنَّا عَلَيْهِمُ ظُلُمَاتٌ مِنَ الْوُزْنِ یعنی ظلم کرده بودند آنان که راه یافته بودند
حرام برایشان کردیم روزیهای پاک را پس گویم در تأویل اینکه آنانکه به پیغمبر راه یافته بودند
یعنی امر خلافت وصی را بر غیر قرار داده اند چه معنی ظلم چیز نیست غیر محل خود و در باب پیشتر پیدا

مرتبه ولایت است زیرا که حضرت رسالت پناه را هم مرتبه نبوت و هم مرتبه ولایت است؛ اما مرتبه ولایت خفی و مرتبه نبوت جلی و هویدا؛ و مرتبه ولایت افضل بر مرتبه نبوت است پس ولایت علی بر نبوت نبی غالب است چنانکه ولایت امیر همان ولایت نبی است که خود آن حضرت فرموده اند که قال النبی علیه السلام لی مع الله وقت لا یسغ فیهِ إلا ملکٌ مقربٌ و نبیٌّ مرسَلٌ یعنی مرا با خدا وقت است که در آن وقت گنجیدگر ملک مقرب که جبرئیل باشد یا نبی مرسل که وجود او باشد که مرتبه نبوت است لکن از مرتبه ولایت حضرت رسالت است

پس آن حضرت هر چه گفته باشند ظاهر اشکالی از آن مقام که فاء فی الله و بقاء بالله است؛ و دیگر فرموده حضرت رسالت پناه علیه السلام است که أنا نُقْطَةُ تَحْتَ الْبَاءِ وَأَنَا الْكِتَابُ الْمَسْطُورُ؛ و دیگر آنکه الْعِلْمُ نُقْطَةٌ كَثَرَهَا الْجَاهِلُونَ یعنی گفت رسول علیه السلام که علم یک نقطه نیست که آن را نقطه تحت بای بسم الله گفته اند و جابلان آن را بسیار کرده اند و وجود او که نقطه باشد مقرر است که جمیع حروف در تحت نقطه مندرج است؛ چون گفته اند که علم نقطه نیست معنی آن باشد که وجود من محض علم است پس جمیع انبیاء که کتاب با ایشان آمده و جمیع کتاب آسمانی از این حروف خالی نیست؛ و این جزو از این نقطه خالی نبود پس نقطه در همه ساری و جاری باشد؛ و حضرت رسالت پناه فرموده که قال النبی علیه السلام یَا عَلِیُّ کُنْتَ مَعَ الْأَنْبِیَاءِ سِرًّا وَحَضَرَ مَعِی جَهْرًا یعنی که یا علی سِرِّ خدا توئی و سِرِّ خدا در منظر محمد ظهور یافت (رباعی)

چون ذات علیست اصل ترکیب زویافت سخن تمام ترتیب
 و دیگر آنکه حق تعالی فرموده است در قصه موسی که چون موسی نزدیک آتش رفت
 آتش گفت که اِنِّی اَنَا اللّٰهُ قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰی فَلَمَّا اَتَاهَا نُودِيَ يَا مُوسٰی
 اِنِّی اَنَا رَبُّكَ فَاخْلَعْ نَعْلَیْكَ یعنی اِی موسی نزدیک آمدی که منم پروردگار تو و
 وقتی که آتش نزد و کوه طور سوخت و اِنِّی اَنَا اللّٰهُ رَبُّ الْعَالَمِیْنَ از او برآمد
 پس حقیقت و منظری که وجود او نور حق باشد بطریق اولی بموجب آیهائی که در
 قرآن مذکور است برآید با وجود آنکه حضرت رسالت پناه فرموده اند که قال النّبی علیہ
 السّلام کُنْتُ اَنَا وَ عَلِیُّ نُورًا بَيْنَ يَدَيِ اللّٰهِ تَعَالٰی قَبْلَ اَنْ يَخْلُقَ اٰدَمَ
 بِاَرْبَعَةِ عَشَرَ اَلْفَ عَامٍ فَلَمَّا خَلَقَ اللّٰهُ اٰدَمَ نَقَلَ ذٰلِكَ النُّوْرَ اِلَى اَصْلِهِ
 فَلَمْ يَزَلْ يَنْقَلِبُهُ عَنْ صُلْبِ اِلَى صُلْبِ حَتّٰی قَرَنِي صُلْبِ عَبْدِ الْمَطْلَبِ

 علی از منت و من از علی و در حدیث دیگر آمده است که قال النّبی علیہ السّلام
 اَنَا وَ عَلِيٌّ مِنْ نُورٍ وَّاحِدٍ و در قرآن شریف آمده است اللّٰهُ نُورُ السَّمٰوٰتِ
 وَ الْاَرْضِ مِثْلُ نُوْرِهِ كَمِثْكَوَةٍ فِيْهَا مِصْبَاحٌ پس چون حق تعالی نور آسمان

نظم ظاهر شده و بر همین معنی اولیاء الله فرموده اند که اَنَا الْقُرْآنُ وَالسَّبْعُ الْمَثَانِ وَ
 رُوحُ الرُّوحِ أَرْوَاحُ الْأَدَانِ یعنی امیر المؤمنین امام اثنیقین در این باب چنین فرموده که
 منم قرآن و السبع الثانی و روح الروح و حضرت رسالت پناه فرموده اند که یا علی
 كُنْتَ مَعَ الْأَنْبِيَاءِ سِرًّا وَمَعِيَ جَهْدًا یعنی ای علی با همه انبیاء در سر بودی و بمن
 آشکارا شدی قال النبی علیه السلام فَأَنْتَ كِتَابُ اللَّهِ تَعَالَى وَتَوَسِّرْهُ لِي
 که ستر ترا کس نداند بخیر خدای تعالی و ستر خدا کلام خداست که آن تمامی در شان من تو
 فرو داده است قال النبی علیه السلام وَجَمِيعُ سِرِّ اللَّهِ تَعَالَى إِلَى آخِرِهِ
 یعنی جمیع اسرار خدا در کتابهای آسمانی است و آن ستر منی که در کتاب آسمانی است در تورات
 و انجیل و زبور و قرآن باشد و هر چه در قرآن است در سوره فاتحه الکتاب است و آنچه
 در فاتحه است در بسم الله است و آنچه در بسم الله است در بای بسم الله است و آنچه در بای بسم الله است در نقطه تحت بابت پس معلوم شد که علیست آن نقطه و
 اسرار خدا و اسرار کتابهای آسمانی و جمیع انبیاء و کتابهای آسمانی همراه بوده است
 پس همه ستر کتابهای آسمانی همراه او باشد چون این کتابهای آسمانی بخضرت رسالت
 پناه علیه السلام ختم شد از آن رو ستر او بخضرت امیر ختم شد و هر که بتنزیل آن کتابها
 ماند گمبوتر سا و یهود و ارمی وجود و هند و منافق مردود و مرد شدند و از زمره المنافقین

إِذَا أَرَادَ شَيْئًا أَنْ يَقُولَ لَهُ كُنْ فَيَكُونُ^۱ - قَوْلُنَا إِيحَادُ شَيْئٍ إِذَا أُيْحِدَ شَيْءٌ^۲
متعلق یعنی می شود آنچه خدای تعالی بخواند و بظاهر می آید و دیگر فرموده یُحْيِ الْحَقَّ بِكَلِمَاتِهِ^۳
یعنی می گرداند حق تعالی حق را بکلمات خود و باطل می گرداند باطل را بکلمه خود چون این معنی
ثبوت رسید که همه اشیا در حکم کلام صامت حق است و در تحت تصرف اوست بحکم
این آیت که قوله تعالی وَالشَّمْسُ وَالْقَمَرُ وَالنُّجُومُ مُسَخَّرَاتٌ بِأَمْرِ^۴ یعنی
آفتاب و ماه و ستارگان مسخراند بامر خدا و امام زمان که اَنَا أَمْرُ اللَّهِ وَالرُّوحُ^۵ قال
اللَّهُ تَعَالَى يُسْأَلُونَكَ عَنِ الرُّوحِ قُلِ الرُّوحُ مِنْ أَمْرِ رَبِّي^۶ یعنی ای محمد ترا
چون پرسند از حقیقت روح بگو روح از امر پروردگار من است و امر خداست که گفته کن
بامر او پیداشده است پس نفسی که خود را بحسب شود و تجلی و تحقیق کلام باطن دیده باشد
او را رسد گفتن که اَنَا أَوَّلُ وَالْآخِرُ وَالظَّاهِرُ وَالْبَاطِنُ وَأَنَا بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ عَلِيمٌ^۷
پس چون امیر اعدای تعالی گفت که این گفته کن است گفتیم که هر چه صادر می شود پس
راست باشد این گفته که امیر گفته است که اَنَا مُصَوِّرُ فِي الْأَرْحَامِ^۸ یعنی منم نقش کننده در
رحم مادر که هر نفسی که بر تنه وجود و بر صفحه هر موجودی بی وجود می آید از این کلمه بیرون میست

اللہ و محمد و علی یکٹ جو رند در دیدہٴ احوالان سہ تن نمودند
و این حال روشن است مثلاً ہر کجا آہن در آتش برود انگشت از اطراف بروی ریختہ و
بدم دم اورانفخہ شدید متصرف گردد آہن بقاربت و مقاربت آتش و مجاورت اواز
ظلمت و کثافت و کدورت و ضلالت اول خلاص یابد و بر تیرہ رسد کہ ہر صفت در آتش
اعتبار توان کرد از شعل و احراق کہ علت غائی آتش است در او موجود گردد و و پختن بندہ
کہ در مرتبہ محبوب حق آید بقضای کہ مذکور شدہ است دست و پا و سمع و بصر عبدی نمیشود
پس ہر چہ از او صادر می شود از افعال و صفات حق باشد چنانکہ حضرت رسالت پناہ
علیہ السلام فرمودہ کہ قوله تعالیٰ و ما رمیت اذ رمیت و لکن اللہ رمی
یعنی نینداختی تو ای محمد آن ہنگامی کہ تو انداختی و لیکن خدا انداخت اگرچہ آن انداختن فعل
ظاہر از حضرت رسالت پناہ بود اما بحقیقت از آن حق است

پس حضرت رسالت پناہ در حق حضرت امیر المؤمنین علی کرم اللہ وجہہ در این حدیث
اثبات کردہ کہ قال النبی علیہ السلام یحب اللہ تعالیٰ و رسولہ یعنی دوست
می دارد او را خدا و رسول خدا چون حق تعالیٰ او را دوست و محبوب گفتہ باشد کہ اجماع چون چہ باشد
و در حدیث دیگر آمدہ کہ قال النبی علیہ السلام و علی ممدوح فی ذات

سخن گویندہ حق است زیرا کہ کلام از غایت اتحاد و عنیت کہ دار گو یا کہ ستودہ بذات
حق تعالیٰ شدہ از وحدانیت و چون پیغمبر علیہ السلام او را کلام حق گفتہ باشد و حق تعالیٰ

 می شود که همیشه بنده من تقرب بمن می جوید بنوافل که آن زیادتی عبادت و طاعت است
 بر فرائض مکتوبه تا بآن غایت که من دوست می گیرم او را همین که دوست گرفتم او را بسمع
 او می شنوم که بمن می شنود و بصر او می بینم که بمن می بیند و بدست او می گیرم که بمن می گیرد
 و حاصل قصه آن باشد که انسان عبارت است از اعضا و قوی اعضا همچون

غیر تو کس نیست سخن گو بختی	در دو جهان کس بزبان همه
گرچه فرستاد رسول آن خدا	جز تو نبود روح در روان همه
با همه همراه تو بودی و بود	از تو نور دل و جان همه

قوله تعالى: فَأَقِيمُوا الصَّلَاةَ وَآتُوا الزَّكَاةَ وَأَقْرِضُوا اللَّهَ قَرْضًا حَسَنًا
 چنانچه گفته شده در دنیا هزار در آخرت بود که قرض حسنه است و دست گیری بهم دینان و
 برادران دین خود را قرض عین دانید و امداد دریغ مدارید که ثواب بسیار است و صفای
 باطن مؤمنین در کم خوردن و کم گفتن و کم خفتن است و بجال دنیوی بر یکدیگر تفاخر نکنید
 و یکدیگر را با فلاس طعن فرمید که این شیوه منافقان و جاهلان است و از خدا طلب
 نائید و سلامتی دین و خدا شناسی طلبید

و مراد از مؤمنی آنست که دیگری از او در مؤمنی ریشک برد که چرامن همچنین نباشم
 و بر یکدیگر گریستم و شتر ارت کنید و بغض را در دل راه مدهید که بغض و حسد و ظلم مؤمن از
 دین بر آورد و کینه یکدیگر را از دل بر آرد که در سینه مؤمن کینه راست نباید زیرا که سینه
 مؤمن خانه خداست قال النبی علیه السلام المؤمن عرش الله تعالى

این صورت بعینه آن صورت اسحاق پیغمبر و اسماعیل پیغمبر است که چندین از فرزندان اسحاق
 نابود کردند اما آخر نبوت و امامت بفرزندان اسماعیل قرار گرفت اکنون احوالی جایی
 باید گذاشت و اینها را همه یکی باید دانست و مخالف یکدیگر نیستند

بدانکه طاعت و اقامت امام زمان واجب است بهر چه فرماید سابق بوده باشی و این
 امامت پیش از زمان عالم و آدم و مکان بوده اما از ابراهیم صلوات الله علیه لازم و واجب
 شد و در نسل او قرار گرفت بیل قول خدای تعالی یا ای الله اصفی آدم و نوح و
 آل ابراهیم و آل عمران علی العالمین یعنی بدستی که گزیدیم آدم و نوح را و
 آل عمران را که مراد از آل عمران حضرت ابوطالب است که بر هر دوره ذریه بعضیها
 من بعضی تا یوم القیامه و درین عمرت است و این امام گاهی ظاهری شود در امامت
 از نص صریح و یا خفی پس لازم است که امام کی از فرزندانش را ولی عهد خود سازد و
 یا آنکه صریح بگوید که امام بعد از من فلان خواهد بود و نص خفی آن بود که خبری که خصوصیت
 امامت داشته باشد یکی از فرزندان او باشد یا آنکه با ساس بگوید و یا آنکه
 یکی از حجتان و داعیان که محل اعتبار ایشان صریح است بگوید و این امامان از مقربان
 و محرابان و خاصان خدای تعالی اند و شیعیان و پیروان از اصحاب یمنین اند و این حسن
 است بحکم این حدیث نبوی مَنْ سَنَّ سُنَّةَ حَسَنَةٍ فَلَهُ أَجْرُهَا وَأَجْرُ
 عَظِيمٍ یعنی هر که بیاورد مردمان را یک سنت حسن پس هر آینه من مراد را بیاوردم دو
 برابر آن تا با آخر آن کسی که عمل بآن اجر حسن کرده باشند

پس هر کی حجت و داعی و مأذون را لازم است که در دعوت مبالغه داشته باشند
 هر یک بقدر خود بمرتبه که گفته اند که اگر موری در سوراخی باشد و او استعداد دعوت باشد

اندیم به بیان امام مستودع و امام مستقر، گویم فرق میان این دو مرتبه نیست الا
 در وصایت چون امام حسن و امام حسین و امام مستودع هم یکی از فرزندان امام باشند از آن
 همه بزرگتر و براسرار امامت واقف و در زمان خود افضل همه خلق بود و لیکن نسل امامت
 در او نباشد و امامان از نسل او نباشند و از او سادات بماند زیرا که امام مستقر آن بود
 که همه صفات امامت را داشته باشد و نسل امامت در او بود و امام بعد از حضرت
 امیر المؤمنین علی کرم الله وجهه امام حسن بود علیه السلام و او امام مستودع بود و بعد از او
 امام حسین بود علیه السلام و او امام مستقر بود و بعد از او امام زین العابدین بود و بعد از او
 امام محمد باقر بود و بعد از او امام جعفر صادق بود و بعد از او امام موسی کاظم بود چنانچه امام حسن
 علیه السلام نقض در او نبود و بعد از او امام اسماعیل بود و از ارباب اطلاق بود و نظرش
 بر منظور مطلق گشوده بود و با اهل شرع اتفاق نمی نمودند و این را در حقیقت قصوری نباشد
 چنانچه در قرآن شریف آمده که قوله تعالی 'وَمَآ مِنْ دَابَّةٍ فِی الْاَرْضِ اِلَّا عَلٰی
 اللّٰهِ رِزْقُهَا وَیَعْلَمُ مُسْتَقَرَّهَا وَمُسْتَوْدَعَهَا کُلٌّ فِی کِتَابٍ مُّبِیْنٍ' بنا بر آن
 اند که امام اسماعیل چون نمیدانست که استقرار امامت در فرزندان او بود رضای حق امامت
 امام موسی کاظم داد و ایشان مخالف یکدیگر نبودند و این پوشیده نیست که در کتاب وضه
 التسليم دلیل آنکه در محلی که امام موسی کاظم در جبل خلفای بغداد بود مخالفان با وی گفتند که
 امام اسماعیل در حق تو قصد می کند و او گفت چرا دروغ می گوئید و انقض کرده خدا و رسول
 است بدین دلیل که قوله تعالی 'ذَرِیَّةٌ بَعْضُهَا مِنْ بَعْضٍ وَاللّٰهُ سَمِیعٌ عَلِیْمٌ'
 و در حق اسماعیل دعا کرد و گفت خداوند فرزندان مرا از فرزندان امام اسماعیل محروم گردان
 و این در کتاب عمده الطالب که از کتب معتبره اولاد پیغمبر است واضح و هویدا است و

وصی عیسی مولانا شمعون الصنی بود و وصی حضرت محمد مصطفی صلی الله علیه و آله و سلم حضرت

 ظاهر از حجت و داعیان باشد یَکُونُ لِلتَّائِسِ عَلَیْکُمْ حُجَّةٌ بَعْدَ الرَّسُولِ و شاید
 که امام در زمان ظهور حجت را نیز امر بدعوت فرماید و آمانشاید که امام و حجت هر دو مستور
 باشند و در قیامت قیامت که کشف کلی باشد حجاب ظاهر و باطن از پیش نظر
 خلق برداشته شود و نه حجت را ظهور باشد و نه غیر او را و وجود همه مولانا قائم قیامت
 باشد و لیکن در کثر الغرائب مشهور است که انبیائی بحق و اولیائی برحق بحکم خدای تعالی
 در عالم بوده اند و متوید و مأمور امحق تعالی بوده اند و من عین الله بوده اند و وجود
 ارسال ایشان بر خدای واجب بود و عالم فی نبوت و ولایت نمی توانست انتظام گرفت
 بدلیل آنکه افعال بندگان اگر کردنی و جائز بودی آنها موجب فساد عالم شدی و لازم
 آمدی که خون و زنا و همه کبائر بکلی منقطع گردد و مردم بر یکدیگر جائز بودی زیرا که این از جمله
 افعال اند چون همه افعال جائز بودی اینها نیز جائز بودی و اگر همه ناکردنی و ممنوع
 بودی زندگانی میسر نبود و این هر دو وجه محال و ممنوع پس لازم آمد که گوئیم که
 بعضی از افعال جائز بودی و بعضی ممنوع و این که کدام فعل جائز است و کدام ممنوع

أَلَا قَوْمٌ أَفْقَدَ قَامَتِ الْقِيَامَةُ وَلَا تَمُوتُ فِي انتِظَارِ الْعَلَامَةِ هَذَا

بگسترانیدیم چنانکه در قرآن شریف می آید که قوله تعالی 'يَوْمَ تُبَدَّلُ الْأَرْضُ غَيْرَ الْأَرْضِ وَالسَّمَوَاتُ' و چون مصطفیٰ علیہ السلام بر سر پله آید و گفت که بعد از من شریعت دیگر نخواهد بود پس باید که قیامت قیامات در زمان شریعت باشد و اشارت همه انبیاء هم چنین است که در زمان آدم علیہ السلام مولانا غر و علار ملک شولیم یعنی شیث می خوانند و قوم آدم را جانبدار گویند و گویند که ملک شولیم علیہ السلام قیامت باز آید و حکم میان خلقان بکند و اسرار و حکمای الهی که در میان شریعتها پوشیده است آشکارا بکند و حکایت آدم و ابلیس آن قصه را در پیش او بوده است

و در زمان نوح ملک یزداق می خوانند و قوم او را ابراهیم گفتندی و ایشان متفرقند که او قیامت باز آید و حکم کند و اهل بهشت را به بهشت و اهل دوزخ را بدوزخ برزند و نوح پیش او شکایت کرد از قومی که دعوت حق قبول نمی کردند و او غر و علار فرمودند که همه را بظاهر شریعت غرق کنند جملی غرق شدند الا آنیکه دست در کشتی نوح زدند و نجات یافتند قال النبی علیہ السلام 'مَثَلُ ذَرِيَّةِ كَيْمَلٍ سَفِينَةٍ نُوْحٍ مَنْ رَكِبَ فِيهَا نَجَّى وَمَنْ تَخَلَّفَ عَنْهَا غَرِقَ' یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیہ السلام که من و اهل بیت من همچون کشتی نوحیم هر که در کشتی نشست از طوفان رست و هر که تخلف کرد غرق و ناپدید گشتند

و در زمان ابراهیم علیہ السلام مولانا ملک السلام می خوانند و امر وزاین طائفه محقه در دعا یا مولانا ملک السلام می گویند و ائمت حضرت ابراهیم را گریبان خوانند و ایشان هم گویند که ملک السلام باز آید و آن حکایت ابراهیم و دیدن ستارگان و ماه و آفتاب عبارت از داعی و باب و حجت بود و او آرام گرفت تا مولانا را بدید و چون مولانا را بدید

اگر امام زمان را بحق نبشنامی روی بدوزخ اگر صد هزار طاقت
اگر ندان بودی که نام امام نام شخص و حدیث او بودی و عز و علا چرا اگر او نباشد عالم
نباشد و چرا اگر او را کسی شناسد مردن جاپلان باشد و مقاش دوزخ باشد
و از امام زین العابدین پرسیدند که خدا را بچه وجه می شناسی گفت بر دو وقت او گفتند
مرد و وقت او کیست گفت گماشته او یعنی امام زمان حجت خدای تعالی است که
بر خلق فرستاده است که خلق را بر خدای تعالی، مسیح حجت نباشد گفتند معرفت
خدای تعالی چیست گفت معرفه الله معرفه امام زمانه یعنی معرفت خدای
تعالی معرفت امام زمان است و در کلام ائمه می آید که ما جاء فی الله فلهو فینا
و اما آنکه او را عز و علا قائم قیامت می خوانند گوئیم که هر چه ظهور و بطون خداست در وقت
و هر چه در عالم است آن را مبدئی باشد خواه بضرورت و خواه بی ضرورت نهایی
باشد چه هر چیزی که آن را نهایی نباشد مبدئی نباشد چونکه مبدئ را نسبت با نهایت
مبدئ توان گفت و نهایت را نسبت با مبدئ نهایت توان گفت و از تضاریف احوال

امام وقت و قائم القیامه خوانده اند و مولانا از نااهمای بزرگ اوست چنانچه در قرآن شریف می آید که قوله تعالی 'أَنْتَ مَوْلَانَا' وَهُوَ مَوْلَانَا ۙ وَاللَّهُ مَوْلَى الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا ۙ و معنی مولانا این است که خداوند عالم آنکه او را غزو و عداوت با او ندارد و معنی امام پیشوا و مقتداست و پیشوا آن باشد که پیروی امر و فرمان او کنند و همه بندگان پیروی امر و فرمان خداوند خود باید کرد و در قرآن شریف نیز خبر می دهد که قوله تعالی 'لَقَدْ رَضِيَ اللَّهُ عَنِ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ إِذْ يُبَايِعُونَكَ تَحْتَ الشَّجَرَةِ' یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که خوشنودم از آن بندگان که بیعت کردند در تحت درخت طوبی با علی علیه السلام و در قرآن نیز باز خبر می دهد که قوله تعالی 'وَكُلُّ شَيْءٍ أَحْصَيْنَاهُ فِي إِمَامٍ مُبِينٍ' ۙ

او مبین است اگر بجان نگری
ای هوائی بآب و خاک مبین

وَيَوْمَ نَذَعُ كُلَّ أَنْفٍ بِإِمَامٍ مِمَّنْ یعنی فردای قیامت بخواند خدای تعالی هر گروهی را با امام و پیشوای دور او و در حدیث پیغمبر خبر می دهد که قَالَ النَّبِيُّ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ 'لَوْ خَلَّتِ الْأَرْضُ مِنْ إِمَامٍ سَاعَةً لَمَادَتْ بِأَهْلِهَا' یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که اگر خالی شود زمین یک ساعت از امام زمان زمین و اهل زمین هلاک شوند و حدیث دیگر وارد شده است که قَالَ النَّبِيُّ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ 'مَنْ مَاتَ وَلَمْ يَعْرِفْ إِمَامَ زَمَانِهِ فَقَدْ مَاتَ مِيتَةً جَاهِلِيَّةً وَالجَاهِلُ فِي التَّادِئِ' یعنی هر که بمیرد و امام زمان خود را نشناسد مرگ او مرگ جاهلان باشد و جای جاهلان آتش دوزخ است

صفت است و هم بی صورت و بی صفت و چون محال است که کسی راه بجزیری بردارد مگر
 بر صورت و صفت او نباشد چه هر چه بسیج و جی بر صورت و صفت این کس نباشد
 مجبول مطلق آن کس باشد و راه بردن مجبول مطلق محال است و ارادت باری تعالی آن
 بود که او را بر دوا و بشناسند و پرستند و از همه موجودات انسان را برگزید و بصورت و صفت
 خاص خود گرامی کرد و این صورت خاص اوست و همه انبیا و نیکان اشارت بان کرده
 اند چنانکه غزرائیل علیه السلام وقتی که قالب آدم را گل کردند آمد که صورت آدم را بکش
 غزرائیل گفت پاکا پروردگار نمیدانم که بچه صورت کجشم؛ لذا از حضرت پروردگار عالم
 در رسید که ای غزرائیل کاسه آبی در پیش خود بگذار و صورت مرا در آن مشاهده کن و
 بدان صورت صورت آدم را بکش چنانچه در قرآن شریف می آید که إِنَّ اللَّهَ خَلَقَ
 آدَمَ عَلَى صُورَتِهِ الرَّحْمَنُ یعنی بدستی که آفرید خدای تعالی آدم را بصورت و صفت
 خاص روحانی خویش و نمی گوید که خدا ظاهر شد بر صورت آدم پس آن صورت آدم
 صورت خاص او باشد و همچنین در عبارت تورات هم می آید که خواستیم که پیدا کنیم
 انسان را بر صورت و هیئت خود آفریم تا ما را بشناسند و پرستند و در انجیل
 می آید که عیسی علیه السلام را پرسیدند که خدا بر چه صورت است می گوید همین صورت
 حدیث آمده که خدا را در عرفات دیدم بر شتری نشسته و قطیفه سرخ بر انداخته و زرد
 در کتاب اوستا می آید که اگر خدای را خواهید که به بینید هم در صورت مردی توانید
 خدای را بر دوا و باید شناخت - مصراع

خدای را به محمد شناس و حیدر حال

پس پیغمبران و نیکان اشارت بر دی کرده اند و او را غر و علا و محققان روزگار مولانا

توان بر دوا و را چون توان پرستید و پیغمبران و نیکان همه از بهر آن آمده اند که مردم را
بخدارسانند و او را بشناسند و بپرستند

در فصول مبارک می آید که روزی دینی با یکی از این طائفه در اصفهان بحث می کرد
آن کس می گفت که خدا دست ندارد و چشم ندارد و همچنین همه چیز را بر می شمرد و آن
مرد ملی گفت ای دُم بریده این که تومی گوئی خربزه و یا هندوانه باشد

و آن طائفه دیگر که مشبه اند گویند که خدا بصورت مرد است و بر عرش نشسته و پای
بر کسی دراز کرده و تر از وی در دست گرفته روزی بندگان را می کشد و می دهد و
هیچ چیز را تأویل نکنند و هر چه در قرآن و حدیث آمده بر صورت آن بروند و چون
ستوران بگاه و برگ بایستند و برودانه نرسند روزی از یک دانشمندی گیلانی
پرسیدند که این تر از و که می گویند چه می کشد گفت در یک پهلوی آن برنج و دیگر پهلوی
و برنج را بامی پاشد و گندم را بر کوهستان

و گویند قرآن را که بحرف و صورت قدیم است و هر که چنین نداند کافر است و هم از
دانشمندان ایشان پرسیدند که اگر کسی موسی خوک در شراب کند و حرف بر جاثمه تو بنویسد
آن حرف قدیم باشد گفت آری جواب گفتم بنده ب تو نماز درست باشد گفت نه
گفتم چه قدیم باشد که نماز بان درست نباشد

و گویند که هیچ کس را راه با این خدا نباشد و حضرت رسول علیه السلام شب معراج
بر بالای آسمان رفت و او را بدید و جبرئیل از پیش او از بالای آسمان می آمد
و این دو گروه یکدیگر را کافر دانند و هر دو راست می گویند اما این طائفه محقه ششم
الله گویند موجودات را خداست که همیشه بوده است و خواهد بود و او را هم صورت و هم

میدارد و از آنکه در آن خطا باشد چنانچه در شان پیغمبر می آید که وَلَوْلَا اَنْ شَبَّكَ لَقَدْ كِدْتَ تَوَكَّنْ اِلَيْهِمْ شَيْئًا قَلِيلًا یعنی اگر نه آن بودی که ترا بر پای بدستیم بدستی که نزدیک بود که میلی کنی بسوی اهل باطل یعنی در خلافت که آن را بیگانه دهی و این خطایست از نفس کل بسوی او و در همه زمان باید حجت که معصوم از خطا باشد چنانکه در باب او باید مولانا همه بندگان را توفیق داند تا سخن ایمان آورند و از باطل روی برگردانند و آنچه جد و جهد باشد در راه مولانا بگویند و السلام

باب پنجم در باز نمودن امامت و دوری و کشف و معنی قیامت قیامت بقوت و توفیق مولانا قایم قیامت که خداوند هر چه هزار عالم است و گناه نشی نیست پیدا کردیم در سخنان گذشته و بیان نمودیم که موجودات بخود هست نمی توانند بود و ایشانرا هست کنند و پیدا کنند و پیدا آورنده می باید که خود بر لوح کائنات نقش ملکیت ظاهر است و ملوک را از مالک چاره نیست و اهل عالم بجز این طائفه محقه بر دو گروه شده اند طائفه را معطله گویند و طائفه را مشتهه گویند

و طائفه معطله آناند که حق تعالی را از همه چیز تنزیه کنند و گویند او از صورت منزوع است و کسی را راه بذات او نیست و هیچ گونه او را در توان یافت و آنجا باز دو گروه شوند گروهی از صفاتش تنزیه کنند و گروهی صفاتش اثبات کنند و گویند صفات لائق ذات است مثلاً گویند عالم است گویم مراد از این علم چیست گویند معنی که لائق ذات است و همچنین در همه صفات در قدرت و سماع و بصیرت و غیره این که در کلام انبیا آمده است پس این طائفه همه بقول خود اقرار دارند که راه بخدا نبوده اند چنانچه میسر صورت شده باشد و ذاتش نتوان دانست و صفاتش معلوم نباشد پس راه باو و معرفت او چگونه

و ما بدین دلیل روشن کردیم که همچنانکه در تأویل غیروصی را زرسد و هر ناطقی را وصی بوده است چنانچه آدم را مولانا شیت، نوح را مولانا سم و ابراهیم را مولانا اسماعیل و موسی را مولانا مارون و عیسی را مولانا شمعون و محمد رسول الله را مولانا علی

و حدیث مولانا علی لکزه التجدد و التبیح در همه کتب احادیث و جمیع روایات ثابت است و ما در باب گذشته بدلائل عقلی و نقلی اثبات کردیم و سترانکه حضرت رسول علیه السلام مولانا را فرموده که ادای و ام من او کند آن بود که چون نبی سخن مشابه گفته بود و امت را از آن بیرون نیاورده و آن امری بود در گردن او علیه السلام و مولانا ادای آن و ام کرد که مردم از کون متشابهت و گمراهی در ظاهر شریعت بد آورده و بعالم پیدائی در عالم حقیقت رسانید

و تنزیل از نزول آن است که چیزی از عالم علوی بسفلی آید یعنی از بند ی بستی و تأویل از اول است و اول چیزی باصل خود رسانیدن است و ظاهر فرع است و سفلی عالم ثابت و باقی است پس صاحب تأویل آن کس باشد که سخن را از ظاهر خود بگرداند و بحقیقت آن برساند و مردم را بآن بینا گرداند و نبی را عقل کل و اول و سابق و کرسی و قضا و قلم و ناطق و ظاهر و سما و یوم و نهار و مدینه و متحرک و منزل و منسوخ گویند و وصی را نفس کل و اساس ثانی و نامی و لوح و قدر و نون و صامت و باطن و ارض و لیل و باب و ساکن و مؤول و مانع خوانند و نبی و وصی را باهم اسسین گویند و عقل نفس را باهم عقلمین گویند و چون نطق از خواص نفس ناطقه است پس ناطق مدد از نفس کل یابد و باید از نفس کل باورسد و تعین از آن بوجی کنند و هیچ ناطقی معصوم از ذلتی نیست چنانچه در قصه انبیاء و در قرآن می آید و باید نفس کل نگاه

ظاهر عنوان باطن است و شریعت مثال است و حقیقت ماثول و مثال باید که متابع ماثول باشد و چون عالم حقیقت که عالم خداست در دار آخرت زنده است بدین معنی که لَوْنُ الدَّارِ الْآخِرَةِ لَكُمُ الْحَيَوَانُ یعنی حیات و زندگی نیست الا مردم را پس باید که هر چه در شریعت مثال آمده باشد مثل نماز و روزه و حج و زکوة و قرآن حقیقت آن مردم باشد پس نماز مردمی و روزه مردمی و زکوة مردمی و قرآن مردمی و همه چیز همچنین و همچنانکه بیان کننده مثال شخصی بود که بظاهر شریعت استاده باشد و آن شخصی باید بیان کننده ماثول باشد که باطن شریعت استاده باشد و این شخص را وصی خوانند و در قرآن نیز می آید که ابراهیم وصیت کرد پسر خویش را و گفت لَا تَشْرِكْ بِاللَّهِ إِنَّ الشِّرْكَ لَظُلْمٌ عَظِيمٌ پس کون مشارکت و مشابهت کون ظلم باشد و آن کون کون ظاهر است چه شرک و ظلم از آن بالاتر نبود که کسی با علی علیه السلام کیان باشد و کون حقیقت آن باشد که مردم را از آن اشتراک و مشابهت که کون ظلم و شرک است بدر آورد و آن وصایتست و معنی وصی کردن آن است که کسی را بر مال و فرزندان و همه چیز خود حاکم گرداند تا بعد از او هر چیزی را بمصرف خود برساند پس همچنین چون نبی ظاهر شریعت را اقامت کرد و وصی را بر مال او که شرع و کتاب است و فرزندان او که اُمت اویند حاکم گردد و چون شرع و کتاب مثل بر ظاهر و باطن است فرزندان تبعات میراث برند و تنزیل از ظاهر معانی کتاب است بطرقی که احکام شریعت بدان برپای شد و چون نبی با همه کس سخن برابر گوید چنانکه در حال حیات خود فرزندان را برابر چیزی دهد و بسیار تفاوت نهند اگر از اهل تنزیل باشد ایشان را تنزیل گوید و اگر از اهل تأویل باشد ایشان را از تأویل گوید و آنچه فراخور عقل و فهم هر کس باشد بگوید

در هر مدتی احوال مردم برینج دیگر باشد واجب گردد که بحسب تأثیرات اختران خاصیت دولان
در هر مدتی شریعت نو پیدا شود و اگر این نبی صاحب کتاب باشد باید که سخن او در کتاب
متشابه آید و بر آئین اهل ظاهر که در مرتبه حس مبتدیان اند بطاهر آن سخن و
آن آئین باشد که آن مبتدیان به کاه و برگ است و اهل باطن که حقیقت چیز را باز جویند و از
مرتبه حتی بر مرتبه عقل و فهم روند بمعانی آن سخنان مسئله برسند
و چون نمودیم که ظاهر شریعت از بهر ضبط احکام دنیا است که همیشه گردنده است از
حالی بکالی چنانکه احوال دنیا است پس باطن شریعت از بهر ضبط احکام آخرت و حقیقت
باشد و احکام آخرت و حقیقت باید که هرگز تغیر و تبدل نیابد چه آن عالم خداوند است
و عالم خداوندی هرگز متغیر و گردنده نشود و حق بمعانی ثابت است و حقیقت عالم حق است
و عالم ثابت همیشه ثابت باشد و مانیر موجودات عالم رومی یا یم که ظاهر آن از حالی
بکالی نقل می کند و باطن او که قوت الهیست هرگز از حالی بکالی ننگردد و پس همچنین ظاهر
شریعت که حکم بر ظاهر موجودات است گردنده باشد و باطن آنکه بیان حقایق موجودات
است و عالم حقایق از عالم الهیست هرگز ننگردد و همچنین شخصی می باید که ظاهر شریعت را
بر پای دارد و حکم بر همه یکسان کند و سخن متشابه گوید و ضبط احکام دنیا کند و او را نبی خوانند
همچنین شخصی باید که باطن شریعت را بر پای دارد و چون مردم متفاوتند اگر چه ظاهر ایشان
بهم اند و تمیز کند میان ایشان و حکم او بر همه یکسان نباشد و سخنان متشابه و امثله که
آن را نبی براندازه عقول مردم گفته باشد و اهل حقیقت را از آن متشابه بدر آورده و
معانی آن امثله را بمعقولات که نبی در محسوسات ادا کرده باشد و از این امثله و
از آن محسوسات جدا کند و چون شریعت ظاهر حقیقت است و حقیقت باطن شریعت و

حتی در او پیدا شود که بقوت غضبی دفع منفرت از خود کند و بقوت حتی تمیز کند میان بابت
و نبابت و دیگر روح انسانی پذیرد و آن عالم خود و هوش است که آن حقیقت چیزای
را به بیند و دریابد و معرفت باری تعالی رسد

چون نمودیم که در سرشت او قوت طعام و شربت و قوت عقل که خود و هوش است
همه جمع است پس مغنی دیوی و فرشتگی و انسانی در او موجود باشد بیت
دیو و سبع و فرشته و انسانی بائست هر آنچه غالب آید انی

پس بضرورت کسی هم از نوع انسانی باید که ایشان را آگاه کند باشد و ایشان را
از دیوی و سبعی بر تبه فرشتگی و انسانی آورد و از اخلاق بد با اخلاق نیک و از جهل بمعرفت
رساند و این مغنی میسر نشود بی آنکه ایشان را از خبری برساند و بخبری امید دهد و چون انسان
را ابتدا بغیر از محسوسات و لذت و الم حسی دیگر نداند واجب باشد نبی را که مغنی دیوی و
سبعی بصورت حتی تمشیل کند و از آن برساند آنچه که گوید جای دیگران و دوزخ است
و دوزخ را گوید جای پیرانش است و در آنجا مار و کرم و زقوم است و همچنین مغنی فرشتگی
انسان را بصورت حتی تمشیل کند و گوید جای نیکوکاران بهشت است و آن بوستان
است و در آنجا طعامها و شرابهای خوب و حوران و پسران مرغوب و نبی همیشه چنین
کند که معانی معقولات را بصورت محسوس ادا کند چه او را سخن بیاید گفت که براندازه عقل
قوی و ضعیف هم باشد و ضعیف الا محسوس را نداند و با او سخن از غیر محسوس تواند گفت
و قوی خود بر سر آن برسد و باید که این نبی حکمی بکند و قاعده و مقراری بگذارد که اهل آن زمان را
بر آن حکم و قاعده باید رفت تا سبب نظام عالم دنیا شود باید که حکم بر همه کس یکسان کند
تا هر کس دعوی خصوصیت نکند و بر یکدیگر زیادتی نتواند که موجب خرابی عالم باشد و چون

که لایق آن باشد در تصرف خود تواند آورد و در معنی از بهر آنکه انسان مخصوص است بفکر و عقل و این دو آلت اند که بان نیک را از بد جدا تواند کرد و معقولات و حقائق موجودات را درک تواند کرد و بهر قدرت باری تعالی واصل توان شد اگر عقل او آمیخته و باو بهم نباشد و همچنین اخلاق حمیده مثل کرم و مروت و حلم و شجاعت و صفات پسندیده چون علم و قدرت و کلام و بیان همه مخصوص است بانسان و در غیر انسان نیست و قوت الهی که همه موجودات بان قایم است در مرتبه تمام ظاهر می شود یعنی هر چه در همه موجودات از معانی الهی متفرق است در او جمع می شود پس او بحسب ذات و صفات کامل باشد و این از برای آن است که سرشت او از همه موجودات است که من کل شیء له لطیفه فی مستودع و فی هذا المجموع حقیقت او را عبور بر ملکوت همه موجودات است و در هر عالم که عبور کند حقیقت و صفت آن عالم با او همراه شود اگر چنین نبودی از حقایق موجودات خبر ندادی و واقف نگشتی در عالم سموات که در آید حرکت شوقی و انبساط و حی در او پیدا شود و بی مبدا خود و از انبساط انواری که در انسان است با او همراه شود و چون در عالم غناصر در آید طبیعت گری و سردی و تری و خشکی که از اجتماع آن اعتدال مزاج حاصل شود با او همراه شود و بعد از آن در عالم موالید در آید اول انعقاد پذیرد و تا موجب انعام و بهم پیوستگی اجزای او بشود و موجب ثبوت و سکون او گردد و دیگر روح نامیه پذیرد تا سبب موالید او شود و از انبساط و طعام و شراب و قوت تولید در او پیدا شود و این قوتها در خلیات یعنی درخت خرمابشیر از همه موجودات است چه او از جایگاه دور آب کشد و از یک دانه او بسی دانه ها حاصل شود

و دیگر روح حیوانی پذیرد تا سبب حیات و ادراکات او گردد و از انبساط قوت غضبی و

انبیا و نیکان از برای آن معنی آمده اند و بجه مولانا جلّ ذکره و عَظَمَتْ کَلِمَتُهُ کَرَامَةُ
 جمیع انبیا و است بحقیقت امر و در این طائفه محققه موجود است بحق حقیقه مولانا بفضل و
 رحمت خود همه را بشاه راه صراط المستقیم هدایت کند و توفیق فرمان برداری بحجت او که در
 رحمت اوست بر عالم و عالمیان گشاده گرداند و اِنَّهُ وَلِیْ ذَٰلِكَ هُوَ حَسْبُنَا
 و مولانا وحده و کفی

باب چهارم در معنی نبوت و وصایت و تنزیل قرآن و تأویل آن بتوفیق مولانا
 مولانا توفیق داد که آنچه حق است گفته شود که او بر زبان بنده خود براند
 و درین باب و بابهای گذشته و این باب بتخصیص بیابهای آئیده بعضی سخنان میرود
 که آن اضافه با عقل ضعیف گفته میشود اما آنکه قوی فهم اند خود بشر آن برسند
 گویم که نبی از روی لغت آگاه کننده است و مرسل آنکه او را بقوم فرستند که ایشان
 را بیاگاهانند و او را اولو الغرّم گویند از بهر آنکه شریعت نوبهت و تفسیر احکام گذشته بکنند
 چون مقصود کل آفرینش آن است که معرفت باری تعالی حاصل شود و محال است که
 کسی معرفت چیزی حاصل کند مادامیکه بر صورت و صفت آن چیز مطلع نباشد و بر صورت
 و صفت ملک تعالی راه آن را نیست و تفصیل این در باب امامت می آید و همه موجودات
 نسبت بانسان وجود یافتند هم در صورت و هم در معنی و بجز آن ان هیچ موجودی را
 این نسبت نیست

و اما در صورت از بهر آنکه می بینیم که آن ان احسن تعویم است و هر چیزی که با نیاز اوست
 از آلات و ادراکات و آنچه او بان تواند زیست و کشش منفعت بسوی خود تواند کرد و مضرت
 از خود تواند راند یا خود دارد و همه موجودات ظاهرا از جواهر و اعراض درک تواند و هر یک بالتو

و مولانا تر از آنکه نفس امامت بر او بود بسیدنا سپرد و او را تحت اعظم خود گردانید و دلیان و طارم و آل و حید را با در حواله او کرد و بعد از او مولانا لادی و مولانا ممتدی و مولانا قاهر و مولانا حسن علی ذکره السلام و او بنده و اغلال را از گردن بندگان خود برداشتند و از تاریخ اعظم سابق صد و هشتاد و نه سال بسر آمده بود و پیغمبر علیه السلام در تاریخ تعیین نموده بود و آنچه موسی در توریت و عیسی در انجیل ذکر کرده و داود در زبور و ابراهیم در صحف و زردشت در کتاب زند و یوسعید مانوی در کتاب انجلیون و بهمه نشانه های انبیاء با مولانا حسن علی ذکره السلام بوده و بعد از او مولانا ضیاء الدین محمد و مولانا جلال الدین حسن و مولانا علاء الدین محمد و مولانا ارکن الدین محمد و مولانا خورشاه و مولانا شمس الدین محمد و مولانا مؤمن شاه و مولانا قاسم شاه ابن قاسم شاه و مولانا عماد الحق و الدین سلام و مولانا سلام شاه ابن سلام شاه و مولانا غریب شاه و مولانا بوز علی و مولانا شاه مراد و مولانا شاه ذوالفقار و مولانا شاه نورالدین و مولانا شاه دین خلیل الله و مولانا شاه سید ابوالحسن علی و مولانا شاه سید ابوالحسن و بعد از او مولانا قائم با مر الله و قائم العصر و الزمان صاحب الجود و الکرم صاحبنا و خداوندنا و واقف اسرار خفی و علی مولانا شاه خلیل الله ذکره التمجید و التبیح هم بر این قاعده که گفته شد باید امام فرزندان ما باشد و از ذریت امامان پیشین باشد چنانچه خدای تعالی فرموده که قوله تعالی ذُرِّیَّةٌ بَعْضُهَا مِنْ بَعْضٍ و الله سمیع علیم و الحق صفات نیک و اخلاق پسندیده و معرفی که بخدا و خدائی رساند چنانچه در حدیث قدسی فرموده که قال النبی علیه السلام مَعْرِفَةُ اللهِ مَعْرِفَةُ اِمَامِ زَمَانِهِ این است کون وحدت و مرتبه همگی و جادوانی و آنچه همه

پیداشد و نیز اگر او امام بودی بایستی که برپیش حسن عسکری منقطع نشدی و مادر
باب پیشین اثبات انقطاع آن کردیم اما از جانب مولانا اسماعیل در هر زمان
یکی از ذریت او قائم است و عمر ایشان چون عمر ایل زمان است و دائم چند تن را را
باو باشد و هر که بجد و جهد طلب کند بیابد و وعده ثانی که در قرآن و حدیث آمده است
بظهور قیامت و قائم و رفع شرائع و جزایندگان چنانچه در باب آن بیاید همه در
باب فرزندان مولانا اسماعیل بطور آمد و می آید

و بعد از مولانا اسماعیل مولانا محمد و مولانا رضی الدین احمد و مولانا وفی الدین
محمد و مولانا تقی الدین محمد و مولانا مهدی عبدالله و او در مغرب ظهور کرد و حدیث سیم
علیه السلام که قال النبی علیه السلام سَتَطْلُعُ الشَّمْسُ مِنَ الْمَغْرِبِ
على رأس ثلاث مائة سنة اشارت بطور اوست یعنی آفتاب اامت برآید
از مغرب پس از سیصد سال از هجرت رسول علیه السلام چنانچه ظهور کرد در بلاد مغرب
شام و مصر را منقر کرد و و جدید را ساخت و مصر را از قحطی باز خرید و بعد از او محمد قائم و
مولانا منصور و مولانا المعز المعروف و قاهره مصر را ساخت و مولانا عزیز و مولانا حاکم
و او حکما را جمع کرد تا سده زنج بنام او بنوشتند و سده زنج حاکمی ایشان مشهور است
و خواجه نصیر در تخریر محطی ذکر آن کرده و بعد از او مولانا ظاهر و بعد از او مولانا قاهر و بعد از او مولانا مستنصر بالله

و من از پنج بمصر رفتم و زیارت مشرف شدم و کار من بدان سرعت رسید که داعی القات
خراسان و بدیشان شدم و مرا حواله بدیشان کرد و کار جدم حضرت بابا سیدنا
نیز بدان سرعت رسید که غایت تمام در کار او شدم

رفیق را و هر چه باشد از بر مولانا خواهند مولانا همه را توفیق طاعت دها و در حجت محمود همه را روزی کند إِنَّهُ ذَٰلِكَ وَهُوَ حَسْبُنَا وَحْدَهُ وَكَفَىٰ

و میگویند در زمان پیغمبر مولانا علی بود و بعد از او مولانا حسن و او امام مستودع بود یعنی امامت پیش او بمانت بود و او میان حجت باطن و حجت ظاهر است ندان باطنی و بان ظاهری و از این جهت امامت بفرزندان او نقل نکرد و امام مستقر مولانا حسین بود یعنی امامت پیش او برقرار بود و همچنانکه مولانا اسماعیل که او را ملک اسلام خواندندی امام مستقر بود و امام موسی کاظم مستودع در قرآن شریف نیز می گوید که قُمُوسْتَقَرُّ وَمُسْتَوْدَعٌ قَدْ قَضَلْنَا الْآيَاتِ لِقَوْمٍ يَفْقَهُونَ یعنی گفت خدا تعالی که شمار جای قرارگاه است و جای امانت پس تحقیق بیان کردیم نشانی خود را برای قوم که فهم کند و در کلام باز میگوید که قوله تعالی و مَا مِنْ دَابَّةٍ فِي الْأَرْضِ إِلَّا عَلَى اللَّهِ رِزْقُهَا وَيَعْلَمُ مُسْتَقَرَّهَا وَمُسْتَوْدَعَهَا كُلٌّ فِي كِتَابٍ مُبِينٍ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی از آسمان تا بر زمین چیزی که اهل الله اند رزق دهنده و کس اند مستقر و مستودع روشن پیدا

و بعد از او مولانا زین العابدین و مولانا محمد باقر و مولانا جعفر صادق و مولانا اسماعیل نقل است که بعد از امام جعفر صادق علیه السلام در میان فرزندان خودش دعوی افتاد هر کدام دعوی نمودند و امامیه گویند موسی کاظم بود گویم امامت بنقل است و نقل اول مولانا اسماعیل بود و بعد از این بر موسی کاظم و کسی که امام بود زمین و آسمان با او برپا باشد چیزی را مصلحت بیند که عقل و فهم باندگان بان رسد و نیز تا آن زمان که نقل با دیگری کرد در امامت مولانا اسماعیل شبهت نبود و از آن موسی کاظم در حال نقل کردند شبهه

لَوْ خَلَّتِ الْأَرْضُ مِنْ إِمَامٍ سَاعَةً لَمَادَتْ بِأَهْلِهَا بِنِي كُفْتِ سَنَعِيرٍ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ
 که اگر خالی شود جهان از امام زمان یک لحظه و یک لمحه و یک ساعت و یک چشم زدن جهان
 و اهل جهان نیست و هلاک شوند و روزی صد هزار بار نظر بر آفرینش عالم می کنند تا دنیا برقرار
 بماند بکلمه این حدیث نبوی که قال النبی علیه السلام 'مَنْ مَاتَ وَلَمْ يَعْرِفْ
 إِمَامَ زَمَانِهِ فَقَدْ مَاتَ مِيتَةً جَاهِلِيَّةً وَالْجَاهِلُ فِي النَّارِ' یعنی هر که بمیرد
 و امام زمان خود را نداند و شناسد مرگش مرگ جاهلان باشد و جای جاهلان آتش
 دوزخ است و نیز در قرآن شریف می آید که قوله تعالی 'يَوْمَ نَدْعُو كُلَّ أُنَاسٍ
 بِإِمَامِهِمْ' یعنی گفت خدای تعالی یا دکنید ای بندگان من آن روزی را که می خوانم هر
 گروهی را با نام و پیشوای ایشان و اهل تضا و آنها اند که خود را در میان بینند و خدای
 را نه و آن کون کفر است و اهل تضا و باشند و بوحثت نرسیده باشند و اهل ترتب
 آنها نیست که خود را خدای را ببینند و آن شرک است و نفاق و اهل وحدت آنها اند
 که همه خدای را ببینند و خود را نه و نه مستغرقات خود را و هستی خود را چنان در خدا
 مستغرق شده باشند که جز خدای را هیچ نبینند و ندانند و خود را جز خدا نیست
 دانند و این است کون وحدت و حقیقت و عالم خدا و خدائی

پس اهل تضا و سعی آن باید کرد که تا به ترتب رسند و اهل ترتب سعی آن باید
 کرد که بوحثت رسند و اهل وحدت سعی باید کرد که تمام مراتب وحدت صاحب یقین
 شوند و دانستن ایشان با یکدیگر چنان باشد که هر کس رفیق را از خود بهتر خواهد و بجان و کار
 رهن بکشد و هیچ چیز از او باز نماند و تصرف او در همه چیز تصرف خود داند و شریعت
 این طائفه است و حقیقت آنکه غیر از مولانا جلال ذکره هیچ چیز نبینند و ندانند و خود را و

کمال او باشد و چنان باید دانست که بفهم او فروز آید که چون طریق نجات در آن است که این تعلیم لای و راه بر باشد که آن حجت اعظم است و منی تواند که بعلم نسبت با هر کسی فعل جدا گانه کند چه فعل بیش از یکی نمی تواند بود اما با ضاع هر کس سخن با نوازده فهم او توان گفت پس ثابت کردیم که نظر آموزنده باید که بر فعل معلّم نباشد بلکه نظر بر قول او داشته باشد و نامور او باشد هر چه فرماید

و اسماعیلیان عالم آنان اند که با خود قرار داده اند که در رنج و راحت فی المشقة والرضی والیأس والنحما بالحق وقت بسر برند و در نصرت یکدیگر بکوشند بغایت جهد و طاقت هر غزلی که کنند و بهر امتحان که محقّ وقت کند پای بدارند و در قرآن شریف می آید که قوله تعالیٰ وَلَتَبْلُوَنَّكُمْ بِشَيْءٍ مِنَ الْخَوْفِ وَالْجُوعِ وَنَقْصٍ مِنَ الْأَمْوَالِ وَالْأَنْفُسِ وَالثَّمَرَاتِ نَا وَأُولَئِكَ هُمُ الْمُحْتَدُونَ می فرماید بدستی که بیاوریم شمار بجیزی از ترس و گرسنگی و تنگی و نقصان در مالها و نفسها می ایشان و فرزندان بشارت ده ای محمد صبر کنید گان را آنانیکه چون مصیبتی بایشان رسد گویند ما را خدا را ایم و ما بسوی خدا باز گردانیم در هر حالی آنها آن کانی اند که بدیشان درد او زحمتهاست از پروردگار ایشان آنها اند که راه راست یافتگانند از روی دین چنانچه زمین و آسمان همه ملک مولانا است لِلّهِ مُلْكُ السَّمَوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضِ و هر چه موجود است بطوعا و کرها مولانا را گردن نماده اند وَلِلّهِ يَسْجُدُ مَنْ فِي السَّمَوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضِ طَوْعًا وَكَرْهًا رُجُوعًا و خداوندان داور است داشته باشند از راحته که در دنیا با آنها می آید بر سر یَفْرَحُونَ عَلَى الْبَلَاءِ فِي اللَّهِ عَالَمُ الْبَطْنِ چنین کسان می ریزند تا مادامیکه این کس یک سره می خود را در میان می بیند حکم این حدیث که

و در قیامت ایشان را نگون سار بیاورند و عذاب کنند ایشان گویند که ای پروردگار
ما آنچه دیدنی بود دیدیم و آنچه شنیدنی بود شنیدیم بار بار گردان که آنچه از دست ما بیاورد
عمل نیکو کنیم یعنی بامرتوبی که بکنیم بدستی که یقین شد ما را و خدای تعالی فرموده که قوله تعالی
شَخَّلْنَا أَمْوَالَنَا وَأَهْلُونَا بفرایدنی رسد که گوئی باهل و مال خود مشغول بودیم و
توفیق نیافتیم و در حق موقنان چنین یاد کرده که قوله تعالی نَاكِسُوا رُءُوسَكُمْ عِندَ
رَبِّكُمْ رَبَّنَا أَبْصَرْنَا وَسَمِعْنَا فَارْجِعْنَا نَعْمَلْ صَالِحًا إِنَّا مُوقِنُونَ
و این طائفه محقه اسماعیلیان هرگز نظر بفعل محققان روزگار نمیکنند بلکه نظر بقول
محققان دارند چه آموزنده نسبت بآموزنده کار نسبت گوش دارد و باز بان نسبت
زن بامر و گوش را از زبان باید شنودن وزن را از مرد نطفه قبول باید کردن
و نیز شریعت عالم جهانی است و طریقت و حقیقت عالم روحانی و فعل از عالم
جهانی است و قول از عالم روحانی و این طائفه محقه چون از عالم جهانی که کون شریعت
است گذشته اند و بعالم روحانی که کون حقیقت است رسیده اند و ایشان را نظر بر
قبول که عالم روحانیت داشته باشند^ع
در بیان روح می آید که قوله تعالی قُلِ الرُّوحُ مِنْ أَمْرِ رَبِّي و گفت خدای
تعالی چون روح از عالم امر باشد زنده است که امر خدای تعالی با او پیوسته باشد و هرگز
آن از او بگسلد آن روح از او جدا گشته باشد و او مرده باشد و پیوستن امر کسی از او
قول است نه از فعل و معنی امر فرمودن است و اهل ظاهر از آن مرده اند که ما مور امر محقی
روزگار نیستند چون امر ایشان نمی پیوند در روح ندارند مرده اند
دیگر آنکه چون فهم و عقل مردم متفاوت است هر کسی را بطریقی باید بود که موجب او

ع از آیه ۱۱ از سورة النحل (۴۸) ع از آیه ۱۲ از سورة السجده (۳۲) ع از اینجا ظاهر و در حق افتاده است

از او خداشناسی و خدا دانی آموزند و دائم مراتب ارکان دین داری نگاه دارند و حق را بحق
وقت شناسند و نظراتشان بر قول حق باشد و چون محق پدید آید کسی را ز سر مد که گوید تو
چنین می کنی و چنان می گویی من نیروی قول تو می کنم نه از فعل تو زیرا که سر آن فعل را او
می داند و آن کس که چنین گوید با او هم سری هست باشد فعوذ بالله و خدای تعالی در قرآن
شریف یاد کرده که قوله تعالی 'اَللّٰهُ يَفْعَلُ مَا يَشَاءُ وَيَحْكُمُ مَا يَرْضَىٰ' یعنی می کند
آنچه می خواهد و حکم می کند آنچه ارادت دارد و جای دیگری که قوله تعالی 'لَا يَسْأَلُ
عَمَّا يَفْعَلُ وَهُمْ يُسْأَلُونَ' یعنی از افعال خدا پرسند که چه می کند اما از بندگان
خاص و محبتان و داعیان او پرسیده شود که چه می کنند و گاه باشد که فعل او از بهر سایش
بندگان باشد اگر نه فعوذ بالله نظر بندگان اگر بر فعل او باشد هم بقهر از بایش و گرفتار
شوند و گاه باشد که او از روی حقیقت باشد بندگان از عالم اضافه که در آن اندگاه بان
توانند کرد و این ممکن نیست که در عالم اضافه عالم حقیقت را دریابند و بر سر آن وقوف
یابند هر که بنظر اضافه در عالم حقیقت بنید چنان باشد که از کون حقیقت او دور افتاده
باشد و از خدا بیفتد و بعدم جاودانی گرفتار شود و آن کس که گوید که امام باید چنین کند
یا چنان نکند گفته باشد که من محقق و امام تابع من باید بود پس او ایمان با امام نیاورده
باشد و این بمثابة آن باشد که حیوانی که ناقص است نسبت با انسان کند و گوید انسان
را که اکل است تابع من باید بود و عناصر گوید نبات را تابع من باید و این بخیبر کوسمی و آرزوگی
چیزی دیگر نباشد و بقرآن حکایت این طائفه می آید که قوله تعالی 'وَيُعَذِّبُ الْمُنَافِقِينَ
وَالْمُنَافِقَاتِ وَالْمُشْرِكِينَ وَالْمُشْرِكَاتِ (إِلَى آخِرِهَا) وَغَضِبَ اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِمْ
وَلَعَنَهُمْ وَأَعَدَّ لَهُمْ جَهَنَّمَ وَسَاءَتْ مَصِيرًا'

و باغ فدک را با ولاد فاطمه واپس دادند اول ایشان عمر بن عبدالعزیز است که صالح
 بنی امیه بود و بعد از آن از بنی عباس امون و مقصم و اثنی عشر فدک را بتصرف اولاد
 فاطمه علیها السلام دادند و بعد از آن نوبت بموکل رسید فدک را از ایشان گرفت
 و بعد از آن معتضد فدک را تسلیم اولاد فاطمه صلوات الله علیها نمودند و بعد از آن کنتفی
 باز گرفت و بعد از آن مقتدر باز با ولاد فاطمه تسلیم نمود و در کتاب لطائف الطوائف
 نقل شد که روزی هارون الرشید بحضرت موسی کاظم گفت که فدک را محمد و کن تا بتو
 بگذارم که می دانم که در این باب ظلم بر اهل بیت رفته است حضرت موسی کاظم گفتند که
 اگر فدک را از برای تو ذکر کنم ترا دل بازند که من باز گذاری هارون سوگند یاد
 کرد که میگذارم حضرت موسی کاظم علیه السلام گفت که حد اول عدن است زنگارون
 از این سخن بگشت و گفت دیگر بگو آن حضرت گفت حد دوم سمرقند است زنگ
 هارون زرد شد و گفت دیگر بگو آن حضرت فرمودند حد سوم افریقه مغرب است
 زنگ هارون از زردی بسرخی گشت از غایت غضب گفت دیگر بگو که آن حضرت گفتند
 که حد چهارم دریای ارمند است زنگ هارون از سرخی بسیا بی مبدل گشت و مدت مدید
 سر در پیش افکند و بعد از آن سر بر آورد و گفت ای کاظم تو حدود مالک را نام بردی یعنی
 آنچه از مالک که در تصرف است حق بنی فاطمه است و بنی عباس بر اهل بیت ظلم
 کرده اند حضرت موسی کاظم گفت ای هارون من اول ترا نکتم که باین حدود رضی نخواهی گشت و تو از من نشنیدی...

ثابت شد که تحقیق امامان بحق ائمه اسماعیلیه اند که دامن ایشان از آلایش
 معصیت پاک و منزّه است و همیشه ایشان را حجتی و داعی و ناذونی و معلی باشد که

که قال النبی علیه السلام؛ فاطمة بضعة منی یؤذنی ما یؤذیها یعنی فاطمه زهرا پاره از گوشت و روح من است پس از این معلوم است که آن اغیار ملعون ازلی و ابدی گشتند چنانچه پیغمبر علیه السلام فرمودند که قال النبی علیه السلام من أبغض علیاً و فاطمة و اولادی فقد أبغضنی و من أبغضنی فقد أبغض الله یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که هر که بغض علی و فاطمه و اولادش بورزد بدستی که بغض مرا ورزیده باشد و هر که بغض مرا بورزد بغض خدای مرا ورزیده باشد و هر که بغض خدا و رسول علیه السلام را بورزد ملعون ازلی و ابدی است

و از ابن عباس رضی الله عنه روایت است که رسول علیه السلام فرمودند که قال النبی علیه السلام یا علی إنا لله تعالى أزوجک فاطمة و جعل صداقها الأرض فمن مشى علیها مبغضاً لها مشى حراماً یعنی حضرت رسول علیه السلام علی ابن ابی طالب علیه السلام گفت که یا علی بدستی که الله تعالی بعهده تو آورده است فاطمه را و گردانیده است مهر او را همه روی زمین را از شرق عالم تا مغرب عالم پس هر که بغض حضرت فاطمه را داشته باشد راه رفتن بر روی زمین بر وی حرام شد ای دوستان بچشم انصاف نظر کنید و بنگرید که ما انصافی و بی رحمی آن منکران را که در چه درجه اند که باغ فدک را از جگر گوشه پیغمبر خداستانند بدان که باغ فدک را دریغ می دارند از کسی که جمیع روی زمین مهر و لیت و عهد غدیر خم را بشکستند و وصیت نامه پیغمبر خدا را واپس نمودند

بدان که چون غصب باغ فدک و ظلم بر فاطمه صلوات الله علیها بغایت ظاهراً و وضع بود بنا بر آن جماعتی از خلفای بنی امیه و بنی عباس بودند میخواهند که انصافی داشته باشند

ابن عباس رضی اللہ عنہ از زبان حضرت رسول علیہ السلام این حدیث فرمودند کہ
 قال النبی علیہ السلام نحن معاشر الأنبیاء لا نورث ما ترکناه إلا
 صدقته یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیہ السلام کہ اجماعت پیغمبران نصب کردہ خدای تعالیٰ ایم
 و کسی دیگر از امیراث نبرد الا ذریت ما کہ خدای تعالیٰ در شان آنها فرمودند کہ قوله
 تعالیٰ ذُرِّیَّةٌ بَعْضُهَا مِنْ بَعْضٍ واللّٰهُ سَمِیعٌ عَلِیمٌ یعنی گذاشتم قرآن
 خویش را اہل بیت را در میان شما و آنچه ما گذاشتیم بصدق و یقین درست از برای آنکہ
 خلق گمراہ نگردند و از زبان حضرت رسول علیہ السلام شنیدہ ایم گفت کہ قوله تعالیٰ
 فَهَبْ لِي مِنْ لَدُنْكَ وَلِیًّا یَرْثُنِی حاصل معنیش این است کہ زکریا دعا کرد و بحق
 تعالیٰ کہ ای پروردگار عالم و عالمیان بدہ من ولی کہ از من میراث برد بہمہ حال بسین
 دروغ و کذب آن ملعومان را کہ باغ فدک و حوالی و میراث پیغمبر خدا را از فاطمہ زہرا صلوات
 اللہ علیہا گرفتند با آنکہ حضرت رسول در زمان حیات خود بحضرت فاطمہ صلوات اللہ
 علیہا میراث بخشیدہ بودند با آنکہ گواہ بر صاحب تصرف نبی باشد حضرت فاطمہ خیر النساء
 گواہ گذرانیدند کہ پدرم حضرت رسول علیہ السلام بمن بخشیدہ بود پس آن منافقان و
 بدبختان روسیاه از لی و ابدی گواہانش را رد نمودند با آنکہ ہر یک از گواہانش حضرت
 امیر المؤمنین علی علیہ السلام و ام کلثوم و سلمان و بوذر و سہیل و مقداد و جابر انصاری
 و جمع اہل بیت و دیگر امم امین کہ حضرت رسول علیہ السلام او را بہ پشت بشارت داده بود
 و در کتاب بخاری و مسلم کہ از عمدہ کتابہای ستیان است مذکور است کہ حضرت
 رسول علیہ السلام و جگر گوشہ او فاطمہ زہرا صلوات اللہ علیہا از بعض اعدا اند و کمین و
 آزرده بودند تا آنکہ از دار دنیا بدرالبقاء رحلت نمودند و حضرت رسول علیہ السلام فرمود

و این آیت را آورده که قوله تعالیٰ 'یا ایها الرسول بَلِّغْ مَا أُنْزِلَ إِلَيْكَ مِنْ رَبِّكَ وَإِنْ لَمْ تَفْعَلْ فَمَا بَلَّغْتَ رِسَالَتَهُ' یعنی ای محمد وصی را نصب کن و امانت علی را بقوم برسان اگر زسانی نبوت بر تو تسلیم نباشد بحکم این آیت کریمه که قوله تعالیٰ 'وَكُلُّ شَيْءٍ أَحْصَيْنَاهُ فِي إِمَامٍ مُبِينٍ' یعنی او مبین و دانا است از حال تمام عالم و عالمیان بنیاست بقول این آیت کریمه که قوله تعالیٰ 'یا ایها الذین آمنوا أطیعوا الله واطیعوا الرسول وأولی الأمر منکم' یعنی ای گروهندگان که ایمان آورده اید بخدا و رسول خدا طاعت دارید اولو الامر را یعنی شاه مردان مرفعی علی کرم الله وجهه را بحکم 'أولی الأمر منکم' یعنی اشارت بمولانا علی علیه السلام کرد انگاه بارهای اشتران را امر کرد تا فروذ آوردند و پالانهای اشتران را منبر ساختند و رسول علیه السلام دست علی لُذْکَرَه السجود و التَّسْبِیح را گرفت و بر منبر بر آورد و بنشاند و خطبه بلیغ آغاز کرد و گفت که آمَنْتُ بِاللَّهِ وَمَلَأْتُ كِتَابَهُ وَرُسُلِهِ وَالْيَوْمِ الْآخِرِ یعنی ایمان آوردم است بخدا و بملائکه او و بر رسولان او و بهیوم آخر و مردان را خواست و ذریت او را خواست و ایمان با او واجب است و باز گفت که قَالَ النَّبِيُّ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ 'مَنْ كُنْتُ مَوْلَاهُ وَعَلِيَ مَوْلَاهُ' یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که هر که را من مولایم علی مولای اوست بحکم لِتَحْمِلُوا لِيكُمُ اللَّهُ مَعْلُوم شد که علی ولی خداست و وصی مصطفی است و طاعت ایشان طاعت خداست بحکم خدای تعالیٰ أَطِيعُوا اللَّهَ وَأَطِيعُوا الرَّسُولَ وَأُولِيَ الْأَمْرِ مِنْكُمْ یعنی ای گروهندگان که ایمان آورده اید بخدا و رسول او طاعت دارید اولو الامر را یعنی مرفعی علی و ذریت او را

بیافرید پس هر که دعوی کند که من دوستدار رسول خدایم و وصی مصطفی علیه السلام را دوست ندارم و دروغ بر محمد علیه السلام گفته باشد، اگر کذاب لائمه بوده باشد و هر که دعوی کند که پیغمبر علیه السلام می شناسم و وصی او را نمی شناسم او بر روز آخر ایمان بر محمد علیه السلام نیاورده باشد و عاصی بوده باشد

پس رسول علیه السلام گفت که قال النبی علیه السلام، مَنْ أَحَبَّ عَلِيًّا وَآوَلَادَهُ فَقَدْ أَحَبَّنِي وَمَنْ أَحَبَّنِي فَقَدْ أَحَبَّ اللَّهَ یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که هر که محبت علی و اولادش بورزد بدستی که محبت مرا ورزیده باشد و هر که محبت مرا بورزد محبت خدای مرا ورزیده باشد

و باز گفت قال النبی علیه السلام مَنْ أَبْغَضَ عَلِيًّا وَآوَلَادَهُ فَقَدْ أَبْغَضَنِي وَمَنْ أَبْغَضَنِي فَقَدْ أَبْغَضَ اللَّهَ یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که هر که بغض کند با علی و اولادش بدستی که بغض کرده باشد با من و هر که بغض کند با من بدستی که بغض کرده باشد با خدای من

پس رسول علیه السلام گفتند بدانید که اهل بیت من امان اند پس دوستی ایشان دوستی من است و دشمنی ایشان دشمنی من است و بعضی از صحابه گفتند که یا رسول الله گو تا خلق گمراه ننهند پیغمبر علیه السلام گفتند که قوله تعالی هَلْ أَتَى عَلَى الْإِنْسَانِ حِينٌ مِّنَ الدَّهْرِ لَمْ يَكُنْ شَيْئًا مَّذْكُورًا و جای دیگر فرموده که قوله تعالی إِنَّمَا وَلِيُّكُمُ اللَّهُ وَرَسُولُهُ یعنی امیر المؤمنین علی ولی خداست و وصی مصطفی است چنانچه حضرت رسول علیه السلام از حج گذشته بودند و آن حج را حج اعلا گویند به مکانی رسیدند که آن را قیمة القدر گویند در شب قدر جبرئیل علیه السلام در رسید

این حدیث صحیح آمده این است که قال النبی علیہ السلام: «أَوَّلُ مَا خَلَقَ اللَّهُ تَعَالَى حُبَّ فَكُنْتُ عَلَى جَوَانِبِهَا أَنْ لَا إِلَهَ إِلَّا اللَّهُ وَأَنْ مُحَمَّدًا رَسُولُ اللَّهِ وَعَلِيًّا وَصِيَّ الْمُصْطَفَى وَخَلَقَ الْعَرْشَ فَكُنْتُ عَلَى أَرْكَانِهِ لَا إِلَهَ إِلَّا اللَّهُ وَمُحَمَّدٌ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ وَعَلِيٌّ وَجْهُهُ فَمَنْ زَعَمَ أَنْ يَجِبَ حُبُّ النَّبِيِّ وَلَا يَجِبُ حُبُّ الْوَصِيِّ فَقَدْ كَذَبَ وَمَنْ زَعَمَ أَنَّهُ يَعْرِفُ النَّبِيَّ وَلَا يَعْرِفُ الْوَصِيَّ فَقَدْ كَفَرَ ثُمَّ قَالَ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ: «أَلَا أَهْلَ بَيْتِي أَمَانٌ لَكُمْ تُحِبُّهُمْ كَحُبِّي فَمَنْ يُنْكِرْهُمْ إِنَّهُ يَضِلُّ فَسِئْلَ وَمَنْ أَهْلُ بَيْتِكَ يَا أَيُّهَا النَّبِيُّ قَالَ عَلِيٌّ وَسِبْطَائِي وَبَقِيَّةُ الْأَنْعَمَةِ مِنْ وَلَدِ حُسَيْنِ ابْنِ الْأَنْعَمَةِ الْمُحَصَّوِينَ مِنْ اللَّهِ إِنَّهُمْ أَهْلُ الْبَيْتِ الْخَوَالِدِينَ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ وَلِحُكْمِكَ لِحَقِّي وَدَمَكَ دَمِي» صدق رسول الله

بسیاری از صحاب گواهی دادند بر صحبت این حدیث که رسول علیه السلام گفت که
اول خدای تعالی حاجی بیا فرید و براو نوشت بعد از کلمه توحید که محمد علیه السلام رسول خدا
و علی علیه السلام وصی اوست و آنکه عرش آفرید و بر ارکان عرش قلم را امده که بنویس
قلم گفت چه بنویسم نداء از عالم غیب آمد که بنویس لا اله الا الله و محمد رسول الله

نوشت بعد از کلمه تهلیل که محمد رسول خداست و باز ندا آمد که بنویس قلم گفت چه بنویسم
نداء بنویس إِنَّ أَمِيرَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ عَلِيًّا وَلِيُّ اللَّهِ چون قلم نام قناری را شنود
از سبب شگافه شدنش گردید و سی هزار سال دیگر با سبب تا کلمه إِنَّ أَمِيرَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ

سوره النساء (۴)

سوره این ابیات این قدر غلط دارد که اصلاح کردن آنها و بوزن آوردن خیلی مشکل است

و خدای تعالی در کلام مجید خود خبر داده که قوله تعالی 'وَمُحَمَّدٌ إِلَّا رَسُولٌ
 قَدْ خَلَتْ مِنْ قَبْلِهِ الرُّسُلُ' یعنی هست محمد رسول الله اِذْهُمْ رُسُلُ الله
 یعنی محمد علیه السلام برگزیده من است؛ چنانچه فرموده که بِسْمِ اللهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ
 'بِسْمِ' و القرآن الحکیمه یعنی ای محمد تواز به افضلی و از جمله فرستاده منی اِنَّكَ
 لَمِنَ الْمُرْسَلِينَ عَلَى صِرَاطٍ مُسْتَقِيمٍ پس معلوم شد که محمد رسول الله را فرموده
 است که بر جمله خلقان که ایشان را بنمای راه راست تا در گمراهی و ضلالت نمانند چنانچه
 خدای تعالی فرموده که قوله تعالی 'وَمَا يَنْطِقُ عَنِ الْهَوَىٰ اِنْ هُوَ اِلَّا وَحْيٌ يُوحَىٰ
 یعنی پیغمبر علیه السلام گفتگو و سخن نمی کند از پیش خود بلکه گفتگو ای وی نیست مگر بوحی الهام
 و (آنچه) جبرئیل گوید پس ابن عباس رضی الله عنه از زبان دُرّ حضرت رسول
 علیه السلام این حدیث نقل نموده اند که قال النبی علیه السلام 'نَحْنُ مُعَاشِرُ
 الْاَنْبِيَاءِ لَا نُورِثُ اِلَّا الصَّدَقَةَ مَا تَرَكْنَاهُ' یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که ما جماعت پیغمبران
 نصب کرده خدای تعالی ایم کسی دیگر از ما میراث نبرد الاّ دَرِیْتِ ما که خدای تعالی در شان
 آنها فرموده که قوله تعالی 'ذَرِیَّةٌ بَعْضُهَا مِنْ بَعْضٍ وَاللهُ سَمِیعٌ عَلِیمٌ' یعنی ما
 گذاشتیم قرآن شریف و اهل بیت خود را در میان شما و آنچه ما گذاشتیم بصدق و یقین
 و درست از برای آنکه خلق گمراه نگردند تا بندگان را بادی و راه نماند باشند و بندگان را
 بر حاجت نباشد چنانچه خدای تعالی فرمود که قوله تعالی 'لَهُ مُلْكُ السَّمٰوٰتِ
 وَ الْاَرْضِ وَ هُوَ الْعَلِیُّ الْعَظِیْمُ' آنچه در آسمان هست و در زمین هست و هُوَ
 الْعَلِیُّ الْعَظِیْمُ یعنی اوست متعالی و بزرگ و بلند مرتبه چنانچه در قرآن باز فرموده که
 قوله تعالی 'اِنِّیْ جَاعِلُكَ لِلنَّاسِ اِمَامًا' یعنی گفت بدستی که گردانیدیم بر مؤمنان

آن نجات یابد از جهنم و سقر و هر که بر آن میل نکند و خلاف ورز و گمراه شود و به عذاب الیم گرفتار گردد و پیغمبر علیه السلام گفت که قال النبی علیه السلام 'إِنِّي تَارِكٌ فِیْکُمْ التَّغْلِبَینِ مَا ان تَمَسَّکْتُمْ بِهِمَا لَنْ تَضِلُّوا أَبَدًا کِتَابَ اللَّهِ وَعِثْرَتِیْ أَهْلَ الْبَیْتِ وَکَنْ یَفْتَرِقَا حَقٌّ یُورِثُ عَلَی الْحَوْضِ' یعنی میگذارم در میان شما امتان خود چیزی را که اگر بدان چیز بایستید و پیروی کنید هرگز گمراه نخواهید شد اول کتاب خدای تعالی دوم عترت من که اهل بیت من اند و این کتاب و عترت من از هم جدا نمی شوند تا آنکه در پیش من بسر حوض کوثر برسید

پس معلوم شد که گروه رستگار از هفتاد و سه گروه شیعه اسماعیل است و ائمه اسماعیلیه بدین دلیل که قوله تعالی 'إِنَّمَا یُرِیدُ اللَّهُ لِیُذْهِبَ عَنْکُمُ الرِّجْسَ أَهْلَ الْبَیْتِ وَیُطَهِّرَکُمْ تَطْهِیرًا' دلیل صدق ایشان است و حاصل خفیش این است که الله تعالی دوری سازد شما را ای اهل بیت از رجس و قبیح و پاک می گرداند شما را از تمام آلاش دنیا...

و امام از روز آنست که بگویند بوده است و امام می باید که اعلم الناس باشد و باجماع امت او را کار نباشد و حق تعالی فرموده که قوله تعالی 'لَا ینَالُ عَهْدِی الظَّالِمِینَ' ترجمه اش این است که عهد من که امامت است بظالمان نمی رسد دلیل دیگر آنکه قول حق تعالی که قوله تعالی 'وَلَا تَزْکُوا إِلَى الذِّینَ ظَلَمُوا' یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که میل بظالمان نکنید و دلیل دیگر آنکه قوله تعالی 'إِنْ جَاءَکُمْ فَاسِقٌ فَبَیِّنْهُ فَتَبَیَّنُوا' مضمون این آیت این است بقول فاسقان عمل نکنید و نباید کرد که گمراه گردید امامت بظالمان نمی رسد و میل بظالمان نباید کرد...

لَدُنْكَ وَلَيَّا يَرِثُنِي یعنی حاصل سخن آنکه زکریا دعا کرد بحق تعالی و گفت که اسی پروردگار من بده من ولی که از من میراث برد بجهت حال چنانچه موسی از شعیب و این محافظت با قرآن دارد که قوله تعالی 'وَتِلْكَ حُجَّتُنَا آتَيْنَاهَا إِبْرَاهِيمَ عَلَى قَوْمِهِ نَرْفَعُ دَرَجَاتٍ مَن نَّشَاءُ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ حَكِيمٌ عَلِيمٌ' علی آخرا هلالی صراط مستقیم علی چنانچه ثابت شد و پیغمبران از یکدیگر میراث برده اند و گواه اند بر یکدیگر ترجمه شعر ز دور آدیشان تا بدور عبد مناف بصلب پاک به بطن مطهر آورده پس ثابت شد که بتحقیق امان بحق آمده اسماعیلیه اند که ذریت آل پیغمبران اند و پیغمبر علیه السلام فرمود که قال النبی علیه السلام 'وَمَن مَاتَ وَلَمْ يَعْرِفْ إِمَامَ زَمَانِهِ فَقَدْ مَاتَ مِيتَةً جَاهِلِيَّةً وَالجَاهِلُ فِي النَّارِ' یعنی گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که هر که بمیرد و امام زمان خود را نداند مرگ او مرگ جاهلان باشد و جای جاهلان آتش دوزخ است و مرگ کسی که نبی پیغمبر او مرده باشد و خدای تعالی در قرآن شریف یاد کرده که قوله تعالی 'يَوْمَ نَدْعُو كُلَّ أُنَاسٍ بِإِمامِهِمْ' یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که می خوانم فردای قیامت هر گروهی با امام و پیشوای دور او و خدای تعالی در شان ذریت پیغمبر علیه السلام در کلام مجید در سوره نور خبر داده که قوله تعالی 'اللَّهُ نُورُ السَّمَوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضِ مِثْلُ نُورِهِ كِشْكُوتٌ فِيهَا مِصْبَاحٌ' یعنی خدای تعالی هدایت کننده و راه نماینده است بندگان خود را از ظلمت کفر و ضلالت و گمراهی بنور امام زمان و هدایت خود و منور است یعنی نور بخشاینده است آن خدائی که این همه عالم را از کتم عدم بجز وجود آورد و ظاهر گردانید و وجود آن ظاهر است بنطقه که خالق و صانع مکنون است پس نور خداوندی

والتسبیح و پیغمبر علیہ السلام فرموده که قال النبی علیہ السلام لَوْ خَلَّتِ الْأَرْضُ مِنْ إِمَامٍ سَاعَةً لَمَادَتْ بِأَهْلِهَا یعنی اگر خالی شود جهان از امام زمان یک لحظه و یک لمحه و یک ساعت و یک چشم زدن جهان و اهل جهان نیست و هلاک شوند و روزی صد هزار بار نظر بر آفرینش عالم می کند تا دنیا برقرار می ماند و پیغمبران در کلام خداوند خبر داده اند در تورات و انجیل و زبور و فرقان حضرت رسول علیہ السلام ترجمه شعر

زبور و توریت و انجیل و فرقان علی بود در میان چار دفتر
و هر پیغمبری که بوده اند اشارت بقائم وقت داده اند و پیغمبر علیہ السلام میگوید که امام همیشه در عالم پیداست و هرگز نیست که کسی را با او راه نیست و او را همیشه حجتی و داعی باشد که سبب معرفت بندگان باشند و حق را بحق شناسانند و امور را بر او باشند چنانچه خدای تعالی در کلام مجید خود یاد کرده که قوله تعالی معرفه الله معرفه امام زمانه گفت خدای تعالی که معرفت من معرفت امام زمان است که در هر زمان است تا معرفت مرا بخلق رساند و خلق را بر من حجت باشد و گویم آنکه فاطمی باشد لازم آنکه در هر عصری و عهدی باشد بحکم این آیت کریمه که قوله تعالی إِنْ أَلَّفَ اللَّهُ اصْطَفَى آدَمَ وَ نُوْحًا وَ آلَ اِبْرَاهِیْمَ وَ آلَ عِیْمَرَانَ علی العالمین ذَرِیَّةً بَعْضُهَا مِنْ بَعْضٍ وَ اللَّهُ سَمِیعٌ عَلِیْمٌ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که ذریت پیغمبران از نسل یکدیگرند چنانچه اینجا اثبات شد و جای دیگر فرموده که قوله تعالی وَ وَرِثَ سُلَیْمَانُ دَاوُدَ یعنی میراث برد سلیمان از داود از زکریا نقل نموده اند که گفت پیغمبر علیہ السلام که قوله تعالی قَبَّ لِي مِنْ

گفت پیغمبر علیه السلام که یا علی تو و شیعه تو رستگارانید یا علی تو و شیعه تو فزوده یا ننگانیه
بضمون این آیه کریمه قوله تعالى وَأَنَّ هَذَا صِرَاطِي مُسْتَقِيمًا فَاتَّبِعُوهُ وَ

بعد از گشت هفتاد و سه فرقه امتش زان یکی ناجی و دیگر با کند اسی
اتفاق اهل بیت مصطفی یک فرقه اند دیگران هفتاد و دو با اختلاف بی شمار
ناجی اکنون آل پیغمبر بود یا دیگران باز کن چشم خود و بشنو جوابی گوشدار
من گزفتم دامن آل پیغمبر زان میان هر که را خواهی تو نیز از دیگران برگریار

بقول این حدیث نبوی که قال التبی علیه السلام مَثَلُ ذَرِّيَّتِي كَمَثَلِ
سَفِينَةِ نُوحٍ مَنْ رَكِبَ فِيهَا نَجَا وَمَنْ تَخَلَّفَ عَنْهَا غَرِقَ یعنی گفت پیغمبر
علیه السلام که من و اهل بیت من همچون کشتی نوحیم هر که در کشتی نشست از طوفان
رست و هر که تخلف امر کرد غرق شد ترجمه

من که در کشتی نوحم با نبی و با ولی گوزین طوفان بگیرد آسمان آفت بار
رستگاران سگی کو بود با اصحاب کف من که با آل رسول چون نباشم رستگار
و امکلیات آن هفتاد و دو باطل را ظاهر کردیم و گویم بیان آن یک فرقه که ناجی اند و
آن گروهی اند که می گویند که امام همیشه باشد و عالم بی امام بقادر و امام همیشه بود و
هست و خواهد بود و بحکم قرآن شریف که قوله تعالى وَكُلُّ شَيْءٍ آخِضًا فِي
أَمْرِ مُبِينٍ ۖ و خود تصور نتوان کرد و عالم قابل تغیر و تبدل است بخود هست نتواند
بود پس باید که بقای عالم و آدم بجای باشد که این مسئله در باب امامت باید و
آن کس همیشه هست و بود و خواهد بود و آن شخص امام است لَذِكْرِهِ السَّجُودُ وَ

إِنَّمَا وَلِيُّكُمُ اللَّهُ پس معلوم شد که علی ولی خداست و وصی مصطفی است و عاتق
ایشان طاعت خدای تعالی است و خدای تعالی در قرآن مجید خبر داده که قوله تَجَاء
إِلَيَّ (وَلِيَّتُهُ) وَلِيُّ اللَّهِ فِي الْأَرْضِ وَأُفْوِضُ أَمْرِي وَلِإِلَيْهِ الْحُكْمُ فِي
الْعِبَادَةِ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که ولی گردانیدم علی ولی الله را ولی آفریدگار در زمین
و با او گذارستم همه کار خویش را و حاکم گردانیده ام در میان بندگان خود فی العبادۃ
یعنی عبادت او عبادت من است بحکم خدای تعالی که قوله تعالی مَعْرِفَةُ اللَّهِ
مَعْرِفَةُ إِمَامِ زَمَانِهِ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که معرفت من معرفت امام زمان است
و از حضرت امام حسن علیه السلام منقول است که خطبه خواند و گفت که من از اهل
بیتم و فرض گردانیده حق تعالی تحت مرا بر هر مسلمانی بحکم آیت قرآن شریف که قوله
تعالی وَعَلَى عَمِّيهِ وَسِبْطَيْهِ وَأَعْوَانِهِ وَأَنْصَارِهِ حُجَّةٌ إِلَى يَوْمِ الدِّينِ
یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که فرض گردانیدم محبت اهل بیت را بر جمیع مؤمنان و مؤمنات
و بر جمیع بندگان خود ای یوم الدین یعنی تا بروز آخر و چون پیغمبر علیه السلام میگوید
که قال النبی علیه السلام ستفرق أمتی من بعدی علی ثلاث و
سبعین فرقة فرقة واحدة ناجیه و الباقی هالک فی النار یعنی
پیغمبر علیه السلام می گوید که بعد از من اُمت من بر اکنده شود و بنفاد و سه فرقه یکی از آنها
ناجی و درستکار و باقی همه هالک و حضرت شاه مردان کرم الله وجهه و سلمان بود
و جابر انصاری و سہیل و مهاجر و انصار جمع حاضر بودند حضرت شاه مردان علیه السلام
گفتند که یا رسول الله ناجی کیانند و هالک کدام حضرت رسول فرمودند که یا علی
أنت و شیعتک هم المفلحون یا علی أنت و شیعتک هم الفاتحون یعنی

سلف این عبارت در قرآن موجود نیست فقط در آیه ۴۷ از سوره المؤمن (۴۵) لفظاً و اُفْوِضُ أَمْرِي پیدا است
سلف این عبارت در قرآن نیست ظاهراً حدیث باید باشد سلف این هم باز باید حدیث باشد

و یکی که نیست خود چون راه بدو برند

مولانا همه مؤمنان خود را از شر ابلیسین وقت نگاه داراد و همه مؤمنان را بنور معرفت خویش بنیاد گویا و شنوا گرداناد وَ هُوَ حَسْبُنَا وَ كَفَى مَوْلَانَا

وَالسَّلَام

باب سیم در بیان آنکه بجز این طائفه متحده که اسماعیلیان روزگار اند

بیچ فریقه دیگر ناجی نیستند

و در باب دوم پیداکردیم که باید مردم را که دینی داشتند باشند و آن دین پاک خاندان محمد و علی باشد بقول خدای تعالی که قوله تعالی (آمَنُوا) بِاللَّهِ وَ لَاتُكْفِيهِ وَ رُسُلِهِ وَ الْيَوْمَ الْآخِرُ یعنی ایمان آوردن است بخدا و فرشتگان و کتابهای او و رسولان او و پیغم آخر و یوم آخر مولانا علی را خواست و فرزند این او و ذریه اویند و ایمان با او واجب است و باز گفت که قوله تعالی یا أَهْلَ الْاِذْنِ آمَنُوا أَطِيعُوا اللَّهَ وَ أَطِيعُوا الرَّسُولَ وَ أُولِيَ الْأَمْرِ مِنْكُمْ یعنی ای گروه گانی که ایمان آورده اید بخدا و رسول اطاعت دارید اولوالامر را یعنی علی مرتضی کرم الله وجهه را بحکم خدای تعالی که قوله تعالی إِنَّمَا وَلِيُّكُمُ اللَّهُ وَ رَسُولُهُ وَ الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا الَّذِينَ يَقِيمُونَ الصَّلَاةَ وَ يُؤْتُونَ الزَّكَاةَ وَ هُمْ رَاكِعُونَ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که ولی گردانیدم علی ولی الله را بر حبیب لبیب قریب خود گذاشتم نماز و روزه و حج و صیام و تمام امورات دنیا و عقبی را و هر که بدوستی علی ولی الله نماز و روزه و حج و صیام کند قبول است بدرگاه من که خدایم و هر که بی دوستی علی و اولادش اگر از مشرق عالم تا مغرب عالم طاعت و عبادت کند قبول نیست بدرگاه من که خدایم بحکم

در جبل و گراپی بماند و معرفت خدا محفل باشد و کون حق برافند نعوذ بالله از این اعتقاد و انیر خدای تعالی چنین فرموده که قوله تعالی یَوْمَ نَدْعُو كُلَّ اُنَاسٍ بِاِمَامِهِمْ یعنی گفت خدای تعالی که می خوانم فردای قیامت هر گروهی را با امام و پیشوای دُور او و نیز حدیث پنجم علیه السلام بر این وارد است که قال النبی علیه السلام لَوُ خَلَّتِ الْاَرْضُ مِنْ اِمَامٍ سَاعَةً لَمَادَتْ بِاَهْلِهَا یعنی گفت پنجم علیه السلام که اگر خالی شود زمین از امام زمان یک ساعت و یک لحظه و یک لمحّه جهان اهل جهان نیست و هلاک شوند و تفصیل آنها در باب امامت بیاید

و گروهی دیگر گفتند این امامت تا بحسن عسکری رسید و از او بمحمد پسر او که مهدی موعود است که در آخر الزمان بیاید و ازین پانصد سال شد بیشتر که زنده است و در غاری یا جایی رفته است و زود بیرون آید و بی محالات در بیرون آمدن او بگویند و تعیین وقت کنند و گویند که این شرط داشته باشد و ما گوئیم اولاً اگر امامت هر وقت که صلاح داند و هر طریقی که خواهد بیرون آید شمار تعیین و شرط وقت بجهت کار آید و نیز مردم قائل دانند که کسی این مقدار سال نزید و در غار این همه مدت پنهان نشود بلکه ایشان استدلال بقصّه نوح کنند که او هزار سال بیش یا کم بزیست چنانچه در قرآن است قوله تعالی فَلَمِثَّ فِیهِمْ اَلْفَ سَنَةٍ اِلَّا خَمْسِینَ عَامًا و قصّه اصحاب کحف گویم این همه را تأویل است و در تأویلات باید دید تیر لو اگر امام بودی بستی که کسی با او راه بردندی و آله همان تعطیل لازم آید که همه خلق جهان بی معرفت باشند ایشان را بر خدای تجت نباشد و این چنین امام سبب عذاب خلق باشد و امام باید که سبب رحمت عالم باشد و همه کس را معلوم است که هیچ کس راه با او نبرده است

همه را بفریاد رسا: و از غولان که امانِ باطل اند خلاصی داد
 و گروهی دیگر گفتند که ما شیعه ایم و پیروی مصطفی و مرتضی و اولاد ایشان می کنیم
 الحق نیکو قومی و شایسته طریقی پرسیدم که چگونه پیروی می کنید گفتند که مادر عمید
 امامت مولانا علی ایستاده ایم و گمان آن است که او باز آید و گروهی دیگر گفتند که ما
 امام زید سپر مولانا علی ایستاده ایم و گروهی دیگر گفتند که ما امام محمد ابن حنفیه
 ایستاده ایم که او باز آید و عجب است با وجود آنکه نه نقص و نه شرط امامت در ایشان
 موجود بود چیزی را در میان آوردند و گویند که طبع سلیم از آن حیران ماند و خلافت مغضول
 با وجود آنکه نه نقص و نه شرط و نه علم و نه معرفت را شرط است چنانچه خدای تعالی در
 کلام محمد خود ذکر کرده است که قَوْلُهُ تَعَالَى مَعْرِفَةُ اللَّهِ مَعْرِفَةُ إِمَامِهِ
 الزَّمان یعنی گفت معرفت خدای تعالی معرفت امام زمان است که در هر زمانی باشد
 تا معرفت خدا را با خلق خدا سازند تا خلق را بر خدای تعالی حجت باشد
 تا خروج و شجاعت و تقوی و رأی و قیاس و اجماع امت خلافت را بشرط نیست
 و گوئیم آنکه فاطمی باشد لازم است که در عهدی و عصری باشد و گویند لازم نیست که
 در عهدی باشد و در یک زمان تواند بود که ده امام و بیشتر باشند اگر چه فساد این سبب
 بسیار ظاهر است اما در سخنان گذشته و بعضی مقدمات رفته که دلیل واضح است بر
 بطلان این مذہب و در باب امامت نیز خواهد آمد

و گروهی دیگر گفتند که ما بولانا جعفر ایستاده ایم و او باز خواهد آمد و ما می گوئیم
 که معنی امامت پیشوائی است و آنکه امت و گروه را بمعرفت حقیقی رساند و در زمانی
 پیشوائی باید بود که مردم را بمعرفت خدا و خدائی برساند و الا در آن زمان که مردم اهل عالم

قرآن را برای قیاس خود کرد کافر گردد و هم شما نقل می کنید که مَنْ كَذَّبَ عَلَىٰ
مَتَعِمَّةً فَلْيَتَّبِعْ مَقْعَدَهُ فِي النَّارِ یعنی هر که دروغ بر من بگوید که با کون خود واغ میفشد در آتش...

تذیل و تاول قرآن کسی را نباشد الا نبی و وصی ایشان در این معنی کسی
نمی تواند بود الا که نزدیک ترین باشد با ایشان و آن پیغمبر از مولانا علی لَدِکَرِهِ السَّجْدُ
و التَّسْبِیحُ نبود و هر که تاول سخن گفت مثل ابن عباس و دیگران از او شنیده باشند
و سخنان او در طریقت تاول مشهور تر از آن است که بذكر حاجت افتد و احادیث پیغمبر
در این باب بسیار است مثل آنکه پیغمبر می گوید که قَالَ النَّبِيُّ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ اَنَا
مَدِينَةُ الْعِلْمِ وَعَلَيَّ بَابُهَا وَاَنْتَ مَنِيْ بِمَنْزِلَةِ هَارُونَ مِنْ مُوسَى
وَلِحُكْمِكَ لِحُكْمِي وَدَمْعُكَ دَمِي

و چون از احوال قائم و صاحب تاول می پرسند می گویند خَاصُّ النُّعْلِ و
حدیث غدیر خم و آنی که قوله تعالی اطیعوا الله و اطیعوا الرسول و اولی
الامر مِنْكُمْ و آنکه از پیغمبر پرسیدند که اولو الامر تو کیست اشارت بمولانا علی کرد و
گفت که اِنَّمَا وَلِيُّكُمُ اللَّهُ وَرَسُولُهُ و آنکه از پیغمبر پرسیدند که ایمان چیست گفت
اٰمَنْتُ بِاللّٰهِ وَمَلَائِكَتِهِ وَكُتُبِهِ وَرُسُلِهِ وَالْيَوْمِ الْاٰخِرِ و یوم آخر مولانا علیه
چیزی که صاحب تذیل یوم اول است و وصی که صاحب تاول است یوم آخر پس ایمان
بر او واجب است آوردند که مثال این آیات و حدیث بسیار است

و اما این مقدمات معقول و منقول روشن کردیم که هر که باطل و ناحق دعوی
امامت و پیشوائی کند او بروز آخر ایمان ندارد و نداشته باشد کافر و مرتد باشد مولانا

حقیقت دارند و از ظاهراً آن بیش فائده نباشد مطلق دیگر از فرمایش دارند تا
 نسخ آن شریعت پیشین کند و مردم را اولاً دعوت بحقیقت کند چون قبول دعوت
 نکنند او مثال دیگر از پیش ایشان ندوید و بنذر نجر دیگر متقیه کند چه اگر مثل آن
 کسانی که از ظاهراً بحقیقت نرسند مثل سوریست که بگاه و برگ مائل باشند و بر
 نرسند و اگر سوری سرکش باشد او را به بند و زنجیر حاجت افتد همچنانکه بعد از خود وی
 قائم کند در این دور هفت هزار سال که از دوره اعظم که سیصد و شصت هزار سال
 است صد و هفتاد هزار سال کسری گذشته بود و در آخرین دوره قیامت قیامت
 که ظاهراً خواست شدش ناطق بودند اول ایشان آدم سندی بی دویم نوح سیم
 ابراهیم چهارم موسی پنجم عیسی ششم محمد مصطفی صلی الله علیه و سلم و دین او نسخ
 همه ادیان کرد چه کشف تمام قیامت قیامت در هزاره آخر که دوره او بود واقع شد
 و او فرمود که سَتَقَرُّقُ اُمَّتِي یعنی اُمّت من بعد از من پراکنده شوند بهفتاد و سه
 فرقیقه بهفتاد و دو ملک و گمراهند و یکی ناجی و رستگار و هر گروهی دعوی کردند که
 ناجی مایم از هر کسی دلیل ختم و گروهی گفتند که ما اهل سنت و جماعتیم و پیروی
 قرآن و حدیث میکنیم و اجماع است و قیاس می کنیم گفتیم این معنی که شاعر قرآن
 و حدیث فهم می کنسد از مصطفی شنیده اید یا از کسی که از مصطفی شنیده باشد
 گفتند نه گفتیم پس خدای را از این کلام چون دانستید گفتند پیروی لغت کردیم
 گفتیم بسیاری کلام هست که از روی لغت معانی بسیار دارد و کدام را اعتبار کردید
 گفتند اجتهاد کردیم آنچه رأی و قیاس ما قبول کرد بر آن رفیقیم گفتیم همه شایان
 حدیث نقل می کنسد که مَنْ قَسَرَ الْقُرْآنَ بِوَأْيِهِ فَقَدْ كَفَرَ یعنی هر که تفسیر

هیچ دین و پیغمبری کنند و بطلب نمی‌کشند؛ و قسم دیگر اهل ادیان اند؛ ظاهراً
 چه اگر احتیاج بنجاشناسی و پیغمبری و کسی نباشد که عقل او کمال از عقول اهل
 آن زمان باشد پس باید که هر کسی بعقل خود مشغول باشد در معرفت باری تعالی؛ و
 ظاهراًست که تفاوت در عقل مردم بسیار است؛ و بعضی از عقول بر بعضی فزون آید؛
 اگر آن عقل ناقص همان یابد که عقل کامل پس ناقص ناقص نباشد و کاملی کامل
 نباشد؛ و نمودیم بسیاری در مراتب عقول ثابت است؛ پس ناقص را تابع آن
 کامل باید بودن تا متابعت او بحال رسد؛ و باید که این منتهی شود بعقلی که هیچ عقلی
 فوق او نباشد و او بی واسطه تأیید از باری تعالی یابد و او حجت حق باشد در هر زمانی
 چه اگر عقول بسیار است که بی واسطه تأیید یا بنده همان اختلاف باقی باشد؛ و در هر
 زمانی ادیان مختلف پیدا شود و موجب حیرت عقول گردد که تابع کدام دین شود پس
 لازم آید که در هر زمانی دینی باشد و آن دین یکی باشد و حجت باشد و آن یکی باشد
 اندیم تقسیم دومیم که اهل ادیان اند؛ گویم در هر هزاره بیشتر یا کمتر ناطقی بفرمایند تا
 اهل عالم را اول دعوت بحقیقت کنند؛ چون آن دعوت او را قبول نکنند یا بانه
 فهم ایشان نرسد یا انکار و استکباری که در قرآن خداوندی عبارت از آنست
 ایشان را در یابد آن ناطق را بفرمایند تا امثال ایشان نهند و پرده کبر یا وعظمت
 فرو گذارد و سلسل و اغلال شریعت در گردن ایشان نهد؛ و وصی را بعد از
 خود برپای کند که صاحب تأویل آن شریعت باشد؛ و آن ناطق و وصی را
 در تنزیل و تأویل اشارت با امام وقت خداوند پرتده هزار عالم حق ذکره باشد؛ باز
 چون آن شریعت و آن طریقت در میان مردم بسیار بماند و مردم آن را بجای

کسی که قاسمِ ارزاقِ بندگان باشد بُود بحالِ همه بندگانِ خود بینا
و بپایوسی بدیع الحق و الدنیا و الدین مولانا مستنصر بالله علیه السَّلوات و السَّلَام
رسیدم و منظور نظر بزرگوار او شدم و بر حمت او بر رسیدم آفتابِ تافت بر جانم
از اوجِ غرغش و همچون ذره بودم در هوای خویشتن چون نظرِ مَحمت بر این بنده
ضعیف روز بروز تافت و دولت مساعد گشت و این بنده را نوازش نمود و دعای
اللَّهُ عَاتِ خراسان نمودم چندگاه در آستانِ بوسی صاحبِ کاف و نون بودم
روزی حجتان و داعیان را طلب نمود و بزبانِ مبارکِ خود غایت فرمودند که ای
بابا سیدنا که را به بدخشان حواله سازم با با سیدنا اشارت باین فقیر کردند
حضرت صاحبِ جَل جلاله و عَم نواله چون کُت نظر برویم افکند دلم پر نور گشت و محو
شدم غایت کرد و گفت ای سیدنا صر ترا حجت بدخشان کردم و خدا یا رب تو
باد و من زمین عبودیت بر سیده ارشاد و مگر فتم و بجز بجز شدم و از آنجا به بدخشان
شدم و کوه را اشارت کردم با استقبال آمد غایت بی نهایت او بود و او خود

باب دوم در ابطال مذاهب هفتاد و دو فرقه

اهل عالم منقسم است، اول منقسم است بر دو قسمت یکی بی دینان یعنی پیروی

احوال او شدم و نظر بقالات او داشتم، الحق سخن چند فرمودند که نشان از آپ
زندگانی و خبر از حیات جاودانی میداد، دلم گفت چون سر رشته را یافتی گذار و
قدم در راه طلب نه و دست در دامن اقبال اوزن بیت
دست مدار از کمر مقبلان سرکش از صحبت صاحب دلان
چون از آن مجلس برخاستم دامن او را گرفتم و سر از قدمش برنداشتم، گفتم
ای مرد فرشته خوی نام تو چیست عادت تو چیست و روش تو چیست، بیمارم
و دل افکارم و محتاج علاجم، در خود رادوامی جویم و بیماریم عجب است نه در دوسر
و نه پنج و نه تب چاره ندارم بر زمین کز آسمان آمده است، چون نشان بیماری
بر چهره زردم بدید بر در دامن دو بخشید و گفت دل خوش دار که ما طبیبان اکسیریم و
از کس فردمی خواهیم که ما آب روانیم نه طعام پلیدیم، اما بگو که بیماری تو از چیست
گفتم بیماری من از آن است که چون خدا یکیت و پیغمبر یکی باشد پس آن امامان
دیگر و دین ایشان باطل و ناحق باشد، گفتم بی چنینی است و امام حق و دین
حق و حجت حق یکیت و کلام حق یکی و نام من بابا سیدناست و ما را در این جزیره
نصب کرده اند تا سرگشتگان بادی ضلالت را بدر آوریم و بعرفت امام وقت قبل
ذکره و حجت اعظم او بنیاد شوکانیم و همه را در دار آخرت بهشت باقی برسانیم
و چون مدتی در خدمت او بودم با سعادت مساعد شد و باستان بوسی
خداوند او را عالم حجت اعظم خدای تعالی پروردگار عالم و عالمیان آنکه خدای عالمیان
در شان او خبر داده که أَوَّلَ مَا خَلَقَ اللَّهُ نُورَهُ یعنی اول چیزی که آفریدیم
نور مصطفی بود و باز خبر داده که أَوَّلَ مَا خَلَقَ اللَّهُ الْقَلَمَ و گاه ابن بیان

وان امیر المؤمنین علیاً ولی الله و فاطمة بنت رسول الله بدان توبه او پذیرفت پس دانسته شد که اینها همه بتعلیم است و از آن قیاس آنکه از حکایت ابلیس لعنه الله می آید خَلَقْتَنِي مِنْ نَارٍ وَ خَلَقْتَهُ مِنْ طِينٍ چون او را امر سجده آدم کرد و او از آن سر باز کشید و قیاس کرد و گفت که من از جنس آتشم و او از جنس خاک و جوهر آتش شریف تر است از خاک و شریف تابع غیر شریف نشود اَوَّلَ مَنْ قَاسَ ابْلِيسُ لَعْنَهُ اللهُ وَ كَفَّتْ سَجْدَهُ مَرْدَايَ رَاسَتٍ و این سبب لعنت ابدی او شد قوله تعالى فَ اخْرِجْ مِنْهَا فَإِنَّكَ رَاجِعٌ وَإِنَّ عَلَيْكَ لَعْنَتِي إِلَى يَوْمِ الدِّينِ

باز آدمیم بر سر حکایت دانسته شد که هیچ ندانسته ایم اما چون عجز و اضطراب درجه بی نهایتی انجامید که دایم بر زبان این رفیق و در دل و جان این معنی گذشتی که اَلَمْ نَجْعِبُ الْمُسْطَرَّ إِذَا دَعَاهُ أَتَابَ غَايَتِ مَرَحَمَتِ حضرت مولانا لِيَذْكُرَهُ الشُّجُودُ وَ التَّسْبِيحُ از آن قیاس کرمیت بآفت و این ذره سرگشته را در بهلی محبت خود دریافت روزی در مجلس حاضر بودم و در احوال یکتان ناظر کلمه چند در معرفت بر زبان رفیق و هرس از راه و روش خود سخن بر اندازده فهم خود گفتندی مرا آه سر و از جان بکند و اشک گرم بر رخام فرو دید که ای اینها چه آهین سر فرو می گویند و در پی چه می یابند و مطلوب حقیقی را چرانی جویند تا کی از پی خیال خود دروند و حکم خدای تعالی نگرند و حکم و کُلُّ شَيْءٍ أَحْصَيْنَاهُ فی اِمَامِ مُبِينٍ و بطلب او بر تخمیزند عقل از این غصه سرگردان و من حیران و صبرم منهدم که ناگاه شخصی درآمد و در میان این طائفه نشست هر چند بصورت معلوم نبود اما صورت او خبر از سیرت میداد چون نظم بر او افتاد بتقصص

له آیه ۱۱ از سوره الاعراف (۷) له آیه ۷۸ و ۷۹ از سوره ص (۳۸) له آیه ۳۶ از سوره النمل (۲۷)

له آیه ۱۱ از سوره یس (۳۶)

غیر آن دیگر است و خدا یان بسیار پیدا شوند و فساد این ظاهر تر از آن است که بشر حاجت داشته باشد

بنابر این مقدمات واجب شد که همه عقل در معرفت باری تعالی تابع عقلی باشد که اکمل از همه عقول باشد و مؤید باشد از طرف باری تعالی و بی واسطه او هیچ عقل بمعرفت باری تعالی نرسد و او عقل کل باشد و کل عقول در تحت تصرف او باشند و او حجت خدای تعالی باشد و بر خلق واجب است که او را بدانند و او در هر زمانی باشد اگر در بعضی زمان نباشد حجت خدای تعالی از خلق گنجینه باشد و همان رای و قیاس در میان افتد و هیچ کس راه با خدای تعالی بحقیقت نبرد و در گمراهی و ضلالت بمانند

و در قصه آدم و حوا و ابلیس علیه اللغته می آید که قوله تعالی وَعَلَّمَ آدَمَ الْأَسْمَاءَ كُلَّهَا ثُمَّ عَرَضَهُمْ عَلَى الْمَلَائِكَةِ وَگفتند ملائکه که لَا عَلِيمَ لَنَا إِلَّا مَا عَلَّمْتَنَا و تعلیم کردن آدم ملائکه را که أَنْبَتْهُمْ بِأَسْمَاءِ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ وَ قَصَّهُ که وَ إِذْ قُلْنَا لِلْمَلَائِكَةِ اسْجُدُوا لِآدَمَ فَسَجَدُوا إِلَّا إِبْلِيسَ و نور ربان حق سبحانه و تعالی را که قوله تعالی كَانَ مِنَ الْجِنِّ فَفَسَقَ عَنْ أَمْرِ رَبِّهِ پس در اصل او بوده است از جن چرا که در امر خویش سرکشی کرد و به نور سجده نکرد و رانده ازلی و ابدی شد پس همان نور بحکم خدای تعالی در عالم نیست و آدم گناه کرد و باز گشت بسوی خدای تعالی رَبَّنَا ظَلَمْنَا أَنْفُسَنَا كُفْتُ تَوْبَهُ اَوْ رَحْمَتِ تَعَالَى پذیرفت و بعد از گناه کردن آدم تعلیم کردن حق سبحانه و تعالی مراد از سه کلمه داد که در طاق عرش نوشته بودند که لَا إِلَهَ إِلَّا اللَّهُ و مُحَمَّدٌ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ

شد ولی افسوس که تصحیح کردن این نسخه بعد از چاپ شدن صورت مکان نداشت؛
 ولیکن خوش بختانه پس از مقابلۀ این دو نسخه معلوم شد که اوراقی که مفقود
 شده ابدًا اہمیتی ندارند زیرا کہ در آن اوراق غیر از لعنت اعدای حضرت مولا
 وائمہ اطہار چیز دیگر مندرج نبود؛ و شرح حال آن اشخاص در کتابهای قدیم
 و جدید بسیار است و تکرار آنها باعث طلال می شود -

می‌شمارند و خیلی محترم می‌دارند هر کس بمیل خودش کم و زیاد کند، پس
چرا این قبیل اتفاقات در کتابهای دیگر نیافتاده است، مثلاً نسخه
کتاب و جردین بنظر اقم این سطور رسیده است که در سنه ۹۲۹ هجری
یعنی قریب ۶۲۵ سال قبل از این نوشته شده بود ابدًا مخایرتی
بانسخ حالیه ندارد، پس چرا در این مدت کسی پیدا نشد که آن را بنحیال
خود تغییر دهد

و از مضمون این کتاب معلوم می‌شود که مصنفش از اخبار و کتب امامیه
اشنا عشریه اطلاع کاملی داشته ولیکن ذکر کتب قدیم اسماعیلیه را ابدًا
نمی‌کند، و در کتابهای حضرت ابو معین ناصر خسر و مثل زاد المسافرین معلوم
می‌شود که جناب ایشان از کتابهای اسماعیلی خبر و آفری داشته و از
کتب اشنا عشریه کمتر ذکر فرمودند، و از این همه حالات مفهوم می‌شود که
تصنیف این کتاب در زمانی بوده که تعلیم مذهب اشنا عشری کاملاً منتشر
شده بود یعنی در زمان پادشاهان صفویه

و در طبع این کتاب مشکلات بسیار برخوردیم چونکه در شهر ممبئی چند نسخه
آن در دست بعض اشخاص بود ولیکن از دادن آن خود داری می‌گردند فقط
آقای مکھی میتر از برای خدمت باوین و جماعت کوتاهی نکردند و نسخه
خودشان را که در سنه ۱۲۱۹ نوشته شده برای استنساخ دادند و اگر چه نسخه
مذکور خوب است لیکن در بعض جاها بواسطه رطوبت و کرم ضائع شده و بعض
اوراق آن افتاده و بعد از آنکه این کتاب بچاپ رسید نسخه دیگر که ملی پیدا

حضرت ناصر خسرو نیست؛ و سبب این همه مغلطه و اشتباه کاری شاید آن بوده که شخصی فاضلی در اوائل عهد سلطین صفویه مندرجات این کتاب را از کتابهای قدیم طائفه اسماعیلیه انتخاب و جمع آوری نموده و از برای ازدیاد احترام و اعتبار کتاب خودش آن را باسم حضرت ناصر خسرو اشتہار داده و یا آنکه شخصی این کتاب را در عهد امامت حضرت مولانا مستنصر بالله ثانی که حضرتش یکی از ائمہ نزاریه بودند و زمان امامتشان از ۸۶۹ تا ۸۸۱ هجری بوده و خودش آن مصنف کتاب پندیات جوان مردی می باشند تألیف و تصنیف نموده و اسم خود را ذکر نکرده بعد بر وراثت مردمان ساده چنین تصور نمودند که این کتاب در زمان حضرت مولانا مستنصر بالله اول تألیف شده و چون حضرت ناصر خسرو در مصر بخدمت مولانا مشرف شد ندقیاساً نسبت تألیف این کتاب را بایشان داده اند

و بعضی از دوستان میگویند که اصل این کتاب از حضرت ناصر خسرو است ولیکن بعضی مریدان در موقع استقرا و استسناخ کم و زیاد کردند و از مضامین کتابهای دیگر مخلوط نمودند و این مطلب امکان ندارد؛ راقم این سطور پنج نسخه کتاب هفت باب را ملاحظه نموده که هر کدام در یک ولایتی و یک زمانی نوشته شده بود؛ ولیکن مضمون و معنی عبارات همه آنها بکلی موافق یکدیگر بود حتی آنکه اگر غلطی یا سهوی در یکی از نسخها رفته بود در نسخ دیگر هم پیدا بود و ممکن نیست که موافقت چندین نسخه بعد از کم و زیاد کردن اشخاص مختلف در وجود آید و این خلاف عقل و خلاف عادت است که کتابی را که آن را کلام پیر

علیه السلام بود و این یقیناً خیالی است و بعد از این نوشته است که جناب ایشان با معیت حضرت بابا سیدنا یعنی حسن ابن صباح بخدمت مولانا مستنصر بالله رسید و بعضی مذاکرات نموده اند و ضمناً حضرت حسن بن صباح را جد خودش خطاب می کند و این مسئله بکلی بی اصل و خالی از حقیقت است زیرا که حضرت ناصر خسرو در کتابهای معتبر خود ذکر می کند که مشارالیه در تاریخ هفتم ماه صفر ۴۳۹ هجری وارد مصر شده و از تواریخ معتبره مستفاد می شود که حضرت حسن بن صباح در ۴۷۰ هجری یعنی سی و یک سال بعد از ورود ناصر خسرو بمصر رسیده و معاندین ایشان مانع شده نگذاشتند که بخدمت حضرت مولانا مستنصر بالله برسد پس از مدتی از عداوت ایشان کار بجائی رسید که مجبور شدند مصر را ترک نموده مهاجرت اختیار کردند پس بخوبی معلوم می شود که ایشان با هم بمصر وارد نشده و مذاکرات با مولانا مستنصر بالله هم بکلی بی اصل است و معلوم است که تولد حضرت ناصر خسرو در ۳۹۴ هجری بوده و حضرت حسن بن صباح تقریباً در ۴۵۰ هجری متولد شده اند و پنجاه و شش سال کوچک تر از حضرت ناصر خسرو بوده اند پس چگونه ممکن است که جدا ایشان باشند پس این همه یقیناً باطل و افسانه محض است و از وضع عبارات این کتاب معلوم می شود که آن از عبارات اصطلاحات دیوان اشعار و سفرنامه و وجدین و زاد المسافرین تفاوت کلی دارد و عبارتش جدید است بنا بر این مقدمات هیچ شکلی باقی نمی ماند که کتاب هفت باب از تصنیفات

نمی تواند بود؛ سبب آن است که در ضمن کتاب هفت باب اسم بسیار کتابها
و اشخاص مذکور است که چند صد سال بعد از وفات ناصر خسرو و بطور رسید مثلاً
ذکر حضرت مولانا حسن علی ذکریه السلام و دعوت قیامت القیامات و غیره،
و اسمای کتب مشهوره چندین جا ذکر شده مثل کتاب روضه القلیم که از تصنیف
خواجہ نصیر الدین طوسی علیه الرحمۃ است که در سده شش صد و پنجاه کمابیش
نوشته شد و همچنین کتاب عمده الطالب فی انساب آل علی ابن ابی طالب که
تقریباً در سده هجری تصنیف شده و کتاب لطائف اللطائف از تصنیفات
علی ابن حسین واعظ کاشفی که بعد از ۹۳۳ هجری تصنیف شده و غیر هم و در یک
جائی خود مصنف می گوید که از زمان غیبت امام دوازدهم فرقه امامیه شاعریه
یعنی از سده هجری تا زمان خودش از پانصد سال بیشتر گذشت و از اینجا معلوم
می شود که خودش تقریباً در سده یادیرتر بوده و غیر ازین دلائل بسیار است
که بدقت در مقدمه انگلیزی ذکر شد

و در باب اول شرح حال حضرت ناصر خسرو بطوری ذکر نموده است که گویا
نویسنده خود ناصر خسرو بوده ولی بنظر حقیر کلمه خیالی و بی اصل است و بعضی
عبارتش ظاهراً از همان کتاب نقل کرده است که مصنف تذکره آشکده آذر
اشاره بآن نموده و آن عاری از حقیقت افسانه محض است بطوری که خود حضرت
ناصر خسرو در دیوان اشعار و سفرنامه خویش ذکر می کند جناب ایشان سید نبوده
و از خراسان از شهر قبادیان در خوالی بلخ بوده ولیکن اینجا در باب اول مذکور است
که او اهل دیلم و حیدرآباد بود و از اولاد حضرت موسی کاظم ابن امام جعفر صادق

پوشیده نماند که این کتاب مستطاب مثنی به هفت باب مجموعه است مفید که
مردان طائفة ناجیه اسماعیلیه نزاریه آن را نیز بکلام پیر موسوم می کنند و آن را یکی
از مصنفات حضرت حجت خراسان و بدیشان ابو معین ناصر خسر و لمخی می شمارند و
طالبان راه دین و مردان حق الیقین این کتاب را در کمال احترام و اعتبار دارند

تفضل حضرت ذوالجلال و توجه ارباب کمال بر یور طبع رسیده تا کافه انام از
خواص عوام مستفید و مستفیض شوند

اما راقم این سطور بعرض صاحبان تمیز و شعور می رساند که اگر چه نسبت این
رساله به حضرت ناصر خسر و داده اند و در باب اول شرح حال آن حضرت بیان
شده ولیکن اگر بنظر تحقیق و تعمق ملاحظه کنیم از مضمون این کتاب معلوم و معین
می شود که حضرت ناصر خسر و لمخی یعنی آن شخصی که بمصر مسافرت نمود و بحجت خراسان
ملقب شد و دیوان اشعار مشهور و کتابها مثل توجه دین و زاد المسافرین و سفرنامه و روشنائی نامه و غیر هم از تصانیف جناب معظم له است و تقریباً
